In the Third district court, Judge Michael J. Turano continued the case of George W. Maine, of Norwich, charged with deserting his wife and four children, for sentence for a period of one month. He told the young man to get the idea out of his head that it was necessary for his wife to follow him all over the country in order that he might make a home for her. The bond of $500 was continued to be forfeited if he did not make his appearance in court one week from that time. Maine's grandfather, who had been bondsman, said that he had had enough of the case and wanted him to get someone else. Later in the day a bondsman was procured when Elmer Burdick of Rockville furnished surety. Maine's troubles did not cease here for he was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell, on complaint of Attorney John J. Bunn, who seeks to recover for counsel fees when he appeared as attorney for him. The same bondsman applied the $200 surety required in this case.

After a recess, the case of Thomas E. Brown complainant, versus Barney Fain was taken up. Jitney man Fain was driving Fire Chief Egger to a Pierce street fire November 21, 1923. After crossing the river bridge and as he was about to turn up High street a vehicle just ahead of him caused him to pass to the left of the traffic sign with the result that his arrest followed.

Michael J. Curtin, patrolman on duty in the square testified to Fain's passing to the left of the traffic sign. Barney Fain testified that he passed to the left of the traffic sign on the date in question, sounding his horn as he crossed the bridge, also as he went up High street. Near the residence of Dr. Michael H. Scanlon he said that a sewage excavation caused him to come almost to a complete stop to enable an automobile coming towards him to pass.

Town Solicitor Ferguson said that Fain's act was a violation of the town ordinance, it was a menace to anyone who might happen to be in the way and that even if the fire chief had directed him to violate the traffic ordinance, it constituted no defence.

Judge Turano asked if it was necessary for the hook and ladder truck to pass to the left of the traffic sign and said that he couldn't see any deliberate attempt to violate the law. In Providence he said he had frequently seen fire apparatus which did not obey traffic directions. Although in this case there might be a technical violation, nevertheless, he considered this an emergency case and declared Mr. Fain discharged.

In the case of Edwin J. Reguci vs Gaetano Grispino, Mr. Reguci on the stand claimed a bill for $28.32 for plumbing work at the defendant's residence. He was given a decision for his bill and costs.

Edward Holt of Providence was a week-end visitor in Westerly.

Joseph S. Grilis returned to town Sunday afternon from Providence.

William P. Dodge returned to Providence Sunday night after being the guest of his father, E. M. Dodge in Westerly over the week, end.

Miss Hilda K. Young and Miss Marabel Palmer were among Sunday afternoon visitors in Providence who attended the violin recital of Fritz Kreisler at the Albee theatre.

Miss Rachel E. Barber and Miss Emily Barber were among those who attended the Kreisler violin recital in Providence.

The Westerly Young Women's Community association is to hold a meeting this (Monday) evening in Christ Episcopal church when a programme with sleight-of-hand feats refreshments, etc., will be enjoyed.

Besides the regular church duties nine special Sundays were observed. During the year a second coat of paint was applied to exterior of the church buildings, 25 pair of blinds were hinged for the first time in 153 years of its history. There was a recognition of the ordination of the assistant pastor by neighboring church of Windham association, at which the moderator, scribe and nine other ministers had parts, 23 churches were represented.

On Old Home Patriotic day 36 S. A. R. markers presented and read by George Hale Nutting of Boston, a trustee of the National Society of the S. A. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

SATURDAYS MARKET

New York, Jan. 19.—Strength of the equipment and public utility issues featured todays brief and irregular stock market, price fluctuations in other groups showing a rather uneven tain trend.

General Electric was the outstanding individual feature climbing more than 6 points to 207 7-8; the highest price since 1902, and then yielding slightly on profit-taking. New York Air Brake and Westinghouse Air Brake closed 1 1-2 point higher, respectively. In the public utility group buying was noted in Brooklyn Union Gas, Brooklyn Edison, Interboro Rapid Transit and Manhattan certificates, all of which closed 1 to 4 points above yesterday's final prices.

Wall Street heard rumors during the day that the directors of the U. S. Steel corporation would declare an extra dividend of 2-4 of 1 per cent. At the meeting Jan. 29, thereby placing the stock definitely on a 4 per cent basis, but these lacked official confirmation. Steel common closed unchanged at 100 1-2 and the independents showed mixed changes of the day. Penn Seaboard was active on reports that it had received an order for 57 underframes for locomotives. The Baldwin was building for the Atchison railroad.

With the exception of Associated and Tidewater which moved up about a point each, oil share failed to make much response to the further increase in mid-continent crude oil prices and additional announcements of higher gasoline prices.

Phillips Petroleum turned heavy on the announcement of a new issue offering, going as low as 34 3-8, and closing half a point higher for a net loss of 1-2-8 on the day.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, which has been moving rather erratically in the last few weeks, dropped nearly 4 points to 72 1-2 and then rallied a point. Consolidated Cigars preferred broke 6 points.

Heaviness of Pittsburgh West Virginia, which dropped more than 7 points was the feature of the railroad group. Most of the other changes were small and unimportant.

Foreign exchange trading here continued to be influenced largely by that of London, where a heavy tone prevailed. Demand Sterling sold around $4.23 1-2 nad French francs were quoted just above 4.51 cents.

With the exception of an increase of $19,891,000 in the reserve of member weekly clearing house statement showed decreases in all principal items. Loans banks in the federal reserve bank, the discounts and investments dropped $148,000; cash in own vaults, $5,985,000; net demand deposits, $29,035,000, and circulation, $230,000. Aggregate reserve totaled $526,113,000, leaving excess reserve of $18,273,200, an increase of $22,898,580 over a week ago.

NORWICH TOWN

The food sale held Saturday in the downstairs department of the Boston Store, for the benefit of the Sacred Heart church was a decided success. The pastor, Rev. Charles W. Brennan, at both masses Sunday, expressed his gratitude for the help and interest shown. Rev. Father Brennan specially emphasized the courtesy and generosity of the Reid & Hughes company, also people outside the parish who contributed food, and the energy and efforts of the Altar society and others who assisted to make the sale the success it proved. The amount cleared was $159.95.

The sale which began at 11 o'clock in the morning had a steady patronage throughout the day, everything being sold out about 5 in the afternoon and then there was a demand for more. The supplies included baked beans, bread, a variety of pies and cakes, doughnuts, preserves, etc.

The sale was held under the direction of the Altar society, Misses Nellie Kingsley, Julia O'Connell, Mary White, Catherine Kane, Anna Sheehan, Bessie Callahan, Catherine Casey, Mary McNally and Annie Gorman. The assistants were Mrs. P. T. Connell, Mrs. Mary Tracy, Mrs. John Lyons, Mrs. Dennis Houlihan, Mrs. D Herbert, Mrs. Benjamin L. Kenned, Mrs. Henry Cook and Misses Mary Burns, Nellie O'Connell, Mary Fillburn, Alice Kennedy, Alice Kilroy and Helen Connell. The supplies were conveyed to the store in automobiles loaned by David Sheehan, P. T. Connell and John Connell.

Sunday Meeting at Y. M. C. A.

The parlors were filled Sunday afternoon with men and boys at the 4 o'clock meeting at the Y. M. C. A. The opening exercises consisted of the singing of several hymns, Scripture reading and vocal solos rendered effectively by Hugh Kinder. J. R. Rathbone offered prayer. Four reels of moving pictures were shown, including a reel on The Moon and Tide, one entitled Love One Another, one on How Time Flies and the closing reel showed Christ working miracles.

Between the reels, Secretary Edwin Hill made a brief talk and spoke of what a wonderful thing love is, and the great things it can accomplish. Nothing else but love can solve the problems of the nations or of individuals; nothing will settle the difficulties that are ever and anon cropping out between capital and labor but this same spirit of love. The speaker told a story that someone has told of the disciple St. John, how on one occasion when he was in a group of his friends he was asked to give a talk. John selected for his text "Children, love one another." John had been speaking but a few minutes when one interrupted him and asked him, "Why've always talked on love, whereupon John replied, "Have ye not read from the beginning, that ye should love one another?" Yes, the other said but why did you give us something new this time, and John replied in these words, "A new commandment, give I unto you that ye love one another." And so it is, that love is the great power that will solve all difficulties, and make the world what it should be. To those here who are Christians, let me say that we should do all we possibly can to lead those about us to the great lover of men and boys, Jesus Christ of Nazareth.

Call Alarm for Chimney Fire

The fire department was called out at 6.05 o'clock Saturday morning by a call sent in from box 62, Main street, near Hamilton avenue, for a small chimney fire in the house owned by Miss Belle Spaulding, at 430 Main street, occupied by Amable Verbonceour. A ... was used to extinguish the blaze and the recall was sounded almost immediately after the arrival of the firemen.

STATE PRISON SENTENCE FOR CONVICTED WATERFORD DOCTOR

Late Saturday afternoon the jury in the criminal superior court here, which has been hearing the evidence in the case of Dr. Charles A. Gasson of Station 17, Waterford, brought in a verdict of guilty on three counts involving illegal operations upon women. The jury was out about an hour when it returned to the court room and Foreman Ashley T. Boon responded with the answer of "Guilty" to the questions of Clerk George E. Parsons as to what their verdict was on the charges of performing an illegal operation upon Amy Havens and upon Nellie Fitzgerald and to enticing to an illegal operation in the case of Bernice Kroupa.

The jury's verdict was reported about 5 o'clock and Acting State Attorney Warren Burrows at once moved for sentence. Attorneys G. C. Morgan and Clayton B. Smith, counsel for the convicted man, made a plea in the court for leniency and a fine, but Judge C. L. Avery imposed sentence of from two to four years in state prison on the first count and suspended sentence on the other two counts.

Dr. Gasson received the verdict in silence but his mouth twitched convulsively as he stepped back from in front of the judge's desk and took his place near the prisoners' pen between Sheriff Sidney A. Brown and Deputy Sheriff Oscar H. Main. The doctor's wife said good bye to him in the court room and he was taken to the jail in New London after court adjourned.

The superior court session was held Saturday in order that the case might be finished if possible, as only the arguments remained to be made after the taking of testimony had been concluded Friday. Attorneys for the accused man closed his case without offering any testimony.

When court opened Saturday morning, Attorney Smith for the accused made a motion to the court that testimony which had been introduced concerning an illegal operation performed on Annie Finnegan who died and has not been apprehended and another girl whose name has not been mentioned be striken from the records and the jury instructed to disregard it. The motion was granted by Judge Avery.

The first argument for the state was made by Attorney Thomas E. Troland, who has been assisting Attorney Burrows. He was followed by Attorneys Morgan and Smith for the accused and the state's case was closed by the argument of Attorney Burrows.

Judge Avery occupied about 35 minutes in his charge to the jury.

THE MIRACLE OF CANA PROOF OF THE VIRGIN'S POWER

"Whatsoever He shall say to you, do ye," the words of the Mother of Christ to the waiters as narrated in the gospel for the Sunday, John 2. I-II, was the text from which the rector of St. Patrick's Church, Rev. M. H. May preached, at the 7.30 Mass Sunday morning. It was the second Sunday after Epiphany, the epistle being Romans 12. 6-16. The gospel narrated Christ's first miracle the changing of water into wine, at the request of his Mother at the wedding feast. Although of royal lineage—the Scripture states that Mary was of the revered house of David—it was evident that the kin to whom she so humbly went with her divine Son was also in humble circumstances; for the traditional wedding feast of ancient times continued for seven days. When therefore, after a day or two, the wine gave out the compassionate Virgin, to spare the bridegrom omortification, appealed to her Son.

"Woman, what is it to me and to thee? My hour is not yet come" was not a rebuff of the Saviour to His Mother, as some would interpret the phrase, Father May said. The real meaning of the word woman is "queen", and the Lord implies, not a slight, but "gracious mother" adding that the hour had not yet arrived when He was to do the public work of His divine Father. Nevertheless, Mary understand; she merely said to the servants, "Whatsoever He shall say to you, do ye." And the miracle was performed as she had expected.

Her words were considered as the guide of every Christian, who should do whatever Christ speaks to him, either through good books, instructive sermons, the admonitions of conscience. That the Lord granted Mary's wish is proof of the Virgin's power and influence with Her Divine Son, the Omnipotent. As no human man refuses the request of his mother, Mary's Sons will not refuse the favors she asks from Him for those who copy and revere her and petition her for her influence, if what they ask is for the good of their souls.

As the Virgin Mother watched over and cared for the Christ-Child, she will manifest a mother's solitude for those earthly children who seek her protection. Especially did Father May commend the members of the Rosary Society, Mrs. John A. Moran, president, who, following confession on Saturday, were receiving Holy Communion in a body at this Mass. He stated that their daily prayers in honor of Christ's Mother are as bouquets of roses—the Rosary—as they repeat in reverence and petition the words of the salutation of the Angel Gabriel (Luke I. 26-38) "Hail, Mary, full of grace. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb, Jesus."

Father May required the assistance of Rev. Rocco J. Guerriero in giving Holy Communion at the Mass.

WILL HEAR GRIEVANCES AGAINST MOTOR LAWS

Grievances against the motor vehicle laws and regulations of ten states will be heard at a public hearing to be held by a sub-committee of the eastern conference of motor vehicle administrators at the office of the New York state tax commission, No. 220 West Fortieth street, New York city, on Thursday. Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel of the state motor vehicle department of Connecticut and Robert J. Howard of the tax commission of New York state, are the members of the sub-committee to give the hearing.

Any constructive criticism of motor vehicle law administration in any or all of the New England states and New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, will be admissible, and suggestions for uniform laws in all of these states on the subject of motor vehicles will be received. Ten minutes will be allowed each person appearing to state his complaint or suggestion, and a report of the hearing, with possible recommendations will be laid before a full meeting of the motor vehicle administrators of all ten states to be held in New York city the following day.

Proposals for endorsement by the administrators of car accessories and equipment will not be accepted at this meeting, which will be the first of its kind to be held under the auspices of the conference. At a later date, it is expected the conference will be prepared to consider the subject of mechanical signals and accessories, and the present plan is to hold a public hearing on that subject in advance of the conference meeting on the subject.

The initial hearing, which will begin at 10 o'clock Thursday morning will be largely in the nature of a survey of the public sentiment toward motor vehicle administration in the member states, and the sub-committee will report the following day its conclusions as to whether practical ideas may be expected to be obtained from public hearings of the kind. It will also place before the conference any ideas developed at the hearing which the sub-committee considers worthy. Any organization or individual desiring to make suggestions to the conference relative to the uniformity of law is invited to attend.

TOLL BRIDGES BROUGHT IN $1,095,063.89 TO STATE

Exactly 5,543,705 people, afoot and in vehicles, paid their way across the three toll bridges in Connecticut at New London, Saybrook and Haddam, up to January 1st, when the fee collection system ceased by law, the state highway department announced Sunday.

The amount they paid to the state aggregated $1,095,063.89, according to a compilation prepared by the department covering the business on all bridges completely since they came under control of the department. In the case of the Haddam-East Haddam and the Saybrook-Lyme bridges the state took control August 1, 1915, while it was not until November, 1919, that the New London bridge was turned over to the state for highway travel.

A study of the figures contained in the statement reveals no end of interesting data to the citizens of Connecticut. All receipts at the bridges were turned into the state treasury to become a part of the general funds of the state. The expenditures for maintenance and repairs, however, were made by the highway department, and totalled $310,410.72.

Vehicles of all descriptions crossing the bridges since the state took control numbered 3,543,355. Of this number 2,863,255 were passenger automobiles, 477,282 were auto trucks, 51,873 auto buses, 64,857 motorcycles and 86,088 horse drawn vehicles.

The heaviest patronage was over the Thames river bridge at New London and Groton during the last four years when 2,053,502 people paid $426,161.05 to traverse the bridge. Total receipts for the Saybrook-Lyme bridge are greater, however, amounting to $540,651.45 during the eight years when 2,646,515 passengers crossed the bridge. At Haddam and East Haddam, receipts totalled $18,250.89 in eight years being paid by 843,688 passengers afoot and in vehicles.

The steady increase in the number of passenger and commercial automobiles in use in Connecticut is graphically reflected in the comparative figures for traffic over the bridges during the last eight years. Whereas in 1919-1920, the number of trucks crossing the bridges totalled approximately 48,000 no less than 119,000 large and small trucks were driven across the bridges.

Passenger automobile traffic increased approximately 300 per cent in four years, the records of the bridges show. During the 1919-20 fiscal year about 263,000 pleasure cars crossed the bridges, while last year the number of such machines totalled 650,000.

Following is a group of comparative figures which give some interesting light on traffic over the three points since the bridges passed into state control:

Total number of passengers: Haddam-East Haddam, 843,688 in 8 years; Saybrook-Lyme, 2,646,515 in 8 years; New London-Groton, 2,053,502 in four years.

New London: 1,223,567 passenger cars, 270,009 trucks, 40,347 motorcycles, 30,062 horse drawn vehicles.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

CHARGED WITH DISTURBING GREEK CHURCH SERVICE

On the charge of interfering with a religious meeting, two men who gave their names as Partel Hadgis and Gregor Gadas and their residence in this city, were arrested Sunday morning about 10:30 near the Trinity Greek Orthodox church on Boswell avenue. It was claimed that they had been distributing handbills in and around the church property against the wished of the church officers, who made complaint against the men at police headquarters. Chief George Linton dispatched officer Mathew Delaney to investigate and the two men were brought in, followed by a numerouse groupe of men who had been attending the church services.

A copy of the handbill, printed in the Greek language, was secured by the police. According to a Greek who read the handbill, it was headed "Which is The Church of God" and it contained an argument against the authority of the priest to interpret the Bible and in favor of individual liberty in interpretation. The handbill closed with an invitation to attend a meeting in Steiner hall on Sunday afternoon where an address was to be by N. F. Constantapoulos of New York

MASQUERADE PARTY BY DANCING CLASS

A very enjoyable masquerade party was given Friday afternoon in the Waureska house hall room, from 4:15 to 5.45, by the pupils of Mrs. William Ballentine Penfield's Friday afternoon dancing class. There were many attractive costumes worn by the pupils who always look forward to these special occasions with a great deal of enthusiasm. The incoming march was led by Grant Dennison, dressed as a prince, and Dorothy Symonds, as Little Red Ridinghood; and James Kenefick as a clown and Janice Richards, in old-fashioned costume. "You're Looking Younger Than Ever"

Of course, that is the proper greeting between old friends long separated. But it's TRUE as well as courteous in the case of a woman, who, by using laundry service, has kept her face free of the wrinkles that come with wash tub work and worry.

"ROUGH DRY," a truly economical laundry service which washes and dries everything and irons flat work, has helped many a woman preserve that "younger than ever" look!

POETRY

An Invalid's Prayer

Empower me, O God, through all my days,
To serve my fellow-men in little ways.
Let men of might engrave the mighty towers
Let genius brightly deck the world with flowers;
Enough for me if my rude hearth be warm
When pilgrims come for shelter from the storm;
No gift I crave to hold a flaming light
But oh, that I might guide some child aright;
Might sing well, might ease another's pain.
And if I can not dwell a moral strain,
Then let me fling a song from my low hill—
A hymn of highest faith. I know that will;
Empower me that I may serve today.
Oh God, hear me, I pray!

On a Woman With A Letter

Her lover is a thousand miles away.
But as she sits her color comes and goes.
No nearer presents could so bring the rose
As those thin lines traced on the paper white,
Breathing a love that may be cold today
While I sit watching her, a heart of fire,
Not daring in my fancy to aspire
Beyond this distance in the candle light.

She hardly knows I see her, hardly feels
The place, the hour, so is her spirit low,
Eager and tense, as of a bird winds tossed
In April when the air breathes warm with spring
Who should she fare that all by being seen,
See the passion of the parted lips
And the poised head, as when a falcon slips
Out of its hood on a heaven-mounting wing?

And yet the mystery of it all is this:
Only a sheet of paper for her eyes,
No blood to spar, no voice to pour its sighs
Out in a rush that will not be denied.
No lips to press on her the burning kiss,
As if we dwelt each in a separate star,

BALDWIN GOV'T DEFEATED IN COMMONS 328 TO 256

Vote of Lack of Confidence Came After Labor Leader MacDonald Had Moved Closure of Debate—Chief Figures in the Debate Were Premier Baldwin and MacDonald—The Event Was Attended by Very Little Excitement—Mr. Baldwin Will Present His Resignation to the King Today.

London, Jan. 21.—(By the A. P.)—The conservative administration of a few months under Stanley Baldwin as prime minister which might have enjoyed a life of years but for its espousal of protection was dismissed by the house of commons tonight with a vote of lack of confidence.

The labor amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne declaring that it was the duty of the house "respectfully to submit to your majesty that your majesty's present advisers have not the confidence of the house" introduced several days ago by John Robert Clynes, deputy leader of the parliamentary labor party, was adopted by a vote of 328 to 25," after J. Ramsay MacDonald, the labor leader had moved closure of the debate.

Seldom has a political event of foremost importance been enacted with so little excitement, the only tense moments being those when the tellers were counting the votes. There was a crowded house, with the galleries filled with peers, diplomats and ladies. The chief figures in the debate were Premier Baldwin and Ramsay MacDonald, but the speeches were not emotional and lacked bitterness.

Foremost in all minds was the fact that the labor party takes up the responsibility of the government for the first time with a far-reaching railway strike on its hands. How the labor party will deal with this strike, which undoubtedly it would prefer not to have to deal with, and whether it will stand as champion of the railway engineers against the employers furnishes a situation as remarkable in British politics as any of the series of remarkable events which have followed the downfall of Lloyd George's coalition cabinet.

Premier Baldwin will present his resignation to the king tomorrow and the king will summon J. Ramsay MacDonald to form a new government.

Mr. Baldwin, in his speech took the sole blame for the protectionist policy, which he believed would solve the unemployment problem.

He reviewed briefly the work done by his government and its achievements and explained his advocacy on protection. He had little to say of the laborites, because, as he expressed it, he did not know whether Jacobins or Girondin were coming in, but he was certain that Mr. MacDonald would not be able to build up a socialist state on the shifting sands of about one-fifth of the national vote.

In conclusion the prime minister predicted that the future lay between the conservatives and the labor party.

In his general remarks about labor's policy, Mr. Maconald declared that socialism had no hard a ndfast doctrine.

He was loudly cheered by his supporters when he accused the conservatives of depreciating the prices of stocks by alarmist methods, and concluded by claiming that it was his duty in the best interests of the nation and sound policy to arraign the government and ask for a verdict against it. He promised to utilize as many of the social reforms the conservatives had proposed in the king's speech as he believed in, and asserted that the great failure of the conservatives had been to deal successfully with reparations.

After the labor amendment had been carried, a motion that the address in reply to the king's speech with the amendment added be agreed to was carried 328 to 251.

One result of tonight's proceedings is that Great Britain will be left without experienced and well drilled controllers for at least two or three weeks at a time of serious strain in foreign and home affairs.

OBITUARY

Rev. Joel Ives

Meriden, Jan. 21—The Rev. Joel Ives, long secretary of the Missionary society of the Conference of Congregational Churches of Connecticut, and probably the best known clerical member of that denomination in the state died from apoplexy while a mourner at the funeral of Mrs. William L. Squire, this afternoon. Mr. Ives was in his 76th year. He had filled many positions in the Congregational denomination following pastorates at East Hampton and Stratford, but his work as a statistical secretary for the Congregationalists was the most notable. In years just he prepared and issued many pamphlets dealing with the influx of persons of foreign birth into the state and their relation to the churches of the various beliefs. He recently retired from active service.

Mr. Ives is survived by his wife, a daughter and two sons.

Mrs. Squire who was buried this afternoon was the widow of a former treasurer of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad.

Alton Emerson Stevens.

Providence, Jan. 21.—Alton Emerson Stevens, inventor of the automatic telephone, selectophone and more than 700 allied contrivances upon which he obtained patents from the government, died at his home here on Saturday after a protracted illness. He was born in Addison, Maine, in 1876, and was educated at an academy in Cherryfield, Maine, and at the English high school in Providence, to which city he came at the age of sixteen. At the time of his death he was associated with George Briggs, president of the Screw Machine Products company, in the manufacture of selectophones.

MAY COMPROMISE ON THE SURTAX REDUCTIONS

Washington, Jan. 21.—While the house ways and means committee cleared the way today for consideration of the new tax rate schedules, house majority leaders sounded out the administration and their party members for a possible compromise on the Mellon bill, particularly as regards the surtax rates.

Before calling a meeting of the majority members of the committee for tomorrow to map out a program for study of the new rates, Chairman Green discussed the tax situation with President Coolidge and pointed out difficulties confronting adoption of the surtax rates proposed by Secretary Mellon.

Although Mr. Green later indicated no change in the administration's stand for the major principles of the Mellon bill, Representative Longworth, majority leader, who announced he had conferred with C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to the president, and Secretary Mellon, reaffirmed his belief that a compromise on the surtax reductions was necessary. He said the basis for such a compromise would be sought in a series of informal conferences with republican members and indicated that he preferred settlement of this feature in committee rather than the prospect of floor fight against the measure.

STRIKE FAILS TO TIE UP THE RAILWAYS IN ENGLAND

London, Jan. 21—(By the A. P.)—Although the strike inaugurated at midnight last night by the members of the Associated Societies of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen has failed thus far to tie up the country's rail communication, enormous inconvenience has been caused to all classes of the community throughout the country. In London, the situation was aggravated this afternoon and tonight by a steady downpour of rain.

It is difficult at present to ascertain to what extent the strike is affecting the general train services, but apparently only about fifty per cent. of the usual trains are being run. The railway managers claim, however, that the situation is improving hourly. During the day almost all the railways were able to maintain fairly good skeleton services, despite the fact that a great majority of the enginemen belonging to the association had ceased work.

MIDDLETOWN REPUBLICANS WIN IN CITY ELECTION

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 21—The city election here tonight gave the republicans control of the entire city administration by a large majority and in some cases without contest. John W. Rogers won over Mayor J. F. Connery, democrat, by a majority of 140 votes and took the oath of office immediately following the election. Connery, the retiring mayor, administered the oath.

The aldermen elected are Carroll A. Campbell and Rev. Lester O. Schriber and the councilmen, Arthur F. Hughes, Frank M. Dunn, William P. Spear, Richard E. Mylchreest, Guy Cambria and Edwin T. McDowell. Mrs. Emma P. Mead was elected assessor and Frederick L. Phelps, city tax collector.

The usual term of office is for two years but on account of the consolidation of the town and city in October and the granting of a new charter, the present term will be for nine months.

Every year the families in homes where electricity is used spend $75,000,000 for electric current. By itself that looks almost as imposing as the expenditures for the famous three C's—confectionery, cigarettes and cosmetics. Yet it averages only 4 cents a day for each person who uses electricity.

Bok Prize Purely Personal Affair

Donor Tells Senate Committee He Thought He Was Within His Own Rights to Spend Money.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Edward W. Bok, donor of the $100,000 prize for a world peace plan repeatedly told the senate propaganda investigating committee today hiat he regarded solely as his own affair the amount of money he has placed in a trust fund to defray the expenses of the contest.

After he had been examined less than two hours, the hearing was adjourned and at later session, the committee directed Chairman Moses to write Mr. Bok that it was not prepared to proceed with his examination tomorrow as had been planned.

"The committee adopts this course," Chairman Moses wrote, "because of your refusal to answer certain questions regarding the amount of money which has been expended by you in organizing and carrying on the work of the so-called American peace award which questions the committee believes to be wholly proper pertinent and within the purview of the resolution under which the committee acts."

"You are free to proceed to Florida as you had desired—with the distinct understanding, however, that the committee by request or subpoena will feel itself free to recall you as a witness at some later date."

Chairman Boses said the committee would take up the examination of Miss Esther Everett, late member in charge of the policy committee of the award Wednesday as had been planned. Mr. Bok testified today that he had given her charge of the work of organizing the award as he did not want to be bothered with the details.

Chairman Moses and Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, both "irreconcilables" in the Versailles treaty fight, conducted much of the examination of Mr. Bok but Senators Greene, republican, Vermont, and Caraway, democrat, Arkansas joined in the efforts to elicit from Mr. Bok the amount of money expended by him on the award. He declared he had furnished ever penny for the expense.

"I don't see that the amount has any interest further than to satisfy curiosity, the witness said at one point. "It's purely a personal matter."

Mr. Bok told the committee that in his own case and that of the American peace award he thought he was within his rights to expend any amount of money he chose.

"I have decided to give over my life and my money to the aiding of the American people," he said "and I'm going to give back to the American people what they gave me. I don't think you are entitled to the amount thus expended."

Mr. Bok told the committee he did not know the winner of his award who wrote a plan for American cooperation with the league of nations. He said he personally had selected Eliuhu Root to serve on the jury which made the award, but that he was just asked to approve the others.

The investigation of the Bok award was a subject of senate debate during the day Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader saying the committee would fail of its real purpose if it permitted its attention to be diverted to the Bok plan and away from such instances of organized propaganda as that in favor of the Mellon tax plan and against the soldiers' bonus. Senator Reed, who offered the resolution of inquiry declared the committee had no intention of passing over "more important facts," and has gone into the Bok plan first because it was "considered so trivial we were certain it would be speedily disposed of."

STATE BAR ASSOCIATION IN HEATED DISCUSSION

Bridgeport, Jan. 21.—Adoption of a report recommending stricter qualifications for admittance to the Connecticut bar by a vote of 56 to 5 precipitated a heated discussion at the afternoon session of the annual meeting of the State Bar Association of Connecticut, held at the county building here today.

Addressing members of the association at the Stratfield hotel tonight, R. E. L. Saner of Dallas, Texas, president of the American Bar association, and chairman of its committee on American citizenship, made a strong plea for activity in civic affairs on the part of members of the bar. His subject was "The Lawyer and the State."

The recommendation requiring graduation from an approved law school and a preliminary two year high school course was approved after a motion by George E. Hall that the report be tabled until the next annual meeting, had been overwhelmingly defeated.

Exception was taken by Superior Court Judge James H. Webb of Hamden to remarks of Edward M. Day of Hartford, chairman of the committee which presented the report relative to the large percentage of foreign born who are candidates for admittance to the bar in this state.

"In view of this change of population and the necessity to have all those practicing law in this state fully acquainted with American principles and its constitution, I think it essential that admittance to the bar should be made harder," Mr. Day said.

"It seems as though we look upon the descendants of foreign born persons in this state with suspicion and a feeling of mistrust which it is not necessary to cast upon them," said Judge Webb, in answer to Mr. Day. "My experience has been that as many descendants of old American families have been before the grievance committee of the state as those of foreign extraction," stated Judge Webb, adding that it was regrettable that such an argument entered into the matter.

Lucius L. Robinson of Hartford, was elected president of the association tonight. Terrence F. Carmody, Waterbury, was chosen vice president and James E. Wheeler, New Haven, continues as secretary and treasurer.

NEW HAVEN POLICE SEIZE SLOOP WITH LIQUOR CARGO

New Haven, Jan. 21.—Overpowering the crew of the 50-foot sloop Chichota as she drew up along Canal dock late this afternoon, police confiscated her cargo of approximately 350 cases of liquor and arrested four of the five men aboard. One man escaped by jumping into the water and wading ashore.

Those arrested are William Phillips, of 414 Carpenter street, Greenpoint, R. I.; John Talmadge, Edward Parsons and James Marvin, all of 26 South street, New York city. The man who escaped is said to be of New Haven.

Chief of Police Phillip Smith received a tip earlier in the afternoon that the Chichota would put in at Canal dock to unload her cargo. Six policemen were rushed to City dock, opposite the Canal dock landing, arriving just in time to see the sloop prepare to tie up. The police boarded the boat, taking the crew by surprise.

The five men were directed to ascend a ladder to the dock above and the escaped member of the crew, being the last in turn, jumped into the water which was knee-deep and ran ashore under the flooring of the dock The police were unable to follow because of the darkness. It was stated that his identity is known.

The men were brought to police headquarters where they are being held without bond for a hearing in the city court tomorrow morning. The liquor was unloaded at City dock where the sloop was towed and brought to headquarters where the exact count was placed at 364 cases

The police were unable to state from what port the Chichota cleared nor were they able tl give any information as to her registry. She is being held and a guard has been placed over her until the disposition of the case in the court.

CUMMINGS PLEADS FOR PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Boston, Jan. 21—A plea that prohibition enforcement be taken out of politics was made by Homer S. Cummings, state's attorney for Fairfield county, Connecticut, and former chairman of the democratic national committee, in an address at the New England Citizenship conference tonight. It should be established upon the merit system, he said, adding:

"There must be a violent separation of prohibition from patronage. The traffic of the bootlegger is profitable largely because politicians are hungry to participate in easy money and conduct political campaigns with funds shaken down from bootlegging sources in return for real or fancied protection."

He urged state cooperation in the enforcement of prohibition.

The real issue which confronts us," he said "is not the question of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment or even the question of the modification of existing laws in support thereof. The question is, shall existing law be successfully defied by a minority of the people ?"

BRYAN CITES PLANKS FOR DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

New York, Jan. 22.—The democratic party will face the voters in the presidential campaign in November with a platform calling for taxation and tariff reduction, a soldiers' bonus and legislation to aid labor and a general program opposed to class government, William Jennings Bryan, thrice candidate for the presidency, declared tonight at a dinner given in James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany.

The primary issue in the campaign which he predicted would be the most hotly contested in many years, Mr. Bryan said would be taxation. The democratic substitute for the Mellon tax reduction bill, he declared, gave greater reductions and "discriminated in favor of the masses instead of the holders of large incomes." He expressed the opinion that party lines in congress would break on consideration of the measure which, he asserted, would more resemble the democratic bill than the Mellon measure when it reached the president.

The democrats, Mr. Bryan continued, would endeavor to obtain reduction of the tariff. They also would favor the soldiers' bonus, contending its passage would be entirely compatible with tax reduction.

ASSAULT AND DEFENSE OF VOLSTEAD LAW IN THE HOUSE

Outgrowth of Conference of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment — At the White House President Coolidge Ignored the Question of Modification — Privately, to Delegates, the President Announced His Determination to Enforce the Laws in Accordance With His Oath of Office.

Washington, Jan 21.—Wet forces brought their fight against the prohibition laws to the national capital today when they assembled here in a "face the facts" conferences of the association against the prohibition amendment and delivered a barrage of condemnatory speeches that brought a hot return fire from dry champions on the floor of the house.

They also took their cause to the white house and to their plea for modification of the existing dry laws along with a declaration for law and order. They received a brief response from President Coolidge Ignoring the question of modification, but expressing his gratification at the assurance that the association stood behind the law.

In the memorial presented through Senator Bayard, democrat, Delaware and Archibald Hopkins, president of its executive committee, the association declared it believed "in the impartial execution of law as the preservative of the citizens' liberty" and that "experience has shown that existing laws should be modified." In his reply which was made privately to the delegates and not made public by the white house, the president announced his determination to enforce the laws in accordance with his oath of office.

More than a dozen speakers attacked the results of prohibition enforcement during the day sessions of the association and the theme later was the subject of adresses at a banquet tonight with Senator Bruce democrat, of Maryland and Senator Bayard as speakers and Representative Hill, republican, Maryland as toastmaster for the occasion.

The association's attack on the dry laws in effect pushed the interior department appropriation bill off the floor of the house later in the day when Representative Crampton, republican, Michigan in charge of the supply measure, laid it aside to denounce the association as an organization formed "for the avowed purpose of nullification of the 18th. mendment." Asserting the association has a "close liason with the liquor interests and as in part supported by contributions from that source" Representative Crampton declared "its wine and beer proposal is impossible under the present constitution," and asked if it were not a "subterfuge" to "nullify" the 18th amendment.

Representative Yates, republican, Illinois took up the attack to ask why the association did not fight to have the amendment re-submitted to the states instead of "trying to nullify" it, and Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, suggested a congressional investigation of the association.

In his banquet address, Senator Bruce declared the aim of the conference was nothing less than the recovery in a vital particular of the right to liberty and the pursuit of hapiness."

"Let the federal government repeal the Volstead act," the senator said, "and permit the people of the forty-eight states of the Union to pursue any policy in regard to the sale or use of liquor that it may choose to do, subject to the limitations of the 18th amendment, as interpreted by the courts."

Senator Bayard in his address declared that what the country needs is a "regulatory statute so that not only the manufacture of alcoholic beverages would be under the governmental control, but also the sale and the latter to be made only for home consumption and in regulated quantities."

The Volstead act, he said, would not be enforcible until "every citizen is made a policeman."

SENATE COMMITTEE GIVEN EVIDENCE AGAINST RUSSIA

Washington, Jan. 21.—A mass of documentary evidence, bearing upon the operations of the Russian soviet regime from its inception and some of it upon the question of communist propaganda and activities in this country, was submitted by the state department today to a senate foreign relations sub-committee when it began an investigation to determine whether it should recommend recognition of the Russian soviet government. The sub-committee is headed by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho

Among the documents transmitted by Secretary Hughes to the committee was a decree of the Third Communist Internationale, issued in 1921, providing for extension of communism in the United States. Another document was a copy of a decree by the Russian soviet government in 1917 appropriating two million rubles, or about $250,000, for revolutionary propaganda. This was followed state department officials told the committee, by organization in this country of the communist party.

Only two state department officials, Evan E. Young, chief of the intelligence office of its eastern division, and Robert F. Kelly, of that office, appeared today before the committee.

The two decrees of the Russian soviet and the Third Communist Internationale were the only papers presented bearing on communist propaganda and activies in this country which, Secretary Hughes declared recently, prevented the United States entering upon negotiations for Russian recognition.

Other and more direct evidence was promised tomorrow and a letter from Secrtary Hughes transmitting the documents said that some evidence on this point was being sent confidentially for the committee's information. Chairman Borah, however, said that he was not desirous of any secret information.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.—Seven men were drowned in oil, two captains and five hosemen of the Pittsburgh fire department, while fighting a fire at the Butler street plant of the Atlantic Refining company today. The bodies were recovered after the fire had been brought under control with the monetary loss unestimated. A number of firemen also were injured.

The fire broke out in an oil tank even companies answered the alarm and fire lines were thrown out for four or five city blocks on the east side of the refineries which adjoined a residential district and has been the scene of a number of costly blazes. Many families deserted their homes and additional fire apparatus were summoned as the morning wore on.

DIFFICULT TO EXTEND THE WASHINGTON NAVAL TREATY

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 21.—(By the Asociated Press)—Officials of the League of Nations are beginning to realize that the contemplated attempt to extend the basic principles of the Washington naval treaty to all world powers will prove a bigger job than was at first foreseen.

There is no qualling manifest, however, before a task which eventually involves the settling af relative naval strengths in the Mediterranean, in South American waters and even in the far east, Forchina whose potential marine power must be reckoned with at least in principle will figure in the general international conference which will follow next month's meeting of naval experts. Moreover, Holland shows a growing interest in the necessity of warships to protect her rich colonies in the southermost section of far eastern seas.

There is one main difference between the tentative convention which has been framed at Geneva for the neliberation of the naval experts and the convention elaborated at Washington. Whereas the Washington agreement was first a treaty to cafry out definite reductions of large navies and second a treaty to impose limitations for the future. The Geneva document is designed merely to impose future limitations thus eliminating what is called "the unknown factor" and preventing competition in navies or the arising of fear of such competition.

Although the German navy is now non-existent, it is deemed the normal thing to invite Germany to the conference because the Geneva draft, in addition to limiting the size and armaments of warships contain regulations for the preparations made in merchant ships in time of peace for their conversion to war purposes.

BLOCKADE OF TAMPICO POSTPONED TEN DAYS

Washington, Jan. 21.—A ten day postponement of the rebel blockade of Tampico harbor temporarily ended today that phase of the Mexican problem with which the state department is dealing.

On the heels of word that the postponement has been decided upon, however, came the disclosure from the state department that the mining of rebel controlled Mexican ports had been vigorously protested by the Washington government which reserved the right "to adopt appropriate measures" if the mines and other obstructions to navigation "are not immediately removed." The department issued a formal statement during the day after word had been received that Rear Admiral Magruder aboard the cruiser Richmond had arrived off Tampico with orders "to protect adequately the peaceful and legitimate" American commerce with that port.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
31 Church Street Telephone 1062

Willimantic residents had to start shaking up furnaces, Sunday night and Monday morning, when thermometer readings were as low as eight degrees above zero. The sudden change of temperature was a good sample of real winter weather with biting cold winds, seasonable for this time of the year. Those probably most affected by the cold snap were the automobile owners. A good many cars had frozen up during the night and could not be budged from their garages Monday morning. Vendors of wood alcohol did a thriving business all day long, to say nothing of what work was done in the way of repairing leaking radiators. Old and new machines had to be "thurned" patiently to get the motor buzzing.

Monday was a great day for the local ice dealers. Old Man Winter waved his magic wand over the ponds and rivers and ice formed rapidly. If the mercury will remain at its present notch for a few days more it is likely that the price of ice will not be so high next summer as has been feared.

Miss Bowen presided at the last meeting of the W. C. T. U. A most entertaining program, the subject of which was "The 18th Amendment," was given, with Mrs. E. B. Hanna as chairman. Advocates of better parking conditions for the city of Willimantic believe that this might be an opportune time to exhume the parking problem from the waste basket; to study the situation at leisure, if necessary, and then take definite action, before the increase in traffic next spring. Now that there is a slight lull in political activities the parking question must again bob up. Several months ago the public was led to expect that the parking of automobiles in this city would be regulated by rules of a more rigid type than those now existing. Suggestions were drawn and offered for public approval or rejection. A few contrary minds, working in the interest of their own personal business houses, offered opposition and the big guns were silenced forever. Parking rules are probably not such a necessity during the winter months but it has pointed out that this spring there will be more automobiles in Willimantic than ever before, and that the already deplorable conditions will become fairly impossible. When new parking regulations were suggested on some of the streets a few inerts were aroused and they cried out that it would be best to leave well enough alone. No serious accidents had been reported as a consequence of the present parking conditions, but there is a great deal of room for improvement and this opportunity for advancement will undoubtedly be taken up and fought to a finish by some of Willimantic's live bodies.

The largest attendance was in July, the smallest in December and on Monday, Christmas eve, there were no visitors, it being the first such instance in the recollection of the librarian. The total circulation was 8753 volumes, of which 3100 were books on fiction, magazines 576, juvenile books 525, schools 320, general 238. LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Parts Company With Lazy Bear

In the last story, you remember, Little Jack Rabbit and the man with the trained bear had come to a little village just as school let out. No sooner had the bear ended his dance than a small boy shouted: "Now, what can the bunny do?" I guess that boy wished he had a pair of red top boots and a horse like Dapple Gray, let me tell you."

"What tricks can you do?" whispered the bunny boy in the pony's ear "Leave that to me, little master," answered the faithful little animal, but see that you don't slip off my back."

The next minute Dapple Gray began to prance. First he stood up on his legs next on his front legs. Then he whirled around and around till his tail stood out straight, knocking off a little girlie's bonnet with a yellow ribbon on it. But she didn't care. She was too excited to notice it until the show was over.

"Now Bruno," said the man, "take your hat off and pass it around!"

Pretty soon his funny red cap was full of money for every little boy and girl dropped in a penny and the teacher a dollar bill.

By and by, Little Jack Rabbit and the man started off for the next village, but as it was nearly sundown when they got there, they made a little camp in the wood nearby. Kindling a fire of dried wood, the man boiled water in a little tin sauce pan and soon he had supper ready. Dapple Gray filled the tender grass, and the bea ate the hay and nuts which the man gave him.

By and by, the bunny boy fell fast asleep and the Twinkle, Twinkle Star began to sing:

"I wish I could rock in the low cradle [illegible] moon

That swings in the dim cloudy sky
But all I can do is just peep through
With my little bright golden eyes.
But, oh, do you know, as I look down below
At the children all dreaming away,
I'm sure they know why, as I twinkle on high,
I must watch for the first peep of day."

But, dear me, when morning came, the bear wouldn't get up for breakfast. He lay on his bed of dry leaves and wouldn't let his master comb his hair. So, without wasting more time Little Jack Rabbit mounted Dapple Gray and rode away. What was the use of waiting if the bear wouldn't get up? After a while, the little rabbit came to a bridge kept by a little old woman in a pink sunbonnet and a calico apron. But, dear me, again- We must read the next story to hear what happened after that.

You Must Fight Film
No whiter teeth without that
If you want whiter teeth, you must combat the film that clouds them. Millions do that now. Wherever you look you can see the results.
Make this free test and see the results on your own teeth.
The cloud is film
The cloud on teeth is film. At first the film is viscous. You can feel it now. No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats it, so much of the film remains.
Soon it becomes discolored, then forms dingy coats. That's how teeth lose beauty.
Film also causes most tooth troubles. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.
You have little chance to escape such troubles if you do not fight the film.
Dental science has now found two effective film combatants. One disintegrates the film, one removes it without harmful scouring.

These methods were proved by many careful tests. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent. Now careful people of some 50 nations employ it, largely by dental advice.
See what it does
Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest starch deposits better. These combined results are bringing to millions benefits you want.
Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

At the Strand

Walker, as the naive, trusting, innocent Thaddeus, unaware that in "manufacturing" antique furniture he is doing anything dishonest, furnishes genuine amusement and wins further renown for this star of "Over the Hill" and several Emory Johnson melodramas, and in putting it over, Walker demonstrates his versatility as a featured player. It is entirely removed from his dashing caballero, as pictured in "Captain Fly-by-Night" or the hard working mechanic in "The Fourth Musketeer."

There is nothing that quite "gets an audience like the final triumph of a small town hero, who is the object of derision during the first part of the play, who becomes more deeply involved in trouble as the tale progresses, only to emerge vindicated and victorious.

"Fashionable Fakers," is a typical small-town story treated in a novel way, and Walker's portrayal is quite unlike anything of the kind he has every done.

The remainder of the cast, under the direction of William Worthington, famous for his work with one of the most artistic pictures ever produced, "The Dragon Painter" with Sessue Hayakawa, support the star in admirable manner. Mildred June makes an appealingly demure heroine and J. Farrell MacDonall as an Irishman who is posing as a Turk is a scream and a delight. George Cowl, as Creel, a man who lives by umbrageous transactions, has the necessary smirk and polish for the first class "heavy" role he fills.

At the Broad Theatre

Patrons of the silent drama who enjoy thier film fare with action, thrills and plenty of dramatic interest will find all of these ingredients in "Unseeing Eyes," picturized by the Cosmopolitan Corporation from one of Arthur Stringer's most stirring stories of the wild at Canadian Northwest. The picture in which Lionel Barrymore and Dorothy Revier are featured, is the feature attraction at the Broad theatre today.

Practically everything that the public loves, from a thrilling aeroplane race to a girl who blinds herself in the snow, is offered wilderness, and, together with an attack of snow-blindness, new through the most narrow-[illegible] is to be found in [illegible] There are big fight scenes that are so realistic that you will find yourself gripping the edges of your chair in suspense. And as a background for the quick succession of dramatic incidents there are some of the most pictorially beautifully scenes of the Canadian Rockies that ever have been filmed. The picture was actually made in the Canadian Rockies and is a marvel of photographic achievement.

The story of "Unseeing Eyes" is woven around a mine located in the wilderness of Canada. During the war some outlaws, headed by one of the most dastardly of villains ever seen on the screen, take possession, unknown to its owners, Miriam and Dick Helston. While on a visit to the mine Dick is attacked by the outlaws and almost killed by their leader. The latter's squaw manages to get a message through to Miriam Dean who, along with Conrad Dean and other is attending a carnival in Quebec.

The outlaws fight madly to possess her but she is temporarily saved by the bandit leader. The manner in which he tries to force her into marriage, steals off into the wilderness with her on a dog sled and is finally overhauled by the aeroplane and Dick give to the screen lovers a succession of thrills that equal any ever filmed.

Barrymore is a dominant figure as the flying ace and Miss Owen gives a delightful performance as Miriam, especially in the scene where she goes snow blind. Louis Wolheim, as the outlaw leader, makes him a brutal and terrifying figure. Others who appear to excellent advantage are Gustav von Seyffertitz, Paul Panzer, Frances Red Eagle, Jack Johnston, Walter Miller and Charles Beyer.

Other pictures on the bill include the Pathe news and an Educational comedy.

At the Palace.

The past, present and future was revealed with startling clarity by Kara, the mystery man, who sees and knows all, probing to the innermost recesses of the human mind for his revelations, at the Palace theatre on Monday. Kara, dean of mystics, told hundreds of people secrets closest to their hearts in wonderful exhibition of thought vibrations from the brain cells of his audience and gazed into the future, making his predictions from the present arrangement of the astral bodies. His complete control of his mind in getting it in tune with the thought vibrations transmitted by his exhibition interspersed it with more or less humor, not dwelling entirely with the serious side. With the mystic are several oriental entertainers, Mlle. Bianca, classical dancer, and Estelle Morreselle, a cultured singer.

Other acts appearing on the bill with the mystic are really very high class acts of the vaudeville stage. One of the best, if not the very best, single act ever presented in Norwich, is given by Benjamin Franklin, star of the New York Winter Garden. Franklin makes his appearance here in his only work on the vaudeville stage. He is in Norwich as a special favor to the local management and his clever comedy lines are thoroughly appreciated by the audience.

Lee Stoddard, "the human phonograph, has a very neat ventriloquist act and his phonographic imitations are almost perfect.

Lucy Gillette & Co. has a neat juggling act featuring Miss Gillette as vaudeville's best feminine juggler.

The feature picture is "The Courtship of Myles Standish," a picturization of Longfellow's immortal poem of the same name. Charles Ray is featured in the leading role of John Alden and he is given ample opportunity to display his great emotional powers.

A comedy and news weekly complete the bill.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

A big six Studebaker car, owned by the New York-Boston Stock Paper company and driven by Charles Wecker of 117 E. Second street, New York, was badly wrecked, Monday afternoon, when it plunged off the state highway above the Gallup farm on the Providence road, rolled over once, righted and plowed along into a woodlot until it eventually came to a halt leaning against a shack where Robert Saunders formerly kept his horses. Wecker and two women who were passengers in the car escaped with minor injuries.

Wecker at first attributed the accident to some difficulty with the steering mechanism, but after a wrecker from a local garage had lifted the front end of the damaged car clear it was found that the steering rig seemed to be in working order and an examination did not reveal any parts of it broken.

State Officer Edward Stephens investigated the accident and Wecker later went to the barracks here to make his statement relative to the affair.

The car, in the opinion of automobile men who inspected it, is damaged to the extent of probably $500. The front end is crushed in, the chassis bent, top crushed, fenders damaged and there is other wreckage to the machine that will make the repair cost mount high.

It was understood that Wecker was on a business trip out of New York and was bound for Chelsea, Mass., when the accident happened. The wrecked care was removed during the afternoon.

Staid New Englanders, accustomed to bleak and bitter cold, came into their own Monday, when hoary winter set his icy hand upon this section of the country and started to do things that may compensate for the extraordinary mild weather that has been characteristic of the season.

At 6 a. m. the mercury stood at 4 degrees above zero and by 9.30 had climbed to 8 above. Later in the forenoon a maximum of 10 degrees for the day was reached, and then came a biting, searching gale out of the northwest and the mercury made a retreat for what may be considered strategic reasons. By 4 p. m. thermometers were showing readings of 5 above—and 5 above and a nightfall there had been a further recession to 3 above. The promise was for real cold weather this morning.

And in the face of this there was glee in the comment of the old-timers who said: "This is something like it!" It appears they actually had missed a real blustering winter day. And in the joyful cry of the youngsters—'Now we'll have some skating." And in the comment of the practical man: "This looks good toward starting an ice crop."

It surely was enough to start something—the worst night for cold this year.

Upsetting the predictions of many forecasters, the gale did not abate with the setting of the sun, but had considerably increased during the

PUTNAM

An echo of a tragedy of the past year was the announcement Monday that a claim for damages by Mrs. Remi Delage against the estate of Honorius Magnan had been settled without recourse to the courts and that, as a result of the agreement reached, a suit for damages of $10,000 had been dropped. Attorney Irving H. Miron, who represented Mrs. Delage's interests here, declined to elaborate on the plain statement that the matter had been settled out of court and that he insurance company carrying the liability on the Magnan car that figured in an accident that resulted in the deaths of two friends and well-known citizens, had made a settlement satisfactory to Mrs. Delage and her counsel.

Honorius Magnan, proprietor of the Cargill house here and a member of the common council, met almost instant death and Remi Delage, then captain of police of Putnam was so seriously injured that he died later, when the Cadillac car in which they were riding crashed against an abutment of a railroad underpass in the town nof Oxford, just north of Webster, in the first hour of the morning of May 2 of 1923.

Close watch is being kept by numbers of political observers on a possible development of the winter season, with a view to making the most of it for campaign material next fall, should it come to pass.

To date, the season has been a remarkably good one for the welfare of protected game birds, hunters say. The absence of any amount of snow has made it possible for them to feed well throughout the part of the winter that has gone.

provided a sensation for Putnam, for both Messrs Magnan and Delage were so well known and held such official positions as to make the occurrence of far above ordinary interest. More or less mystery always has and continues still to obscure the circumstances leading up to the ride that ended in the fatalities but it appears to have been established that the two men left Putnam just after Alderman Magnan had attended a meeting of the common council and that they were unaccompanied on their late evening ride into Massachusetts. It is believed that they went to Worcester and were on their way home when the accident occurred shortly after midnight. As Magnan died almost instantly after the crash of the car against the stone abutment of the underpass and as Captain Delage never did return sufficiently near to his normal self so serious were his injuries, to tell the story of the night ride, the details of what went on in the hours they were away together and at what speed they were riding when the accident occurred must always remain a mystery. Both men were thrown clear of the wrecked car.

There was much discussion pro and con in the weeks that followed as to who was driving the machine when it was wrecked. It was Magnan's machine, but Captain Delage was entirely familiar with the particular type of car, having driven one scores of thousands of miles before getting his appointment as nominal head of the police department here—in his capacity as a chauffeur for one connected with an important industry in Putnam. However a coroner in Massachusetts, after careful investigation of the accident, decided that Alderman Magnan was at the wheel of his own machine when it plunged into the underpass abutment.

In view of this finding negotiations in the interest of Mrs. Delage for compensation were undertaken by counsel and a suit was about to be filed when announcement was made Monday that a settlement satisfactory to all had been reached, though the amount Mrs. Delage is to receive was not made public.

This (Tuesday) evening brings the meeting of the Putnam Building and Loan association. The report that will be presented by the Secretary Judge H. H. Geissler, will be a pleasing one and will recount the growth and success of the organization during 1923. Assets are now in the vicinity of $200,000. As has been the rule for years past, the association has had a constantly growing demand for loans for building or property purchasing—these loans always in excess of the revenue of the association.

Vicious Old Winter—verging on the cruel in its delayed grasp at its opportunities of the season—shrieked out of the northwest Monday morning and throughout the day sought to penalize with its severity all of the complacent folk that had said there would be no cold weather to amount to anything this month.

Early morning found the mercury only 2 to 5 degrees above zero. There was a few degrees climb from that low mark during the hours of the forenoon, but at the noon hour the Arctic blasts drove the mercury back again and it stayed set thereafter at from 6 to 8 above during the entire daylight period and again was slowly receding toward zero as night came on.

Here was a real winter's day! Here was prospect of getting an ice crop! Here was weather to match New England traditio nfor January! The bitter cold of the day was added during the afternoon by sharp snow squalls coming from menacing clouds promising full and plenty of real cold weather for the last third of the month.

Friends, including a number of the nurses at the Day Kimball hospital making a party of more than a dozen, motored to Worcester Monday evening to make a visit at the home of Miss Katherine Elizabeth Burns, nurse at the hospital, who died during the early hours of Sunday morning. Miss Burns was very popular here and her death came as a great shock to her friends.

Chimney fires were claiming the attention of the firemen Sunday evening and during Monday. Forcing fires to ward off the extreme cold had the usual and inevitable result of showing up chimneys that need attention—at the risk of destruction of valuable property. The firemen were not called upon to perform long tours of duty in dealing with these calls, but fougd the weather trying even for brief periods of activity out of doors.

Scarlet fever continues to make its appearance among school children of the city. A physician reported another case Monday morning. Only in a few cases have patients been very ill with the disease since its appearance here in the fall. The schools continue in session, it being held by school officials—and their opinion is backed by an official of the state board of health—that a better check can be kept on conditions with the children in school and under constant observation than would be the case were the schools closed and the children allowed to follow, in greater or lesser degree, their own devices.

Mrs. Frank Stoumbelis, Mrs. Walter N. Phillips and Miss Anna C. Leavitt will be the hostesses when Alpha Delta class of the Congregational Sunday school serves a supper in the church banquet room and provides an evening that has been designated as a "Foolish evening with the Alpha Deltas."

Inquiry indicates that only a comparatively small number of fishing licenses have been taken out to date in this territory. The coming of ice considered safe for men who would fish on is thought likely to produce a demand for licenses as has not been experienced since the law requiring them became effective the first of the year.

Judge M. H. Geissler is to leave the latter part of this week for a trip to Florida. He will make a leisurely journey south, making stop-overs at Richmond, Charleston, Savannah, Raleigh and other points. Judge Geissler's destination is Tampa, where he will visit for a few days with relatives from Thompson, who are spending the winter there. He will be absent from the city about two weeks.

A special program of interest has been arranged incident to the installation of officers of Putnam grange, an event set for Monday evening of next week.

Business men note a sharp increase in the number of traveling salesmen that are visiting Putnam seeking orders, an evidence of the pressure for business that will be felt during 1924.

William Desaulnier will return here from Danielson to take a position as a registered phamacist in a local drug store. Mr. Desaulnier's home is in this city. He succeeds Clarence Brosseau, who goes to Arctic Center, R. I.

In several instances radiators of cars not properly loaded with alcohol frose up while being driven along the highways during Monday's cold—and the repair bills will be considerable.

The Influence of Science on Religion will be Rev. S. E. Conad's subject when he speaks before the Men's Forum next Sunday.

Members of A. G. Warner, W. R. C., have a meeting scheduled for this (Tuesday) afternoon.

Interior work on the Stoumbelis block has advanced considerably during the month and the new block will be ready for occupancy within a few weeks.

Such nights as that of Monday are of a nature to drive wanderers to seek shelter at the police station.

JEWETT CITY

Ten Years among the Mail Bags, by J. Holbrook, in 1856, and published by H. Cowperthwait & Co., of Philadelphia, long out of print, is a valuable book, especially because of the unusual subjects which it treats. Mrs. L. G. Buckingham is its owner, it belonged to some one in her father's family years ago. It is very doubtful if there is another copy outside the government libraries. There are 400 pages of mail robbery stories and a detailed account of the methods used to apprehend the robbers.

These stories, extremely interesting, are not intended to exploit the history of any particular section of the country, yet strangely enough one of them, with unusual circumstances, is told as having happened near home, in 1824, one hundred years ago. The story reads:

The quiet town of Lebanon, in the state of Connecticut, was enlivened by what appeared to be a strange and altogether inexplicable mail robbery. It brought a new influx of curiosity mongers to the blacksmith shop; covered the barrels at the corner store, and gave new life to the sewing society's gossip circle.

It was early in the month of January, 1824, that Mr. Jonathan Little, a well known New York merchant, while on a summer visit to Lebanon, his native town, mailed at that post office a letter directed to the firm of which he was a member, containing $1,000 in bank notes.

The letter failed to reach its destination. Mr. Little notified the postal authorities and offered a private reward.

There were all sorts of speculations, then appeared Mr. Roger Bailey, the brother of the Lebanon postmaster, who incautiously asserted that he believed that Amasa Hyde, the postmaster at Franklin (the next town to Lebanon on the route to New York) had taken the letter.

The bystanders were rather astonished at this bold charge, impeaching as it did, the integrity of a man whose character had always been above suspicion., Mr. Hyde was soon supposed to be the delinquent. Upon hearing about it he immediately instituted inquiries for the purpose of discovering the originator of these injurious reports. Hyde later sued Mr. Bailey for slander; the latter had to pay $700 and costs for the pleasure of expressing his opinion. This, however is but an episode in the history of the lost letter.

After a while the excitement died away and Mr. Little found it necessary to place the $1,000 to the account of "Profit and Loss," especially the latter.

The thory was advanced by an acute genius, and applied to the case of a tea kettle inadvertently dropped into the ocean, that "a thing isn't lost when you know where it is." But the subject in hand seems to show that a thing isn't always lost, when you don't know where it is. The resuscitation of the missing letter took place not in Lebanon, nor in Franklin, but in the New London post office. When the mail bag with the money in it reached New London, it was found to be in such a worn condition, that it was considered unsafe and was duly condemned by the New London postmaster. It was ordered thrown aside as useless of course after having been emptied of its contents.

Two years later, during a clean-up of old bags and refuse in the New London postoffice, the lost letter took the opportunity to drop out, and return, a veritable epistolary Rip Van Winkle, to the world, whence it had retired for so long a time.

The money was all safe, and it is needless to say, that the clearing of reputation and the straightening out of matters generally are matters of favorable record.

The Cost of a Car

is no measure of its value

These are the things to consider

THE cost of a car depends in large part on volume and efficiency. It is no criterion of value.

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. All of them are Sixes. The main costs are divided by that enormous output. Thus at prices of $975 and up we offer the utmost in quality. We offer maximum values.

Don't judge these cars by prices. Under other conditions they might cost twice as much, yet offer less than these.

Some major costs

Quality cars require costly facilities. Studebaker has $50,000,000 invested in modern plants and equipment. $8,000,000 in drop forge plants alone. $10,000,000 in body plants, to carry out the Studebaker standards.

There are 12,500 up-to-date machines employed to build these cars. Some are enormously expensive.

Few outputs justify such facilities. Then parts must be bought outside, and profits paid to others.

Studebaker engineering costs $500,000 per year. That to us is $3.33 per car.

Our Department of Research and Experiment employs 125 skilled men. It makes 500,000 tests per year to maintain our standards.

Our Bureau of Methods and Standards fixes the requirements for every part and detail. 12,000 inspections are necessary for each car to insure against flaws and mistakes. We employ 1,000 men to make them.

Cars like the Studebakers cannot be built without such facilities, such research, such care. Yet enormous output alone makes them possible at Studebaker prices.

The best we know

Studebakers represent the best we know. And with our army of engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best.

We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no room to excel us there.

* * *

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft, as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration.

We use more Timken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,600. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all chasses are alike.

Beauty—Luxury—Finish

The finish is produced by 26 operations, including 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Open cars have real leather cushions. They cost, over imitation leather, about $25 per car.

No closed cars could be more luxurious. That lining of Chase Mohair is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. A velour lining would save about two-thirds that cost—up to $100 per car.

Note how every detail denotes infinite care. That, as you know, is expensive.

Note the completeness of our larger models. The nickel-plated bumpers, extra disc wheels with cord tires, a steel trunk, a courtesy light. These are rare extras, even on the costliest cars,

Nothing is stinted

Then consider Studebaker history. For 72 years this name has stood for quality. When people rode in carriages, Studebaker built the best. Now those same traditions are applied to motor cars alone.

Consider Studebaker records. Mark how these cars in service have multiplied demand, until people last year paid $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Consider their service records. One Studebaker car, built in 1918, has run 475,000 miles. It is still in active service. It lately made a mid-winter trip from Los Angeles to New York. That means 80 years of average service, of 6,000 miles per year.

What more can you dream of in a motor car than the Studebakers offer?

Just Go and See

Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years — as people found them out.

Then go see them. Compare them with any car you will. Don't spend $1,000 or over without knowing what Studebaker offers. You owe that to yourself.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

Business has been booming at the Panama canal. The past year has seen it go to unexpected levels, and in view thereof it is not surprising that there has been and that there continues to be talk about increased canal facilities.

The Panama canal has not as yet been offered more traffic than it can handle, but it is clearly understood that such a time cannot be awaited before giving some attention to the problem of increasing the facilities for getting from one ocean to another.

Colonel Bunau-Varilla, who has been prominently identified with canal construction in that region, has sensed the need of making provision in the near future for new canal construction, and as might be expected he is strongly convinced that his own pet project of a sea level canal should be put through. He hasn't been convinced, in spite of the failure of the French effort to build the canal and the subsequent success of the ditch dug by this country, that his old time plan of digging the straits of Panama isn't the right one.

Sea level and lock canals were given much attention before as well as at the time when this government undertook the big job of cutting a way across the isthmus. There were reports favoring both, but the canal commission accepted the lock canal, though it was the minority report of the board of engineers. There is a decided difference between enlarging and deepening the present canal to make it a sea level waterway, and the construction of an entirely new canal probably along the Nicaraguan route. There exists the same objections as were raised at the time the lock canal plan was adopted, relative to the engineering problem concerning the Chagres river. But it is well that the merits of the respective methods of increasing canal facilities should be presented at the time that it may be known sufficient, in advance of any action just what is advisable. Had the canal not been meeting with so much favor the question might never have arisen again except for the purpose of discussions.

BALDWIN GOES DOWN.

In the ousting of the conservative government in England everything went according to schedule. It has been known for some time that the liberals under the leadership of Asquith would throw their support with the laborites in displaying a lack of confidence in the Baldwin government. That of course was the only way in which it could have been brought about, for while the conservative party is the largest in number it is but a minority under the united action of the other two.

Failing to get a vote of confidence the Baldwin ministry is at an end. It will be replaced by that which Ramsay Macdonald is ready to put to work, but here again the life of the labor ministry rests entirely in the hands of those outside of the party, since a combination of the conservatives and the liberals will trip it as quickly as the Baldwin government was ended. Because the liberals joined hands with the labor party in defeating the Baldwin government doesn't necessarily mean that they will continue to stand together. There is already much feeling among certain liberals that any such coalition was formed, even though it be but temporary. But being in the position that it will be when Macdonald takes up the reins as premier the labor party is prevented from taking any radical steps. It must be guided by the knowledge that its life depends upon the length of time it can meet the approval of the liberals. Thus the laborites are in the balance and being weighed by the opposition.

From the addresses that have been made the labor programme does not indicate any rash moves, but rather a recognition of the responsibilities involved in organizing the government. From the very beginning it will be obliged to deal with the strike of the railway employes which has been put into operation regardless of the embarrassment which might have been expected to accrue to the labor government. It will be the initial grasp of the helm by the laborites and an unusual test because of the conditions under which it is given control.

FIGHTING THE BOGUS.

Whatever is aimed at the fighting of the swindler must be regarded as an effort in the right direction. Neither those who have suffered at his hands nor those who may become his victims can have any very great admiration for such an individual. His very acts arouse public resentment and the demand becomes general for the termination of his activities.

Many are the instances where householders have lost through misrepresentation, the person claiming to be a certain workman when such was not the case. There are other instances where the one for whom work was being done was charged for first class journeymen when their very work in behind something else, but in Washington the master plumbers are to make cop upon what they term bogus plumbers, who fail to take out the necessary license, who do not know their business and who by faulty work are "very much the cause of spreading contagious diseases."

In behalf of the bogus workman of any kind there can be no sympathy. He stands under false colors but presumably claims the equivalent in pay of the genuine. It is therefore not only for the protection of the public but for their own welfare that the master plumbers of Washington are out to beat the frauds.

Whatever can be done to end illegal practices, whether it is in the plumbing line or whether directed against other craftsmen, doctors, dentists or candlestickmakers is in the interest of public protection. It is a move in which the legitimate practitioner, the licensed plumber or the experienced artisan may well give their support. The sooner the bogus individual is driven into the limelight the better it is for the honest workman and the relationship between the employed and the employer.

The frauds delight in getting something for nothing. They take advantage of the reliance which is placed in their ability, and like the giver of short weight, they need to be branded for what they are.

THE PRESIDENT'S POSITION.

President Coolidge has given his endorsement to the plan which has been recognized by Secretary Mellon for the reduction of taxation. He has been convinced that it is based upon sound reasoning and has been drafted in a businesslike manner. Under such circumstances it is not to be supposed that he is going to give his approval to this, that and the other proposition to change that plan.

He has done just what was to be expected of him in standing for the tax reduction in the first place and he sticks manfully to his position when he makes it plain that he has no intention of listening to any fundamental compromises.

President Coolidge serves notice that he has been driven to cover by the conduct of the insurrectionists of his own party in joining hands with the democrats. He has called for action for the national welfare, not action that calls for yielding to a small radical group, and he proposes to stand by it.

Secretary Mellon has given careful consideration to his tax reduction plan from all angles. He has reached his decision as an expert in finances and though his plan has been attacked for political reasons it hasn't been shown that it has any serious defects. Until that is done it is not to be expected that there will be any sound reason for rushing into compromise, or making deals on this or that amendment. He has already applied his endorsement. Whether congress takes a similar view is something for congress to decide, but it cannot be unmindful of the fact that tax reduction is demanded from coast to coast and from border to border and it is highly dangerous for those who through the playing of politics stand in the way of such legislation.

THE SHENANDOAH'S TEST.

That those who are closely identified with the Shenandoah and others who are experts in aviation are highly pleased at the demonstration given by the big dirigible in the recent storm serves to inspire confidence among others. There is no getting away from the fact that the big airship was put to a hard test, that it acquitted itself admirably during the hours it was in the air before the storm abated and that it was under the guidance of skilled hands.

It is impossible, however, to overlook the fact, that, though this test and its outcome were highly pleasing, conditions over northern New Jersey are somewhat different than in the wild expanse of northern Alaska and beyond, where there is no hangar handy, where the necessary number of hands to bring the dirigible down are not available and where storms of quite as great severity are to be expected.

It was a test which served nevertheless to increase confidence after the loss of the Dixmude, but whether it convinces those who have had their doubts about the wisdom of such a trip that the Shenandoah can withstand anything it encounters is another question. The storm serves to emphasize the fact that there are big risks involved. Much may be gained from a successful flight over the pole in several ways, but in spite of the confidence which the riding out of the recent storm established in the big dirigible there is no ground for getting the impression that it is going to be a joy ride attended with only normal risks. If wishes were all that were necessary it could now be put down for a triumphant flight. Renewed confidence in the dirigible will help, but it should not be allowed to minimize the danger.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Thus far snowshovels are a decided drug on the market.

The man on the corner says: Just a reminder that no mistake has been made in the season.

Are your new resolutions still standing the wear and tear of the leap year, and are they still undented?

Food for thought is about the only thing, lest it be advice, that is to be found in considerable quantity at no expense.

Trying to kill mah jong by calling it a gambling game will get nowhere. Others have long been thriving under the same cry.

The many demands for the removal of various taxes show what importance is attached to the cutting of taxes as much as possible.

England is a small country in size but when it reports but one railroad accident where life was lost last year it makes this country sit up and take notice.

If, as one authority claims, it will require 25 years to pay off our federal debt under the Mellon plan, the sooner the full benefit of it can be obtained the better.

It will cost a quarter of a million to repair the Leviathan after going on a mud bank in New York harbor. Probably would have been the same had there been a silent policeman there.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Washington, D. C., Jan 21.—Congressman Tilson of New Haven was this week called into conference by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon regarding the probable outcome of the tinkering of the Mellon tax bill as now before the ways and means committee on which Tilson is an influential member. Although Mr. Tilson said later he felt it improper to quote the secretary it was quite evident Mr. Mellon believes that the reduction of tax bill will pass either at the present session or in the near future along lines practically identical with the bill he now recommends. Mr. Mellon is understood to be so thoroughly convinced that it would bring quick relief from the great tax burden now being carried by the people of the country that it is but a question of time before his recommendation will be followed. Although the general feeling here is that the bill cannot pass the insurgent-democratic coalition in its present form, Col. Tilson and others who advocate the bill in its entirety say they don't propose to run away before the fight begins and give concessions until they become necessary.

The league of women voters is urging lobbying in the open, and its president Mrs. Maud Wood Parks recently said in an interview that the woman's lobby had purified politics and stood as one of the splendid constitutions of the day. That, however is a sentiment very strongly denied by many men and women who believe the consistent heckling and threats held over congress by women lobbyists is far from resulting in safe sane and free legislation. Last year a move was made to have all lobbyists registered, as is the custom in certain states, but nothing was done about bringing it to a vote. The league held an executive board meeting here this week which was attended by Miss Katherine Luddington of Connecticut.

"East is east and west is west" among republicans and democrats when politics are in the foreground but it don't hold good in cloak room and corridor. When Col. William J. Bryan dropped into the house a few days ago, to confer and advise with Jack Garner and Finis Garrett, the two democratic leaders on the Mellon tax bill and revision of the rules of the house, he was quickly surrounded by a group of members in which it was a fifty fifty mixture of republicans and democratics. Then along came Col. Sam Winslow of Massachusetts who tips the scales somewhere round 300 or more. Bryan is a big man too, and for a moment t'would have been hard to say which of the two men so utterly opposed in political and sectional sentiment—pated the other most heartily on his back, or smiled the broadest.

Mrs. Coolidge, whose methods and manners set a splendid pace for the women of the country, to follow, this week showed that she has tact and patience beyond the ordinary accepted code of high society. Mrs. Coolidge had an appointment at the photographers for a picture which included her two sons. She arrived a few minutes ahead of time and also learned that the photographer was still engaged with a troublesome "pose." Did Mrs. Coolidge fret or show signs of impatience or resent the delay, as most persons of high social and political standing might have done? Not a bit of it. She sat down and took from the silk bag she carried, a pair of silk socks she is knitting for one of the boys, and calmly knitted till the photographer, with profuse apologies, appeared and was ready to give the Coolidges a sitting.

Mrs. John Q. Tilson of New Haven, wife of the congressman from the third Connecticut district, is an ardent lover of out door sports as well as being a rare type of a truly domestic wife and mother. She drives her own car and up on Lake Sunapee, New Hampshire, where the Tilson's have a fine summer camp Mrs. Tilson runs the motor boat and is a campfire expert. But she capped the climax this week, when one fine day she said to herself, "Why don't I take a little ride out to Washington and see how John is getting on"—for not wanting to bring up the Tilson children in a city hotel it often happens that "John" finds himself alone in the capitol while Mrs. Tilson is home with the three children. Now that "little ride" covers a distance of more than 300 miles, but Mrs. Tilson phoned a nearby neighbor saying "I start tomorrow morning at six will you go?" "Fine" called back the lady across the way. So the next morning Mrs. Tilson and her friend started out, crossed New York, Philadelphia and other crowded traffic cities, were once held up and courteously dismissed as "above suspicion" by police watching out to recover a stolen car, and finally made Washington at 8 a. m. Tired? Not a bit of it. Anxious about getting into the capitol long after dark? Not a bit of it, 'twas "John" who did the worrying.

The honeyed words of Jack Garner, ranking member of the democratic side of the ways and means committee to the effect that the democrats would join hands with the republicans in putting through a tax reduction measure have turned sour. Now that sentiment has been sent broadcast through the country to fall on appreciative ears, the same Jack Garner sets out to defeat the Mellon bill by proposing a substitute that tears the Mellon bill fore and aft. Mellon denounces the Garner proposition and Garner goes into a coalition move with the insurgent republicans to block the progress of the Mellon measure. And there the matter stands at this moment. The Connecticut delegation are strongly in favor of the Mellon bill as it stands.

Magnus Johnson, senator from Minnesota now sits on the republican side of the main aisle, but can he hold his position there if he continues "to fall" for the candidacy of democratic women? A short time ago Johnson went into Virginia to make an after dinner speech on "Fruit Culture" at the invitation of an agricultural association. The other speaker was Miss Izetta Jewell Brown, an attractive widow and former actress, and who is making a run for the United States senate on the democratic platform. The dirt farmer senator had never met Mrs. Brown, and her clever announcement of her proposed candidacy roused him to such a degree of enthusiasm that when he rose to speak on "fruit growing" he burst into a political tribute to the lady instead. Shouting in his megaphone tones and peculiar dialect the Minnesota senator closed by saying "My yimminy, she's yumped right into the ring—and I'm coming down here to help elect her to the senate."

NEW BOOKS

The coast of Folly. By Coningsby Dawson. Illustrated by C. D. Mitchell. Cloth, 341 pages. Published by Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York. Price $2.

Coningsby Dawson in his new novel deals with the real character of the girls who are going to be women of the next generation. The story sets forth so powerfully the dangers which beset every girl who dare to play with fire" that it rushes the reader breathlessly to a climax and then into a surprising love story with a whole new series of unsuspected suspenses.

Joyde Gathway a carerree debutant enters into a pal-arrangement with Larry Fay, handsome, unhappy and married. Society eagerly watches the pair for scandalous developments, when Mrs. Fay a beautifully silken creature enters to get her freedom and proceeds to trample Joyce in the mire. The storm breaks and Joyce is condemned before the evidence is heard. That's why a girl cannot afford to be a daring, says Mr. Dawson.

But Mrs. Fay's counsel, lawyer though he is and working against Joyce finds in her to be a child of folly and not a daughter of sin and there is an idyl in the story of the love which grew up between them. The development of their love is narrated with a beauty which only a master of language and a keen analyst of the feminine heart could command. Dawson is at his best in his latest novel.

TOUCHING TALES

"Wait a minute!" said the man who was always forgetting something. "I wanta go in here and buy some Gettem's marvel soap to wash my dog, Hector. We have been very careful of Hector, but in some manner or other he has acquired a flea or so and they make him unhappy!"

"Be very careful about Gettem's soap," advised the man who always had personal experiences upon which to draw to enliven the conversation. "Gettem may be a very fine scientist and his soap may be the wonder of the age, but its use may eternally alienate from you Hector's affections.

"I am thinking of our little dog Rosita, who has been cared for like a royal princess and yet who suffered the same affliction as your Hector. The Dillbecks told us to use, by all means, Purple Powder, which was warranted to slay anything that flew or crept. The Dillbecks said they had used Purple Powder for years on the rosebushes and sunflowers in their gardens and that whenever an invader that flew or hopped approached a rosebud or a sunflower blossom it halted as though stunned and turned a somersault in its efforts to escape rapidly. It was absolutely harmless and recommended for one's household pets as well.

"Taking trusting Rosita in hand we liberally endowed her with Purple Powder and then, much injured, she retired to a corner and licked off all she could, with the result that we arose at midnight and rang up two veterinaries, who saved her life at the cost of $25, to say nothing of our night's slumbers.

"Rosita was so low in spirits after the Purple Powder that I decided to give her a bath tinctured with Loon's lotion, which a fellow at the club told me about it.

"Rosita, however, did not seem to comprehend what was expected of her, because when I dropped her into the nice bath of Loon's lotion she gave one exasperated bark and bit me, not a playbite, but the kind that makes one yelp. Afterward she had a chill and that cost me an extra five for advice over the telephone.

"By this time Rosita was all jumpy and tempery and I rather hesitated about applying Buster's Balm, which I heard about from a man I met on the train. He said one application of this soothing and invigorating medicine would make a new dog of our little pet, and I was very anxious to try it. Rosita was sort of languid by this time and I managed to rub in Buster's Balm very thoroughly.

"You simply would not have recognised Rosita the next morning. There wasn't a scrap of fur left on the animal. She'd have taken a prize anywhere as the giant Mexican hairless fresh from the border country. And, what was worse, she seemed to have laid it up against me—blamed me for the whole affair.

"Still Philo Hatbox had a worse time with his pet cat Timothy. Timothy was a massive creature with emerald eyes and a scornful way of surveying the world and he had a velvet cushion to sleep on and never went out of doors save to step daintily across the lawn under the guardianship of the family. But Timothy, too after strolling through the grass, suffered from the jumping plague of all animals and Philo said that of course a cat was a cat but he didn't see why it needed to be treated otherwise than as one treats a dog. So seizing Timothy by the scruff of the neck he attempted to drop him into a bowl filled with foamy, soapy water.

"Results might have been different had he explained beforehand to Timothy, for the startled animal, at the touch of water, turned rigid, did a cartwheel, incidentally dragging its claws over Philo's face, and then sprang ker-plunk on top of Philo's head, thence into the middle of a fernery, then knocked a twenty dollar pair of glasses smashing to the floor, ripped a window curtain to tatters and had a fit all over the place. He hasn't spoken to any member of the family since. I'm just telling you these little occurrences because I thought they might have a bearing—"

"C'mon," said the man who was always forgetting something, turning away from the drug store very definitely. "I guess I haven't time tonight to buy that Gettem's soap anyway!"—Exchange.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS

Misunderstanding of the provisions of the revenue act relating to personal expenditures is indicated in the returns of many taxpayers. Some claims are made for deductions of house rent, car fare to and from the tax payer's place of business, amounts spent in improvement of the taxpayer's dwellign, and similar items. All these are personal or living expenses, deduction of which from gross income is expressly disallowed by the statute.

A physician who maintains an office in a rented home may deduct the proportion of such rent properly chargeable to the portions used for professional purposes. If, however, he maintains an office elsewhere and incidentally receives patients at his home, he is not entitled to deduct any part of his rent for his residence as a business expense.

If a physician owns the home or building in which his office is located, no deduction for rent is allowed unless the amount of rent claimed is reported by him as income. The reason is that money paid as rent becomes income to some one, and, in this instance, the physician is that person. However, a professional man who maintains an office in a home or building owned by him may deduct as a business expense a proportional part of the amount properly chargeable to the use of such offices for heat, light, insurance, repairs, depreciation, etc., which he may not deduct on that part of the house used as a residence.

Other deductions not infrequently claimed by taxpayers but disallowed by the revenue act as "family or living expenses" are amounts spent for food, clothing and education of children, hire of domestic servants, and similar items for the upkeep of a home.

POETRY

To a Fur Beard

The trap jaws clinked and held him fast;
None marked his fright; none heard his cries.
His struggles ceased; he lay at last
With wide, uncomprehending eyes

And watched the sky grow dark above,
And watched the sunset burn to gray,
And quaked in anguish while he strove
To gnaw the prisoned leg away.

Then day came rosy from the East,
But still those steel jaws kept their hold
And no one watched the prisoned beast
But Fear and Hunger, Thirst and Cold.

Oppressed by pain, his dread grew numb;
Fright no more stirred his flagging breath.
He longed in vain to see him come
The awful biped, bringing death.

The day flapped past on heavy wing.
He saw the shadows longer grow
A hopeless, wracked and dying thing
Encircled by the trampled snow.

Then through the gloom that night cast
One
Who set the timid spirit free.
"I know thy anguish, little son,
So once men trapped and tortured me."
—F. F. V., in New York Tribune.

Winter Night

You are so blue and still and cold
You are so young—you are so old,
You chill my blood and make it freeze
With you unspoken mysteries—
You thrill my blood and make it burn
When old desires to beauty turn.

Yours is the iron hearted will,
Yours, the purpose to fulfil;
You are the hidden womb of earth
Where seeds lie dormant until birth—
The paradox of life and death
Within a shroud of icy breath.

Yours is the secret buried deep
Under the still, cold hand of sleep.
—Sally Bruce Kinsolving in New York Herald.

The waste was reclaimed in good time and Denmark became a land of butter, eggs and bacon.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. —(Adv.)

BONUS WILL COST CONNECTICUT $1,589,300

Connecticut will be one of the fifteen states to "suffer hardship" if the bonus bill passes, according to a compilation announced in Washington Monday by Congressman Snyder of New York. On the other hand, his figures show that "thirty-eight states and territories will benefit financially by the enactment of a bonus measure."

Mr. Snyder figures on the basis of $500 to each of the 3,900,000 men who served in the army alone. He gives the amount each state and territory will receive and the amount they will turn back into the treasury, based on the 1923 report of the treasury department.

Mr. Snyder states that Connecticut will pay taxes amounting to $1,589,300 above the amount received by the soldiers of the state. He arrives at this conclusion as follows: Connecticut had 51,751 soldiers in the army. Their bonus payments will amount to $25,875,500, whereas the cost in taxes to the state in 1923 amounted to $27,464,800, leaving a loss of $1,589,300 to the state.

Mr. Snyder states: "These figures are not guaranteed to be absolutely accurate, but are in all cases within a few thousand dollars of the correct amount. The figures are conservative, being compiled on a much lower basis than those given out by the actuaries of the treasury department."

Massachusetts and Rhode Island will also pay more in taxes than they will receive from the bonds. On the other hand, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont will each receive over $3,000,000 more from the bonus than they pay in taxes.

GIVES CLEAR EXPLANATION OF THE ANTHRACITE COAL SITUATION

"Since 1913 the price of anthracite coal, chestnut size, has increased 99.5 per cent, which is less than the increases in almost everything else," declared Hon. Byron R. Newton of New York city, in an address Monday night at the Wauregan house before the membership meeting of the chamber of commerce. "But the kick has not been so much about the price you have had to pay," continued Mr. Newton, "but the trouble has been that you couldn't get it when you wanted it. One man can shut down the mines whenever he pleases. He has done it and he probably will continue to do it. As President Harding said in his almost pathetic plea: 'This country is at the mercy of the United Mine Workers of America. The leaders of the union are drunk with power, a power greater than any other in the United States that denies the president and the United States government. They will not submit to arbitration.'"

Answering his own question of what he would advise should be done to remedy this situation, which results in unwarranted interruption in the even flow of coal to the consumers, Mr. Newton said that he would suggest that a special commission be constituted to determine what would be a fair wage for the miners. When this was determined by the commission, it could be offered to the miners. If they didn't want to work of course they could not be compelled to work, but they could be told to step aside so that somebody else could work. And the commission should have one other power conferred upon it—the power of injunction to restrain the miners from committing murder—the murder of those who would go to work.

Mr. Newton, who has been assistant treasurer of the United States and collector of the port of New York, came here as the speaker for the January meeting and luncheon of the board of trade, which had an attendance of about 100. The luncheon was held at 6.15, with music by Swahn's orchestra and William G. Park acting as song leader.

President H. M. Lerou introduced the speaker who was warmly applauded at several points in his address and was given a rising vote of thanks just before the meeting adjourned.

As he concluded his interesting address, Mr. Newton invited any coal dealer present to speak a word or two and Lucius Briggs of the Edward Chappell company accepted the invitation, thanking Mr. Newton for the address he had given, which Mr. Briggs declared was the clearest exposition of the anthracite coal situation that he had ever listened to. Mr. Briggs also agreed with a suggestion made by Mr. Newton that one potent way to cut down the household coal bill by one-half or one-third was by using the small sizes of anthracite, the so-called steam sizes. Mr. Briggs said that the Chappell company offices and his own home were heated by small size coal with greater satisfaction and economy than with the large sizes. The secret lay in having heaters properly equipped to burn the small sizes.

Address by Mr. Newton.

Mr. Newton spoke in substance as follows:

The anthracite coal industry is being strangled and bled to death by handicaps and difficulties which the people do not understand. The price is too high, the supply is insufficient and the quality is sometimes below standard. These things annoy and distress us and we curse the owners and operators of the mines in the blind assumption that they are responsible for all the trouble. But they are not!

The difficulties which are threatening the very life of their industry are absolutely beyond their control. The coal industry of the United States is today fettered and bound in the grasp of the most powerful labor organization in the world. It can, it has, and it probably will, continue to increase the cost and restrict the production of anthracite and even the Federal Government seems powerless to check or even modify its monopolistic and tyrannical control.

The leader of this powerful organization can demand an unwarranted increase in wages that will add many millions to the production cost and that demand must be obeyed. His will in the matter is absolute. The demands must be met or he will close the mines. He will not arbitrate, he will not submit the matter to the determination of the courts or any tribunal of impartial minds as all other citizens must do.

It is a case of "grant what we demand or suffer the consequences." And nearly every serious ill from which the anthracite industry is suffering today is directly traceable to this unrestricted power of the United Mine Workers of America.

If you will take the trouble to look into the situation you will find that the high price, the insufficient supply and the uneven quality are all largely due to these periodical strikes which shut off all production for months at a time, together with the continuous petty strikes at the collieries which cost the operators millions of dollars every year.

Where the Trouble Lies

A cursory glance at the situation will show you very convincingly how so many costly conditions follow in the wake of these labor troubles. The annual output of the anthracite field is about 73,000,000 tons. All of that production is taken up annually in the anthracite consuming field, so that under normal conditions, supply and demand are nicely balanced and the industry is in a well stabilized condition. Now let us suppose that a five months shut down occurs as it did in 1922. What happens?

First of all the owners of the mines are subjected to an enormous dead loss, for the closing of a coal mine is expensive business because of the care that must be taken to keep it free from water and other dangers and deterioration.

Then there is a gap created in the production and the whole industry is thrown out of gear to such an extent that it takes years to regain normal conditions. An usually these strikes, or threatened strikes come along in such order that they overlap and the industry does not fully regain a normal condition. If the strike continues for any considerable period, the great multitude of consumers become alarmed, and when production at the mines is finally resumed, all manner of evils follow. The market is panicky. It opens the road for all sorts of gouging and profiteering by outsiders and unscrupulous dealers. The supply is insufficient for the demand. Prices go up. There is feverish pressure everywhere and the preparation of the coal at the mines is rushed to a point where the quality may suffer. All these abnormal conditions mean increase in cost to say nothing of the millions of dollars that the operators may have been forced to add to the wages of the miners, all of which must be added to the production cost, because, regardless of all erroneous beliefs to the contrary, the owners and operators of the anthracite mines as a whole, are not realizing as much today on their investment and operations as most of the other basic in-

McLEAN ON RECORD AS FAVORING TAX REDUCTION

Senator George P. McLean of Connecticut, Chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, one of the twenty United States Senators quoted in the February issue of The Financial Digest, goes emphatically on record as in favor of tax reduction and also on record as opposed to the issuance of non-taxable securities in the future. Senator George H. McGee of New Hampshire and Senator Bert M. Fernald, former Governor of Maine, are other New England senators who emphatically favor tax reduction.

In all, The Financial Digest quotes twelve of the foremost senators as favoring tax reduction at this time, including Senator Reed Smoot, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, Senator Frank B. Willis of Ohio, who succeeded President Harding as senator, Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, Senator Key Pittman, Senator Thomas Sterling and Senator O. E. Weller.

Senator McLean says in part "If Democrats vote their convictions we ought to be able to reduce taxes and approve a resolution amending the Constitution so as to prohibit the issuance of non-taxable securities." Senator McLean further predicts that the present year will see business conditions fully as favorable, if not better, than in 1923. If European conditions improve, he looks for a decided betterment.

MASALSKY TRIAL NEXT IN CRIMINAL COURT

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Jan. 21—The next case to be started in the criminal term of the superior court at Norwich Wednesday will probably be that of Anthony Masalsky of Norwich, charged with aggravated assault. Acting State's Attorney Warren B. Burrows stated today that it was his intention to have the case started if he could obtain the necessary witnesses between today and Wednesday. There will be no session of the court Tuesday because many of the attorneys representing prisoners to be tried will attend a meeting of the state bar association in New Haven tonight and would be unable to reach Norwich before tomorrow noon, necessitating the holding of court only in the afternoon. Rather than hold court but a few hours it was decided to discontinue a session Tuesday and resume trials Wednesday. Acting State's Attorney Burrows also stated that it was his belief that court would adjourn at the end of the week.

Mrs. Partridge expressed her appreciation of the gift and informed her friends that the occasion would always be a pleasant one in her memory.

WAS FORMERLY MINISTER OF NORWICH, ENG., CHAPEL

There is local interest in the announcement that Rev. Margaret Brakenbury Crook of Smith College faculty is to be the speaker this (Tuesday) afternoon at Connecticut college convocation, as she was formerly minister of the Octagon Chapel, Norwich, England.

In the spring of 1918 Miss Crook was invited to become a minister in the Octagon Chapel. Coming of a long line of non-conformist ministers, the heritage of the Octagon seemed to be legitimately hers. This famous old church, which in the opinion of John Wesley was "perhaps the most elegant meeting house in all Europe," was built in 1756 to replace an even older building. From the beginning this church has stood for the theological liberalism which has made made such giant strides in other Protestant churches. During the years of her ministry Miss Crook was in much demand in all parts of England and preached in many of the big cities ending with a tour of the north of England before coming to the United States for the second time in 1920.

Upon her arrival in the United States she accepted temporarily the position of national secretary of Womens' International League for peace and freedom and made many speeches on international relations, and shortly afterward in 1921, came to Smith college in this capacity when she accepted an invitation to fill a vacant place in the department of Biblical Literature of the college. Last year she was promoted to associate professorship in the department. Since her appointment at Smith, Miss Crook has by no means been out of the ministry, having preached and delivered addresses both in and outside the college.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—(By The A. P.)—Young Jake Schaefer, son of the famous wizard, defeated Champion Willie Hoppe, 500 to 369 tonight in the first block of their 1,500 point match for the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship.

The score by innings:
Schaefer 1, 92, 0, 0, 0, 0, 7, 85, 0, 170, 28, 69, 48r—total 500.
Hoppe 0, 17, 0, 0, 18, 1, 4, 180, 9, 27, 1, 112—total 369.
High runs, Schaefer 170; Hoppe 180.
Averages, Schaefer 38 6-13; Hoppe, 30 9-13.

The Play in Detail.

Schaefer won the lag, selected the white ball and after making the break shot, missed on a short side rail shot. Hoppe also missed.

In the second inning Schaefer had the balls together on the second shot. He kept them so for 13 points. On his 14th shot the two white balls were nearly frozen at one side at the foot of the table with the red ball on the opposite side, but he scored with a perfect three cushion shot. The balls spread on his 21st but he soon had them back and keeping them at the foot of the table, ran 92. He missed on a cross table one cushion bank.

Hoppe on his second turn at the table found the balls in good position along the left rail but was unable to get them together. He ran 17, all but two of which were open table shots and missed on a center table three cushion.

Schaefer found a difficult leave and attempting a three cushion, missed. He left Hoppe safe and the champion missed.

In the fourth inning both played safe. In the fifth Schaefer missed again. Hoppe, after four beautiful three cushion shots, had the balls together. Like Schaefer, he seemed to prefer the foot of the table. He ran 18 and then missed on a short draw masse. Score at the end of the fifth inning: Schaefer 93; Hoppe 35.

Schaefer missed a one cushion draw in the sixth inning and Hoppe could score but one.

Schaefer made seven in the seventh, all open table shots, missing on a cross table follow. Hoppe had a difficult time making four.

Both players were careful of their leads and appeared to figure more on leaving the other safe than on the shots.

In the eighth inning the challenger, by brilliant draws, masses and drives, rapidly ran 12 at which point he had the balls nestling in balk back at the foot of the table. Displaying masterly control he soon tallied 73 more or a total of 85 for the inning. He missed on a one cushion shot.

Hoppe, finding the balls in good position appeared to have little difficulty in keeping them that way. He ran 70 before the balls moved away from the foot of the table. At 71 they strung along the rail but after two more shots he had them together at the head of the table. He continued to score and was cheered when at 145 he had tied Schaefer's total. At 177 the balls spread. He made three points more but missed on the 181st. The score at the end of the eighth inning: Schaefer 185; Hoppe 230.

Schaefer drew a blank in the ninth. Hoppe found a fair leave but could make only nine.

Jake started the tenth with a marvelous three cushion shot. He appeared to get bad breaks and only his extraordinary open table work saved him. At 14 he succeeded in gathering the ivories. They were at the head of the table and playing with absolute confidence, his touch and control nearly perfect, he ran 160.

His judgment of speed was not so good and he continued to get line-ups. Up to this point he had to shoot ten masses and nine bank shots. On his 161st shot his ball was about frozen to one object ball near the left rail. The red ball was on the other side of the table near the head. Jake made a perfect masse sending his ball to the head cushion and then directly to the red ball. He ran nine more for a total of 170, then missed a one cushion draw. Hoppe made 27, missing a cushion first shot.

In the eleventh inning Schaefer's judgment of speed again was poor. He ran 28 after overcoming two line-ups but missed when he tried to make a third line-up by a three cushion shot. Hoppe made one.

The challenger found the balls spread in the twelfth but by superb open table play grouped them after seven shots. With apparent ease and confidence he ran 62 more after missing his seventieth shot, a straight short draw.

Hoppe, trailing Schaefer by 195 points took advantage of a good leave and brought all of his billiard wizardry into play. His delicate but firm touch, his judgment of speed and distance, gave him perfect control of the balls. He kept them at the head of the table in and out of balk and except for a few times the object ball would not travel further than half way across the table to the side rail and back. He ran 113, missing a shot masse, his fourth of the run.

The score at the end of the twelfth inning: Schaefer 452; Hoppe 369.

Schaefer started the thirteenth inning by making a masse similar to one Hoppe had just missed and in quick succession made two more. He had no difficulty in keeping the balls in good position until his 43rd shot but he gathered them on the next and ran out with an unfinished run of 48. The score: Schaefer 500; Hoppe 369.

NEW CREWS MAY ROW IN INTERCOLLEGIATE REGATTA

New York, Jan. 21.—(By the A. P.) In line with a policy to make its annual regatta an open championship the Intercollegiate Rowing Association has dispatched invitations to a number of colleges outside the organization's membership to take part in the 1924 races.

Those invited so far, according to Maxwell Stevenson, chairman of the board of stewards of the I. R. A., include the Naval Academy and Princeton, Washington, Leland Stanford and California universities. There may be additions to this list he said.

All of those invited except Princeton have competed in the blue ribbon rowing classic before. Washington captured the varsity feature last June in its fourth visit to the Hudson, ending a two year period of supremacy by the Annapolis midshipmen who finished second.

From 1888 to 1914 a span of 14 years Wisconsin sent its crew east annually but the best the Badgers could do was to gain second place on four occasions.

No replies have been received as yet to any of the invitations Mr. Stevenson said, but it is unlikely the Naval Academy will enter again. The Middies plan to center their efforts in the Olympic tryouts which are to be held at Philadelphia, June 13 and 14.

The college regatta scheduled June 17 conflicts with the Olympic trials so that crews competing at Philadelphia are not expected to go to Poughkeepsie where the I. R. A. events will be held if present plans of the stewards materialize.

Members of the Rowing Association are Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Syracuse.

TIE FOR FIRST PLACE IN SAINTS INDOOR LEAGUE

As the result of victories by the Yankees and Reds in the indoor baseball league these two teams are now tied for first place in the St. Patrick's Indoor league. The games were close both teams fighting tooth and nail to emerge victors. In the first game the Yankees won out in the seventh inning from the Tigers when Shea stole home after he had hit safely and had been advanced to third on a bunt by Drew. The score was 3 to 2. The second game was a hot battle between the Reds and the Giants, the Reds showing themselves the better team by winning two to one. The Murphy brothers and the Mingo boys were the features in hitting and fielding. The standing:

	W	L	Pc.
Reds	4	1	.800
Yankees	4	1	.800
Tigers	3	2	.600
Giants	2	3	.400

NATIONAL BOXING BODY NOT IN FAVOR OF MULDOON

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 21.—Indications today are that members of the national boxing commission, in annual convention here, are not in favor of the selection of William Muldoon, former chairman of the New York boxing commission as "the Judge Landis of the pugilistic world."

When approached by W. F. Sailor, secretary of the Minnesota boxing commission and originator of the Muldoon chairman idea delegates to the convention, without exception, it is said, refused to express their approval of the plan. Several of the delegates, who include 16 from the United States and one from Cuba, went a bit further in their declarations, and declared they were opposed to the movement.

Mr. Sailor said a number of the leaders in the boxing game in his state were willing to subscribe $2,500 toward a suitable salary for Mr. Muldoon should he be given the post.

Richard T. Burke, of New Orleans, president of the association, submitted his annual report which was adopted and said the boxing commission of France had expressed a desire to affiliate with the National Boxing Association.

DSAN IS FIRST OF GIANTS ROOKIE HOLDOUTS

New York, Jan. 21.—Wayland Dean, star pitcher of the Louisville club of the American Association recently purchased by the New York Giants today returned unsigned the 1924 contract sent him by the National league champions. Dean, who thus becomes the first Giant holdout informed the club that financial terms offered him were not satisfactory.

Giants officials did not reveal whether Dean was dissatisfied with salary terms or whether he wanted a portion of the purchase price which was said to have amounted to the equivalent of more than $50,000 in cash and players.

His case recalled the fact that the Giants experienced difficulty signing another expensive pitching recruit a year ago. Jack Bentley, whose release from the Baltimore Orioles cost John McGraw about $65,00. Bentley demanded a share of the purchase price and did not report until a settlement was made with him.

DUNDEE SIGNED TO MEET PANAMA CHAMPION

New York, Jan. 21.—James J. Johnston, manager of Johnny Dundee, featherweight and junior lightweight champion, today confirmed cable reports that he had closed negotiations for a match in Panama on February 22 with Jose Lombardo, Panama featherweight champion. Dundee's 130-pound title will be the only one at stake.

The match was closed, Johnston said, when Panama promoters met his financial conditions, which call for advance payment of $10,000 of the $15,000 guarantee offered the Italian-American.

Dundee is matched to fight Pal Moran of New Orleans, at Madison Square Garden February 1 in another of the lightweight elimination series. He plans to sail for Panama on February 7. Lombardo is little known outside of Central America but record books reveal an unusual string of knockouts to his credit. His 1923 record is not listed but in 1922, Lombardo scored eleven knockouts in twelve fights, four of them in one round. He won the decision in his other contest.

Lombardo is 23 years old and weighs about 124. He was born in Panama.

FIRPO MUST MEET ROMERO-ROJAS IN 90 DAYS

New York, Jan. 21.—The South American boxing confederation has taken a leaf out of the New York state athletic commission's book of fistic procedure in fixing a time limit for Luis Firpo to defend his heavyweight title against Romero-Rojas, Chilean challenger.

Its action in giving Firpo 90 days to meet his rival is even more drastic than the rule of the New York ring solons, who compel champions to defend their titles within six months of the filing of a challenge or face forfeiture of championship recognition.

Romero-Rojas has done most of his boxing in France. His most notable achievement occurred early in December when he knocked out Marcel Nillis, leading French heavyweight, in three rounds.

FUCHS DECLINES TO DISCUSS CARDINAL DEAL

New York, Jan. 21.—Emil E. Fuchs, vice president of the Boston Nationals, left this afternoon for Boston after declining to shed further light on a prospective deal with St. Louis which he and Christy Mathewson, president of the Braves, discussed Saturday with Branch Rickey, manager of the Cardinals.

The Braves have several deals in mind which will strengthen the club for the 1924 race, Mr. Fuchs intimated, but aside from admitting that he discussed with Rickey the possibility of obtaining Rogers Hornsby, famous second baseman, and Jeff Pfeffer, veteran pitcher, he did not reveal definite plans.

The Braves, however, entertain small hope of landing Hornsby, whose price has been fixed at an almost prohibitive figure, while the Cardinals' star himself is quoted as saying he intends to play with St. Louis again.

Earl Smith, Boston catcher, has been suggested as possible trading timber in the negotiations between the Cardinals and Braves, particularly as Rickey is known to be after a receiver.

RICKARD OFFERS FIRPO $200,000 TO MEET WILLS

Buenos Aires, Jan. 21 (By the A. P.)—Luis Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, received a cablegram from Tex Rickard today offering $200,000 for a fight between him and Harry Wills in July and proposing another fight between Firpo and Jack Dempsey in September.

Firpo said he would not decide until the arrival of Hugh Gartland, his New York representative, who is on his way here and who notified Firpo that he had an offer of $250,000 for a fight with Wills from Newark promoters.

Firpo explained that he was no longer bound by the agreement he made with Rickard after the Dempsey match to fight Wills, because the time limit for Wills' signature to the agreement had expired; hence he was at liberty to accept the Newark offer. Rickard said in his message to Firpo that it had been difficult to arrange a match with Wills.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

At the Lyceum Theatre, New London

New Year's resolutions are made to be broken but if this serves as a truism recognized by man in general, count Louis John Bartels out of this category. Mr. Louis John Bartels who plays the main part in George Kelly's newest play, "The Show Off" which will be presented at the Lyceum New London Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee, made a resolution on January 1st that he has already lived up to. He resolved then to find a job in a legitimate production in a major capacity during 1924. Before the 2d of January had passed into calendaric history, he was signed up by Stewart & French, producers of "The Show-Off" to essay one of the leading roles in this new 3 act comedy-drama by the author of "The Torch-Bearers."

Louis John Bartels won his spurs in small parts with Ethel Barrymore, Grace George, Marguerite Anglin and in "Seventeen," a Booth Tarkington comedy of youth.

"Small parts, while they give you read and butter" said Mr. Bartels, "do not give you an opportunity to impress theatregoers with your ability. They realize that you are in the cast, of course, but the real honors go to those who have larger parts. All my life I have dreamed of the day when I would be given a real part to play but it wasn't until the New Year when resolutions were in order that I determined finally that my one big resolution would be to get a big part in a play destined for Broadway consumption. Usually, I make ten or fifteen resolutions and they are all broken before February rolls around. This year I made but one so as not to develate from my course by the weight of other resolutions and found success in this formula."

ARMY-NAVY FIVE CLASHES WITH K. OF C. QUINTET OF STAFFORD THIS EVENING

What promises to be one of the hardest fought games of the basketball season will take place this evening at Parish Hall when the fast Kaceys of Stafford Springs meet the strong Army-Navy five. This is the second time the Stafford quintet has played here this season, their first appearance resulting in a victory for the local boys, due to the fact that Stafford was handicapped by the loss of several of their first string men.

This time, however, the Kacey management will bring down the strongest lineup and is confident of evening up the series with the locals. The Stafford Kaceys will have "Squirrel" Pollanck and Joe Belair as forwards. Pollanck, who is very popular with basketball fans in the state, is a fast man and is expected to be the most dangerous of the visiting five. Joe Belair, former captain and star forward of the Army-Navy club and now coach of Plainfield, will be Pollanck's forward mate, making a combination that will play backfield. The latter is a prominent high school star.

The Army-Navy five has recovered from last weeks game and after a stiff workout on Monday evening declared the team to be in the pink of condition to come out of tonight's battle with a victory. The Army-Navy team will have "Mondi" Normandin and Harry Mills as forwards; T. Coleman will jump center, with "Hop" Harmon and G. Coleman at guard. Lemieux and Molleur will be utility men. Harmon needs no introduction to the basketball public of eastern Connecticut, having performed ceditably here before on several occasions. Followers of the game will recall the XYZ team of Hartford which defeated the Crescent A. A. three years ago and will agree that the all around good playing of Harmon was a big factor in the success of his team.

The fans will watch with interest the preliminary game between the Army-Navy Seconds and the local team which is dubbed "The Sons of Rest". The Seconds will use their regular lineup and the Sons will have "Bunt" Hasler and Connie Pepin, forwards; Sullivan, center; Jack Chance and "Kid" DeCelles, guards.

Then she added that she was being supported by her aunt, a resident of Newport and who desired that Florence should recuperate in this city. It will be admitted by all who saw the little flapper that she did not seem to be in need of recuperation. She was powdered like a baker and her hair was bobbed in a way that would evoke envy in a soubret. When she had spoken her piece, Judge Prince had his turn and he told Florence to "get out of town by 6 o'clock in the evening or suffer the annoyance of being arranged in court in the morning and going to jail." Florence nodded her head and gave the impression to those who saw her that she escaped today what was promised tomorrow. Florence Fontaine and Alice, the wife of Lonnie were not prosecuted as there was practically no evidence on which a conviction could be asked for. The testimony of Mrs. Lee was to the effect that the Marks house was properly conducted. Had Lonnie not demurred to the complaint against him and had the case tried out he might have escaped conviction. It was a case in which guilty conscience needed no accuser. Lonnie was easy of conviction.

Mrs. Charles F. Cole complained against her husband and accused him of a breach of the peace, but that case did not get to a trial as a reconciliation was affected without resort to the court.

Those present were Fannie La Pierre, Beatrice Smith, Helen Mullen, Evelyn Berbeck, Robert Pershing Tongren, John Haun, William Bottomley, Jr., and Thomas Mullen. The children enjoyed several games, also dancing to the music of a Victrola. In the spider web game, Helen Mullen and Bobby Tongren were awarded the prizes. The prize winners in the peanut hunt were Beatrice Smith and Billy Bottomley; and in the beanbag game, Helen Mullen and her brother Thomas, won the prizes. For pinning the tail on the donkey competition was close, the prizes being awarded to Helen and Thomas Mullen. Because little Miss Mullen had previously received two prizes, the donkey prize making the third, she voluntarily relinquished the latter to Fannie La Pierre, who with Billy Bottomley was given honorable mention.

Preceding the donkey game, the children assembled in the dining room where Mrs. Wyant served sandwiches, cake, punch, wafers and ice cream. The birthday cake with lighted candles adorned the center of the table. The place cards were valentine postals and at each plate were chocolate violin-shaped favors.

When the Congregational Home Missionary society met for work, Friday afternoon in the chapel, there was an unusually large attendance. During the afternoon the members tied a quilt. Much time was spent in packing a barrel, to be forwarded the early part of this week to Miss Ruth Beebe, a teacher at Trinity school, Athens, Ala., formerly of Norwich Town.

This school for colored children, which was established about fifty years ago by the American Missionary association, has 250 pupils, the girls outnumbering the boys.

In response to the appeal sent out for contributions of all kinds of clothing, books, magazines, etc., people were most liberal. The contents of the barrel will be distributed to Miss Beebe's pupils, according to her best judgment.

Uses of Prosperity was the theme of Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey's sermon at the First Congregational church, Sunday morning. At the Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening, Rev. Mr. Bailey was the leader, ably treating the topic, Gospel Triumphs in Japan. Acts 10:34-48.

At the church night service of the Congregational church, Thursday evening, the topic will be "The Way of Salvation."

Friday evening, in the chapel, the Young People's C. E. society is to hold an informal social for members and friends. A general good time is anticipated.

At the First Methodist Episcopal church Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich, preached on The Parable of the Two Rich Men. The text referred to was Luke 12, combining the 16th and 19th verses. Mrs. Richard Carter was the leader at the Young People's Christian Endeavor service, when the topic was Gospel Triumphs in Japan. Instead of the regular preaching service in the evening, Rev. Mr. Aldrich read a paper on Japan.

CHESTNUT HILL

The mercury Monday stood at 8 above zero here, a sudden drop in 12 hours of about 40 degrees. The month for the most part has been unusually mild, many days seeming like April, a contrast to a year ago when the ground was so heavily covered with ice and snow.

The roads are in bad condition, either muddy or very rough, with deep ruts, caused by milk trucks and many heavy teams hauling ties to the local railroad station.

STATISTICS OF MOTOR VEHICLES IN BAY STATE

Boston, Jan. 21.—There were 106,000 more automobiles in operation in Massachusetts in 1923 than in 1922, the report of Frank A. Godwin, registrar of motor vehicles, informed the legislature today.

Care in keeping dangerous automobile drivers off the state highways resulted in the revocation or suspension of 11,613 licenses or registrations and of the suspensions or revocations 3,333 were for operating cars while under the influence of liquor.

Registrar Goodwin said that 578 persons were killed by motor vehicles last year but that while this was an increase of fifty six over the number killed in 1922 it amounted to a reduction in the rate of fatalities when the number of automobiles now in operation was compared with those of 1922.

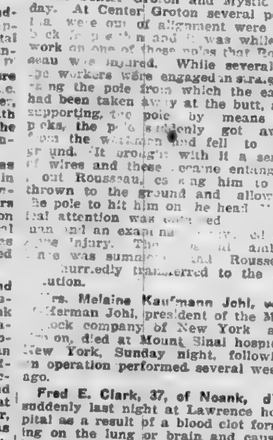
Prominent New England Lady Praises Tanlac



MRS. JOSEPH E. MORRIS

"If I had only taken Tanlac in the beginning, what suffering — and money, too—it would have saved me!" recently said Mrs. Joseph E. Morris, esteemed resident of 312 Broadway, Everett, Mass.

"For three years, indigestion caused me terrible pain and distress. My appetite had long since left me, my weight had gone down and I finally got so I hardly ate enough to keep alive. These troubles, with constipation and impoverished blood, had my nerves at the breaking point, I could not sleep restfully, and my strength was almost gone.

"I took Tanlac as a last resort but in two months' time, all my troubles vanished. I was perfectly well and had gained from ten to fifteen pounds. Tanlac should be in every home. I depend on it always and it never fails me. The Vegetable Pills are grand, too."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills.

Read How Mrs. Walsh Was Helped by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mannington, W. Virginia.—"I took the Vegetable Compound when having the turn of life. I had been sick for seven years. I would get a little better, then I broke down again. It would be hard for me to describe how I was, for I was a perfect wreck. I suffered with a pain in my left side, then I would have numb spells, and I would think I couldn't live. I would have hot flashes, then would come weak spells. I was so weak I would think I couldn't ever get a meal ready. My work was a burden to me. I was not able to do my housework half of the time. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has given me strength and health. The hot flashes left me and I got better of the numb spells. That summer I could do my housework and worked in the garden a good bit. I tell all sick women what your wonderful medicine did for me, and will always recommend it. I am known to all my neighbors, and you can publish this statement because it is true."—Mrs. JOHN W. WALSH, R. No. 1, Box 36, Mannington, West Virginia.

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

New York, Jan. 21—Special buying of high priced industrial specialties featured today's irregular stock market. Most of the standard industrial shares moved within narrow limits, strength of the domestic oil shares being counteracted by the weakness of the motors and chemicals.

Corn products was pushed up 10 points to 170 3-4, the highest price ever recorded, on what was widely reported as a run-in of the short interest. General Electric jumped 8 points to 211 7-8 on buying attributed to a well known Wall Street speculator and said to be based on expectation of an extra disbursement. National Lead advanced nearly 5 points to 144 on the improved outlook for the metal market. Top prices in all cases were shaded at the close.

Foreign exchanges turned decidedly reactionary on the strike of British railroad men. Demand sterling dropped about 3 cents to $4.20 1-2 and French francs broke about 70 points to 4.40 cents, but both made partial recovery later. Sharp breaks also took place in Danish kronen which sold nearly 75 points below Saturday's close at 16.15 cents and in Japanese yen, which were quoted around 45.65 cents, off about 85 points.

Bear traders were again active in the stock market, centering their attacks on Studebaker, Baldwin and the Pan-American oil issues. Baldwin hammered down to 121 1-4 but it snapped back later to 123 for a net gain of 2-2 on the day. Studebaker broke below par for the first time since last November and then rallied to 10 3-8, off 1 3-4. Net losses in the Pan-American issues were held to fractions selling again being influenced by Mexican developments.

Associated Oil, Pacific Oil and Producers & Refiners were the strong spots of the oil group, rising 2 to nearly 3 1-4 points. Further upward revision of crude and gasoline prices influenced the buying of these shares. Maxwell motors made a quick response to the announcement of plans for refunding the $4,500,000 notes due June 1, closing 1 1-2 higher at 54.

Lehigh Valley was again the center of interest in the railroad group, crossing 72 and closing 1 1-2 higher at 71 3-8 on a turn-over of more than 35,000 shares. Much of the buying is reported to have originated in Philadelphia. Chesapeake Ohio moved up nearly a point and "Nickel Plate" preferred 1 1-2, but a number of the other active issues closed fractionally lower.

Call money ruled unchanged at 4 per cent. Time loans were made at 4 3-4 per cent. for the shorter maturities but little business was done in the longer dates. Out-of-town banks are the principal takers of Commercial Paper, prime names being quoted at 4 3-4 per cent.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 21—Strength of Liberty bonds, some of which reached new high levels for the year under the stimulus of increased foreign buying, and activity in Japanese issues in reflection of continued reports that a Japanese loan would be sold here featured today's irregular bond market.

Interest centered in the prospects for new financing, with rumors that the Japanese issue, totalling between $50,000,000 and $70,000,000 would bear a 5 1-2 per cent. interest rate and sel laround 98.

Prices of speculative railroad bonds held fairly firm although interest subsided somewhat in these issues. St. Paul liens were subjected to further profit taking, the 4s of 1925 losing almost 2 points. Baltimore & Ohio 4s yielded a point and Denver & Rio Grande consolidated 4s, West Shore 4s and Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5s moved fractionally lower. Reports of improved earnings sent the New Haven issues higher, with marked activity in the Franc 7s.

Traction issues led the advance in the public utility list. Interborough, Third Avenue railway and Milwaukee Electric Railway bonds were in demand and made substantial gains.

Weakness developed in the Industrial list, Wilson first 6s declining 2 points and Virginia- Carolina chemical 7 1-2s with warrants and Sinclair Pipe line 5s losing ground.

New bond issues scheduled for early offering were said to include $10,000,000 Union Electric Light and Power Company with prospects that the Canadian National Railways $50,000,000 loan would be sold to New York bankers. Public offering probably will be made of a $5,000,000 issue of Continental Gas & Electric Corporation 7 per cent. prior preference stock.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Jan. 21—Evidence multiplied today that farmers are holding out for higher prices on corn. Largely as a result something of an upturn in the corn market here took place, and had a steadying effect on wheat and oats. Corn closed firm at the same as Saturday's finish at 3-8 a 1-2c higher, May 78 1-2 to 78 1-2 a 5-8, with wheat unchanged to 1-8 and July $1.06 5-8, oats varying from 1-4c off to 1-4c up, and provisions unchanged to 10c higher

Apparently next to no offerings of corn at any price were being made to Chicago at present, and one of the largest handlers here admitted having failed to obtain a single carload since Friday. Missouri River points reported liberal receipts, but this was ascribed to premiums those markets were paying over Chicago, and was regarded here as emphasizing the keen demand. Primary receipts, taken as a whole, still were below the total a year ago, and there was nothing to indicate an increase, especially while successive cold waves continued. The severe weather was expected to interfere with the movement of corn and to accelerate feeding demand.

Instead of enlarging as usual at this time of year, the visible supply of corn today showed another decrease, leaving the total at 9,263,000 bushels, about 11,000,000 bushels less than last year.

Unfavorable financial conditions in parts of the northwest had a little bearish effect on the wheat market. Otherwise wheat tended to follow the leadership of corn inasmuch as higher quotations on wheat at Liverpool counted as an offset against breaks in foreign exchange.

Provisions were responsive to the action of hog values.

CURB MARKET

New York, Jan. 21—Activity of Lehigh Valley Coal company certificates and "rights" which touched new high records, and jumps 8 1-2 and 14 points respectively in Solar Refining and Standard Oil of Nebraska, featured today's irregularly higher curb market.

Lehigh Valley certificates touched 35 3-8 and the "rights" 34 1-8, but both cancelled their gains in the afternoon trading and closed fractionally lower. Great Western Sugar dropped 3 points to 90 1-2, the price at which 42,000 shares formerly owned by the American Sugar Refining company were offered to the public. Radio stocks were again active, Dublin crossing 15 on the announcement on an application for its listing on the New York stock exchange. Midvale Steel of Delaware closed nearly a point higher.

Prairie Oil and Gas moved up 2 1-2 points to 262, but most of the active issues showed only fractional changes on the day. Phillips Petroleum came back to the curb when 206,106 newly authorized no par shares were admitted to trading. There were no sales.

Suspension of Hawthorne Mines from trading served to deaden interest in the mining group, fluctuations in which were small and generally unimportant.

COMMISSIONER BLODGET SAYS NORWICH ASSESSMENTS UNJUST

By invitation from the Board of Trade directors, State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett and T. MacDonough Russell of Middletown, president of the Russell Manufacturing Co., attended the meeting of the directors Monday at noon at the Wauregan house and spoke upon aspects of equitable assessment of real estate.

Mr. Russell is chairman of a citizens' committee of 15 in Middletown under whose direction an equitable real estate assessment system is now being installed there. He informed the directors of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce that conditions in Middletown were very bad as far as fair tax assessments to all property owners of that city was concerned. The condition in Middletown was such that a special town meeting was called to discuss the prevailing methods of assessing property in that city and as a result of this town meeting, a committee of five was appointed and given the power to enlarge itself, to make an investigation of the methods employed by the asssessors of Middletown and to report their findings at a later special town meeting in Middletown. In due time this committee enlarged to a personnel of fifteen representing all walks and conditions of life in Middletown and reported the result of their investigations at a town meeting with the result that an appropriation was voted by the town and the committee was empowered to engage expert assistance and to make a tax map of the town. In connection with the tax map it is interesting to note that part of the tax map of Middletown will be made from aerial pictures from which the tax map will be secured. This method of securing a tax map was proposed in Norwich two years ago, but did not seem to meet with popular approval.

The work of installing an equitable system is now being done under the expert supervision of Thomas A. Linder, who is now engaged in similar work in New Britain, and who conferred with the directors of the local Chamber of Commerce two years ago. Mr. Russell is the head of the largest manufacturing concern in Middletown and he has taken an active part in the matter of securing an equitable system of assessments in that city.

Tax Commissioner Blodgett stated that no city or town the size of Norwich in the state was as unjustly assessed as was Norwich and that he estimated according to his investigations and records that at the outside the basis of assessments in Norwich was about 43 per cent. of the value of the property and that a very large part of the assessments in Norwich were under 40 per cent. According to law, property holders are not obligated to put in the value of their property. One of the bad features of a high tax rate is that the burden of taxes is borne by the industries and the home owner, while other justly taxable property escapes with little or no consideration concerning the burden of paying the expenses of a community through its taxation.

It is common knowledge here in Norwich that mortgages are loaned in amounts far in excess of what the property is in the list for, although the state law limits the issuance of mortgages by the banks on more than 50 per cent. of the appraised value of the property. The question before the people of Norwich today is not the question of a high or a low tax rate, but it is the all important question of an equitable tax rate, one that does justice to the home owner as well as to mercantile business and industry.

This conference brought out the fact that Middletown, like all other cities that seek to install a fair method of taxation, must have a tax map and Middletown has engaged a permanent clerk to do all the clerical work of the office so that the assessors can do the field work, which is to view and appraise the value of all property throughout the town.

The Directors expressed their thanks and appreciation to the visitors for the sacrifice of time in coming to Norwich and explaining the situation similar to that in Norwich, which prevailed in Middletown.

The Chamber will unite with others in an effort to secure one of the big German guns as a trophy for Norwich. Governor Templeton is now making an effort to secure a number of these trophies for the cities in Connecticut and efforts are being made here by various organizations to secure one of the captured guns for this city.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

Another week of mild weather greatly aided local contractors in making progress on building operations and several have been brought almost to the completion stage. Other projects were started during the week in anticipation that the favorable weather would continue but if the present cold wave continues this work on foundations and plaster work will be held up. There were only one or two permits for new building issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton these being for small jobs of alterations and additions.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were eight sales of real estate as compared to 11 sales for the corresponding week in 1923. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $35,200 and $41,385.

There were 23 sales of real estate in New London during the past week, exactly the same number as for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $89,400 and $23,947.

The State Situation.

The record of building permits issued in the leading towns in Connecticut for the week reflect the unfavorable weather prevailing a year ago in comparison with that of the present season. A total of 180 permits have been granted in these towns in the week, for new structures costing $707,458, which is very much larger than for the same week of previous years.

NEW LONDON.

Sketches are being prepared for steel fire escapes to be erected at the State Farm for Women at East Lyme. The structural work will be done by the Kenomac Iron Works, under the supervision of the architect. The spiral fire-escape for Seaside sanatorium, Niantic, has been completed.

The foundation is in for a frame dwelling which Edward A. Raymond is to build for himself at 72 Lincoln avenue. The dwelling will be 26x36 feet, in the rear. The cost of the construction, which will be done by daywork, is estimated at $4,000.

Lawrence Quintalinin has started work on the proposed alteration to his dwelling at 37 Ocean avenue. The work will be done for the owner by the day. The changes will be of an extensive nature.

An agreement has been reached between the common council, the Atlantic Refining company and the E. H. & A. H. Chappell company, whereby the city will be enabled to carry out the widening at the corner of Bank and Tilley street. The Atlantic Refining company has purchased the Keefe property at that corner, where they are to erect a gasoline filling station. A strip of land will be donated by the gasoline company and by the Chappell company by means of which Bank street can be carried through with a 36-foot width and will be considerably straightened. The cost will be about $7,900, which funds are now available.

When details of insurance adjustment and property ownership have been completed work will be started on a new business building, five stories high, on the site of the Patterson building, recently destroyed by fire.

Applications for Building Permits.

Number of permits issued for the week, 6; estimated cost of buildings, $6,750.

Seventh Birthday Party

Master Harry R. Washburn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Washburn, entertained twelve little playmates at a party in honor of his seventh birthday Saturday. Games and piano selections were enjoyed after which a luncheon was served. The color scheme was red and white, each little guest receiving a very pretty favor. Those assisting in serving were Mrs. Anna Driscoll and Mrs. Joseph Bellefleur.

Criminal Court Again Wednesday

There will be no session of the criminal superior court here today (Tuesday) as court was adjourned until Wednesday at the close of the session Saturday afternoon, when the trial of the Dr. Gasson case ended with his sentence to state prison.

Paul Los, eight years old East Brookfield, Mass., boy, was drowned in seven mile river when he broke through the thin ice.

MRS. REBECCA MORARTY OBSERVES 86TH BIRTHDAY

At the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Vander-Pyl of 8 Clifton street, Worcester, Mass., where she makes her home, Mrs. Rebecca Morarty pleasantly observed her 86th birthday last Saturday. With her children, several grand-children and two great grand-children around her, also friends numbering in all twenty-five, Mrs. Morarty was very happy. Among those present was her daughter, Mrs. Byron H. Evans of Norwich.

Mrs. Morarty keeps alert and interested in the important things in life and except for deafness, has exceptionally keen faculties.

Besides numbers of postcards from relatives and friends, from far and near, Mrs. Morarty received a cablegram from Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thurston of Cuba, the latter a grand daughter, formerly Miss Eugenia Vander Pyl.

Mrs. Morarty who received many birthday gifts, was the guest of honor in the evening, when an informal reception was held, with instrumental music and singing. At 9 o'clock, her daughters, Mrs. Vander Pyl and Mrs. Evans, served ice cream and cake.

Stomach Troubles That Are Dangerous
(CUT THIS OUT)
Some forms of stomach trouble, if neglected, often lead to dangerous conditions—ulcers or cancer—then, a surgical operation is about the only hope.
For this reason, even the most simple stomach ailments should be given prompt and careful attention. So, don't neglect acid stomach, sourness, gas or bloating! And don't waste time with unknown or unreliable treatments. At the very first signs of distress, go to any good drug store and obtain a few cents' worth of pure Bisurated Magnesia. This special Magnesia Compound is safe and pleasant to take—quickly, almost instantly, effective and does not act as a laxative. Be sure and ask for Bisurated Magnesia (not Citrate) and avoid sour stomach troubles only.

$50,000 DAMAGES CLAIMED IN FOUR SUITS FOR INJURIES BY AUTOS

Four different suits over automobile accidents which have been filed with the clerk of the superior court for this county ask a total of $50,000 in damages, the largest claim being for $20,000. They are all returnable in February.

Stella Migdall of Brooklyn, N. Y., a secretary and stenographer, an occupation from which she claims she derived a lucrative income, has brought suit in the superior court for $20,000 damages against C. Harrison Whitemore, of New London for injuries in an automobile accident.

She claims that on the afternoon of July 26, 1923 while she was crossing the Boston Post road at Colchester, she was knocked down by an automobile driven by the defendant or by his agent acting under his personal direction. The plaintiff claims that she is unable at the present time to determine whether the injuries she received are of a permanent nature, but they have been enough to compel her to spend much money for medicine and medical attention, and they still prevent her from pursuing her regular occupation.

Damages of $10,000 are sought from George E. Cole of Hartford in a suit brought against him by Pasquale Gada of East Lyme, who was injured in an automobile collision, Nov. 23, 1923 at the intersection of Lincoln and Pennsylvania avenues, East Lyme. The plaintiff claims that he was riding on the rear seat of the automobile owned and driven by his son, southerly on Pennsylvania avenue, when it was run into by Cole's automobile which was coming westerly on Lincoln avenue. The plaintiff charges that the operator of the Cole car should have known that he could not cross the intersection without running into the Gada car and that he failed to give a warning signal or have his car under control. Gada received a bad cut on the forehead had to have two teeth extracted and was badly shocked by the accident, and has been deprived of his earning capacity $28.80 a week as a quarryman, he claims.

John E. Murphy, of Franklin, a farm hand, is the plaintiff in a suit for $10,000 damages against David Williams of Willimantic whose automobile hit Murphy on September 15, 1923, on the Norwich turnpike in Yantic. Murphy was walking in a southerly direction at the time he was hit. He suffered severe injury to his left hip, cut on head, depression of skull on the right side of his head, opacity in the lens of his right eye resulting in blindness and a severe shock to his nervous system. He has expended money for medicine and large sums of money for a man to do his work. His injuries are permanent, he claims and he will be obliged to spend large sums of money for some time to come.

Antonio Ulanowich Koniecky of Norwich alleges desertion on Sept. 10, 1918, in a suit for divorce from Leon Koniecky, now of parts unknown. They were married Jan. 3, 1900, the maiden name of his wife being Antonio Ulanowich.

Rose L. Nolan, of New York, an employe of the Travelers Aid Society of that city, sues Ripley B. Parks of Groton for $10,000 damages for injuries she received when she was struck by the Parks automobile on Bolles Hill, Waterford, about 6.30 p. m. Dec. 24, 1922. She was standing on the westerly side of the highway and the machine was proceeding northerly. She claim that Parks was under the influence of intoxicating liquor and that he failed to keep to his right hand side of the road, but struck her, dragged her about 100 feet, fracturing several ribs injuring her back, tearing out her hair and lacerating and wounding her all over the body, and breaking her watch. She claims that she was kept in bed for a long time by her injuries had to spend much money and lost a large sum of money because she could not perform her duties with the Travelers Aid Society.

Suit for foreclosure of a mechanics lien, filed on the Salvation Army building and real estate on Cliff street, has been brought by Alonzo T. Lestendre of this city. Lstendre alleges that between May 1, 1923 and Sept 15, 1923, he furnished services and materials in the erection of the Salvation Army building and that the value of what he did and furnished was $1,962.45 for which he has never been paid.

AFFIRMS HIS FAITH IN THE VIRGIN BIRTH

By request of some of the employees of the Richmond Radiator Co., Rev. C. H. Ricketts under the auspices of the Norwich Y. M. A. C. addressed the men at noon Monday on the subject of "The Virgin Birth of Christ", and the audience listened with unusual attention. Mr. Ricketts told the men that for over forty years he had believed and preached this great fact, and he intended to keep on doing so. He called attention to the fact that the contemporaries of Jesus had absolutely no doubt of, believing it as a matter of course. While there have been several translations of the Bible, not one of them denies but rather affirms the truth of the virgin birth. It is absurd for the scientist to take the position that he will not believe what he cannot understand; he is doing this very thing right along and so are we. Where is the scientist who can explain the movement of the earth or the sun.

We all believe there was a first man; we call him Adam, and surely he had no earthly father; God put him on the earth; why then should it be thought strange that God should bring a second Adam into the world without a human father. When God desires to do something, he does not ask us with our two by four brains about it; he simply does it as He pleases. When Joseph "was minded to put Mary away," the angel of the Lord said to him in a dream, "fear not for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost". Jesus Christ was of the Virgin Mary; if we take this truth away, we have nothing but the shell left; the real spirit of the Gospel has gone.

HAD $400 TO SPEND, HE LANDS IN JAIL

There was a lengthy session of the police court Monday morning and Judge Pettis made quick work of the docket. A man charged with intoxication was sentenced to jail for 30 days and an old sentence of 10 days was added making thirty days in all. This was his third time before the court in a week. He told court officials that he had a roll of $400 when he started to quench his thirst.

A young woman paid $15 to Clerk Bailey for driving her automobile by a standing trolley which was unloading passengers. She said she was on her way home from her father's funeral and because of the circumstances the court was inclined to be lenient.

Another driver charged with a like offense proved that his car was in a garage at the time of the alleged offense and he was discharged. It is likely that numbers were taken wrong when the report was made.

Three local men charged with intoxication paid fines or were allowed to depart upon promise to give up drinking in the future.

The cases or Partel Hadgis and George Gades were heard in part and the case went over for one month. They were charged with interfering with a religious meeting and were arrested Sunday morning near the Trinity Greek Orthodox church on Boswell avenue.

CELEBRATED THEIR SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. James Mingola celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary Sunday at their home, No. 17 Vine street, with relatives and friends present in honor of the occasion. Among the guests were nine children of the couple, Mathew Mingola, Mrs. Matilda Gallina, Miss Minnie Mingola, Sam, John, Rose, Mildred, Joseph and James Mingola, Jr.

The feature of the afternoon was the mock marriage, the parts being taken as follows: bride, Miss Minnie Mingola; groom, Mrs. Matilda Gallina; clergymen, Peter Menegas. After the mock marriage came the grand march with music furnished by Bergnzo's ten-piece orchestra. The march ended in the dining room where a large wedding cake, with 25 lighted candles was placed in the center of the table. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Mingola and refreshments were served.

Dancing and singing was enjoyed until a late hour, the guests wishing the couple many happy returns of the day.

The only way in which fruit growing can make any permanent progress is through the development of new varieties of fruit which are superior to existing sorts, according to the agricultural authorities.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR BLIND PEOPLE OF NORWICH

Miss Frances E. Shields, home teacher for the State Board of Education of the Blind, has been been in Norwich for a week, calling on blind people in their homes and to make useful articles. Miss Shields now has several pupils in Norwich, who are becoming apt in the work that she teaches them. She is also calling in the homes of other blind people and inviting them to accept the service which the state offers, free of charge.

Some of the handcrafts which are taught by the home teachers are the making of baskets, trays, teastands, hampers and similiar articles, as well as chair caning, rug weaving, and all varieties of knitting, sewing, crocheting. The State Board of Education of the Blind has developed a sales service, whereby the articles which are made are collected and are sent to various places about the state and sold at in fairs and sales. The state bears the entire expense of the sale and arranges all the details.

Miss Shields has recently found blind people in this vicinity, who are too old to leave their homes, go to an institution or trade school to learn a trade, and who are glad to accept the service of a home teacher. No expense for the home teacher's services devolves upon the individual. More information can be obtained about the service by writing to the Board, at Room 64, State Capitol, Hartford.

NORWICH CHESS PLAYERS LOSE TO NEW LONDON

Norwich chess players lost the second series of games played with the New London chess players Friday evening by a score of 13 to 10. The games were played at the home of Fred Booth on Main street and in many instances were closely contested. The first series of games were taken by the men from the Whaling City 7 to 5. Other games will be played in the future and Norwich expects to regain the crown lost temporarily to the New London players.

The New London players were Neff, Calvert, Cook and Moles, while Norwich was represented by Wilbur, Hardgraves, Hallon and McSheffery.

NUMBER FIVE

dustries are yielding. A few of the more favorably situated mines are making good profits, but there are others, and a considerable number too, that are operating at a loss.

Congress and the Cancer

Now this is one of the things that is the matter with the coal industry—the restriction of production, the shutting off of the stream at its fountain head. Remove that difficulty and you will have removed the major part of the troubles in the coal industry.

Down in congress a score of bills have been introduced to cure the ills in the coal business and more are being introduced every day. But none of them are aimed at the real bulls-eye of the trouble. They all seek to regulate the industry in case of an "emergency," but none of them seek to prevent the emergency itself. They all seek to apply talcum powder to the cancer instead of cutting the cancer out. Most of these bills, if enacted, would add millions to the present cost of coal and the provisions in some of them are absolutely impossible to comply with. There is but one emergency in the anthracite coal fields and that is the closing of the mines by the leaders of the miners' union. Prevent that, allow the production of the mines to flow normally and that would automatically regulate most of the other difficulties which are now harrassing the coal consuming public.

The Cause of High Prices

As compared with most other commodities, bread, clothing, meat, shoes, cotton goods, building materials, rent, ice, milk, etc., the price of anthracite is not excessive. But it is too high, higher than it ought to be and nobody knows that quite so well as the coal operators themselves. They realize it more profoundly than the rest of us, because it is killing their business. Everywhere anthracite consumers are turning to substitutes, oil, gas and bituminous coal, temporarily at least, and the coal operators are losing millions of dollars as a result. But it is a situation beyond their control. The labor cost is the chief cause of the high price. The operators sensed this danger in 1922. The miners were then receiving the war peak wages while there had been a scaling down of wages in most other industries. But the miners demanded a 20 per cent. increase on top of the war peak wage. The operators offered to leave the matter to disinterested parties and President Harding even urged for arbitration but the leaders of the Union defiantly refused all appeals and closed the mines for five months. Again last summer they renewed the demands for a 20 per cent increase and Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania stepped in and compromised the matter by giving them a 10 per cent. increase which added $35,000,000 or from 75 cents to one dollar per ton to the consumer's price.

High Wages to the Workers

If the workers in the anthracite field were underpaid, the fair play spirit of the American people would readily support their cause as against the owners and operators of the mines, but the fact is that they are better paid than the workers in any other industry in America and are given many advantages in the way of good housing, schools, low rentals and reduced living expenses, that are not enjoyed by other industrial workers. Many of the anthracite workers own their own houses and those who rent from their employers pay from $7.50 to $15 per month for houses that would rent for $50 to $75. In most of the small cities of the east. Between 1913 and 1921 the wages of the laborers in the anthracite field increased 189 per cent. as against 117 per cent for labor in manufactures and 138 per cent. for railroad labor and the recent Pinchot settlement added 10 per cent to the wages of the anthracite workers. Of the 150,000 men employed in the anthracite field only about 40,000 are actually mining coal. The others work on the inside and on the surface in various activities connected with the industry.

Practically a Manufacturing Business

One of the serious difficulties in the anthracite industry is the great difference in the cost of getting the coal out of the mines. For instance, in a mine with a comparatively flat, thick vein, with favorable railroad facilities, coal may be produced f. o. b. mines at $8 or $9 per ton, whereas in a mine where the veins are thin and lie very deep, the cost of getting the coal to the surface and through the breakers may bring the price up to $10 to $12 per ton. And in such a case, it is quite possible that a greater margin of profit would be realized on the coal sold at $8 or $9 than on the coal sold at $10 to $12 per ton.

The mining of anthracite is really a manufacturing process. Unlike bituminous coal, all anthracite has to be run through a great mill known as a breaker. As the anthracite comes up from the mines in the mine cars it is one conglomerate mass of huge chunks, sometimes as large as a man's body, smaller fragments, and pulverized coal dust. This whole mass is run through the breaker, where it is crushed and segregated into the various so-called domestic sizes—egg, stove and chestnut. These are the sizes in greatest demand for household use, but much of the anthracite mass which is taken out of the mines is either a total loss or has to be sold for less than the actual labor cost of production. Ordinarily from 1 to 10 per cent or more is rock or dirt, which is a total loss. From 25 to 30 per cent is small fragments, or what is known as steam sizes—buckwheat, barley and rice, and which has to be held in competition with bituminous and always way below the actual labor cost of mining. That is what makes the domestic sizes of coal so much more expensive than bituminous. Everything connected with the production of anthracite is costly. The breakers alone cost anywhere from $200,000 to $3,000,000. The cost of getting water out of the mines is very great, as 18 tons of water have to be hoisted from the mines for every ton of anthracite marketed. The pumps in the anthracite collieries have a capacity of 823,641,120 gallons for every twenty-four hours, or an amount equal to the water consumption of the city of Philadelphia for two days. The weight of the water hoisted in the anthracite mines each year is from 30 to 40 per cent greater than the weight of all coal. Annually, the anthracite mines use more than 50,000,000 pounds of explosives. About 500,000,000 board feet of timber is annually used in the mines. Every minute in the anthracite mines 1 4-5 tons of air are forced for ventilation. One-fourth of a ton of air is handled for every ton of coal taken out. One anthracite authority estimates that 195 miles of tunnels and timbered gangways are driven annually in our anthracite mines. This is equivalent to a subway from New York to Philadelphia and back. One of the largest companies operating in the Scranton district has more steel rails underground than is used in the Delaware and Lackawanna railroad in its trackage between New York and Buffalo. It took years to build the Panama Canal, and yet the anthracite operators, in less than three years, removed from the depths of the earth a greater yardage of rock and coal than the United States government handled in ten years building the Panama canal.

While it costs at some collieries twice as much to mine a ton of coal as at others, this high cost does not mean inefficient operation. A low cost mine may become a high cost mine overnight. An explosion, squeeze or flood or any of the numerous dangers to which collieries are exposed may change an operation overnight from a desirable classification to a serious and difficult problem.

Some collieries produce a greater amount of small size coal than others. The loss sustained on the small sizes of anthracite must necessarily be made up on the selling price of the larger, or domestic sizes.

Company and Independent Operators.

All the anthracite at present is produced by seven large companies, formerly known as the Railroad Affiliated Companies, and 75 to 100 individual or independent operators. The railroad companies have now been divorced from railroad ownership, but from force of habit the designation has clung to them. These large companies as a rule have the richest mines and own their properties in fee. A large number of anthracite operators are obliged to pay royalties on all coal mined, to the city of Philadelphia, and the estate of Stephen Girard, and these royalties add greatly to the cost of coal. In 1913 the royalty paid for egg, stove and nut was approximately 57 cents a ton. This year—1923—the rate has increased to $1.49 a ton on these sizes. In addition to the royalties, the state of Pennsylvania receives 1 1-2 per cent tonnage tax on all anthracite coal marketed. Most of the royalties are based on a percentage of the selling price of coal; therefore, the state of Pennsylvania benefits by any increase in the cost of anthracite to the consumer.

Cost and Profit in Production.

From all evidence produced by nine governmental investigations since 1914, nothing has been presented to prove that the owners and operators of the anthracite mines are realizing more than an average fair profit on their investment or their operations. In fact, these reports have generally indicated that the anthracite industry is not yielding to the owners and operators as large a net profit as is realized by other basic industries. The recent United States Coal Commission, after months of exhaustive investigation, states that the earnings of ten railroad coal companies and three individual operators, producing a total of 56,000,000 tons of anthracite a year, covering about 30 per cent of the production, realized in the ten-year period from 1913 to 1923, an average margin of 36.7 cents per ton. This includes a loss of 23 cents per ton in 1922, and a maximum margin of 65 cents in 1921. This 36.7 cents per ton, however, is not net profit, but is margin from which must be deducted selling expenses, interest on borrowed money, reserves for non-insurable risks, and federal taxes. Figuring the total of these charges at the low figure of 16.7 cents per ton, the balance available for distribution to stockholders in return for their investment is only 20 cents—less than 2 1-2 per cent.

The investment to mine a ton of coal has been decided by governmental authorities to average about $9 a ton; that is to say, to mine a million tons of coal requires an investment in plant, equipment and property amounting to about $9,000,000. The labor cost is the largest item in anthracite mining, and is constantly increasing. According to the United States Coal Commission's report, the labor cost of a ton of coal in 1913 was $1.56; in October of last year, it was $4.60 on the average per ton of coal produced. Since 1913 wages have increased more than 189 per cent.; supplies from 200 to 300 per cent.; overhead, 200 per cent.; and yet the price of anthracite has increased only a little over 100 per cent., according to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Earnings of the Men

In 1921 the average earnings of all anthracite workers—skilled and unskilled—working full time and part time, was $1,303.05. The wages of the men, according to the United States Coal Commission's report for 227 days in 1921 (average days worked) were as follows:

Contract and consideration miners $2,700 to $2,800.

Men who worked more days at various collieries, $3,000 to $4,000.

Contract miners and laborers, 276 days, $2,000 to $2,100.

Contract miners and laborers 296 days, $2,500 to $2,600.

No Control Over Distributors

The owners and operators of the mines have no control over the price of coal after it leaves the mines. The greater part of the anthracite coal is sold directly to wholesalers and retailers and through these agencies distributed to the consumer. The price of coal paid by the consumer, is, therefore, a matter of general adjustment between the consumer and his dealer. It is a neighborhood affair. The price at which coal is sold at the mines is easily ascertained by any consumer. These prices are published daily by the producers of coal, and the freight rates are also available to the public.

Shutting Off Production

Not only is the production of coal affected by the periodical general strikes, but it is constantly diminished by a never-ending series of petty, or what is known as "outlaw" strikes. In 1920, 96,840 men were idle on outlaw strikes, and the man-days lost were 1,515,000. The lost output was about 3,356,000 tons, of the value of over $20,000,000. This sort of interruption is a continuous performance. The large wages now paid to the miners makes it unnecessary for them to work steadily in order to realize a comfortable annual income. Another great loss in production is due to the restriction of the union upon the output. A miner may be able to load easily six or eight cars a day, but the union will fix a limit of two cars per man, and if that limit is exceeded the miner will be fined and the operators called upon to collect the fine. If it is not promptly paid, then a strike will be called. These are the conditions over which the owners and operators of the mines have very little control. As a matter of fact, since 1916 the owners of the coal mines have never fixed a wage scale; the government has done that on each occasion.

Another serious difficulty with the anthracite industry is the difference in cost of mining among the various collieries. While the cost of production at one mine may be two, three or four dollars per ton more than at another mint, yet the quality of the coal is the same and there is a demand for all the anthracite that can be produced from all the mines. The natural solution of this problem would be the consolidation of these high and low cost properties and an averaging of the price to the consumer, but under existing federal statutes this cannot be done.

The inability of the owners and producers in any way to control or regulate the price of coal to the consumer is another embarrassment in the industry. However, steps are now being taken by the ablest men in the industry to work out a plan whereby the uninterrupted production of coal may be possible and a uniformly reasonable price maintained for the consumer. All indications now are that the supply of anthracite in all parts of the consuming field will be ample during the remainder of this season.

How to Reduce the Coal Bill

Now there are certain things you can do to cut down your anthracite bills and save yourselves a great deal of work and worry. The most important of all I think is the substitution of the steam size of coal, pea, buckwheat, rice and barley for the larger domestic sizes, known as egg, stove and chestnut. By using the steam coal you can cut down your fuel bill from one-third to one-half. The pea coal sells at about two-thirds the price of domestic sizes and can be mixed with them and satisfactorily used in any range or furnace with a good natural draft. Buckwheat coal sells at about one-half the cost of the domestic sizes but can be used only in heating devices and appliances especially designed for the purpose. But these appliances work automatically when once installed and require no care or attention except to remove a small amount of ashes about once a week. And remember that this is exactly the same quality of coal as the larger sizes and also so that it requires much less of this than of the larger sizes to produce a given amount of heat. When the public has learned the economy and advantage of burning this small coal in their homes one of the great problems of the anthracite inuustry will have been solved. Now millions of tons of this coal has to be stored or sold at a price far below the bare labor cost of mining it and this loss has to be equalized by increasing the cost of the larger sizes.

But if for any reason you prefer to continue using the larger sizes, you can help yourselves and help the industry by putting in your winter's supply, or at least a part of it, during the spring and summer months when the supply at the mines is ample. By doing that you will probably save money and certainly save yourselves a great deal of annoyance and concern, because, if the leaders of the powerful miners' union should decide to close the mines for a period of months, they would not have you entirely at their mercy if your bins are full of coal.

You can help the coal situation also by refraining from berating the "coal barons" just because it has become one of the popular pastimes. Don't make a kick until you are sure you have just cause for kicking. From many localities during the past few months has come the complaint that they were being discriminated against somewhere or by somebody in not getting their usual tonnage of anthracite. That has been quite a common complaint of local dealers; and in most of these cases more coal was being shipped to them than ever before.

Shipments to Norwich

I have no doubt that those complaints may have been heard in Norwich, but if so they are not true. Here are the figures:

Between April and November 30, 1923, there was shipped to Norwich 38,115 tons of domestic sizes. That is the largest tonnage ever sent into this city in any year. During the same period in 1922 the shipments were 29,249 tons, a difference of nearly 9000 tons.

What usually happens in these cases is that a considerable number of citizens have the good judgment to lay in their supply during the spring or summer and are happy, while others wait until the cold weather rush comes and then become panicky and vociferous. And such a condition of course provides a rare opportunity for unscrupulous dealers all along the line.

HURRICANE SINKS CRUISER TACOMA; CAPTAIN AND RADIO OPERATOR KILLED; CREW RESCUED BY MEXICAN REBELS

Consul Wood Cables From Vera Cruz That Captain Herbert G. Sparrow and Two Radio Operators Met Accidental Deaths—U. S. Warship Had Been Wrecked on a Reef Outside of Vera Cruz—Rescue Work, as Reported in Wireless Signed by De la Huerta, Was a Hazardous Undertaking—United States Has Made Another Sale of Surplus War Materials to the Obregon Government.

Washington, Jan. 22—Death of Captain Herbert G. Sparrow of the wrecked cruiser Tacoma at Vera Cruz and two radio operators of the ship, due to an accident aboard the Tacoma, during a norther, was reported to the state department tonight in a cable message from Consul Wood at Vera Cruz.

The message gave no details but said that Captain Sparrow and the two operators lost their lives while in the performance of their duties.

Consul Wood's message which was sent from Vera Cruz at two p. m. today was made public by the navy department as follows:

"I am profoundly distressed to announce the death of the captain of the U. S. S. Tacoma and also of two radio operators through an accident on board the ship during a norther while in performance of duty. Particulars will follow."

Before Consul Wood's message arrived a wireless message signed by Adolfo de la Huerta had been received from Vera Cruz by his personal representative here, Alvarez Castillo, saying that the Tacoma had been completely sunk in the storm but that Mexican naval transports by his direction had put to sea and saved the remainder of the crew of the Tacoma.

Navy department officials had expected that the Tacoma would be destroyed in the renewal of the norther which was driving her further on the reef where she struck during a storm several days ago while attempting to enter Vera Cruz harbor at night. It was assumed from Consul Wood's message that the death of Captain Sparrow and his two men occurred while the ship was breaking up on the reefs and before rescue vessels arrived. There were 48 men with the Captain standing guard on the wrecked cruiser, according to the last report received from the head officer. The remainder of the crew 278 in number, were put ashore at Vera Cruz under care of Consul Wood the day after the Tacoma piled up on the reefs.

The first duty of the cruiser Richmond, ordered to the scene when the wreck of the Tacoma was reported, was to take aboard the men who had been set ashore and they are now on the Richmond, which is riding out the storm off Tampico. Rear Admiral Magruder, aboard the Richmond, reported today that the hurricane was abating after having been blown for nearly two days.

Captain Sparrow was a native of Ohio and was appointed to the naval academy from that state, graduating in 1899 at the head of his class.

The navy department has never received a detailed report of the grounding of the Tacoma from her commander and the question of the necessary investigation of the accident has been deferred until the Tacoma's officers and crew should reach the United States.

Previous indications of the severe nature of the storm came yesterday in radio messages from coastal points saying that the navy tug Bay Springs, which was standing by the Tacoma, had been forced to put inside the Vera Cruz breakwater because of heavy weather. At least one other naval tug was either within the harbor or attempting to stand by the wreck.

The tugs are of large sea-going type and weather which would drive them to shelter, in the opinion of naval officers, sealed the fate of the Tacoma, helpless with her bow driven high on the reefs and her forward and mid-ship compartments flooded. She was swung broadside on after she struck but Captain Sparrow later got an anchor out astern and swung her to a head-on position to ease the strain on the ship. The stern compartments were intact, however, and kept her partially afloat.

The Tacoma was an old fashioned schooner-rigged light cruiser of 3,200 tons normal displacement, built by the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, and launched in June, 1903. She was authorized in 1899 and the contract price was $1,041,200. She carried eight five inch guns and six, six-pounders, and her designed complement was 311 officers and men.

WERE KILLED IN STORM OF SUNDAY AND MONDAY

Vera Cruz, Jan. 22—(By the A. P.)—Captain Sparrow, one officer and two telegrapher sof the United States cruiser Tacoma were killed in the storm which swept this city Sunday and Monday. After the Tacoma went onto the reef, Captain Sparrow and nineteen men remained aboard. The wind made it necessary to withdraw the crew which was working to get the Tacoma off the reef.

ANOTHER SALE OF ARMS TO MEXICAN GOVERNMENT

Washington, Jan. 22.—Another sale of surplus army war materials to the Obregon government has been completed between the Mexican embassy here and officials of the Washington government.

The transaction involves the delivery to representatives of the Mexican federal government at El Paso, Texas, of 5,000 Enfield rifles and 2,500 army Colt .45 calibre automatic pistols.

A quantity of pistol ammunition also is included in the sale.

This brings the surplus war materials sold by the United States to Mexico to a total of 10,000 Enfield rifles, eight airplanes, 5,000,000 rounds of rifle ammunition, and 2,500 revolvers or pistols. The Mexican government will pay slightly less than $700,000 for the entire lot.

The original request for arms made several weeks ago by President Obregon was for 10,000 rifles, but only 5000 were delivered at this time, the additional 5,000 made a part of the new sales completes the number originally sought.

While the transaction just completed did not involve any request for ammunition for the additional rifles obtained, it is understood that the Obregon government has purchased a sufficient quantity of ammunition for the rifles from private sources in the United States.

The cruiser Richmond, off Tampico, reported to the navy department today that the gale prevailing in Mexican waters had delayed the cruiser Omaha and six destroyers which recently left Panama waters and that they would not reach Vera Cruz until tomorrow.

CREW WAS RESCUED BY MEXICAN REVOLUTIONISTS

Washington, Jan. 22—The skeleton crew which had remained aboard the American cruiser Tacoma, wrecked on a reef outside Vera Cruz, was rescued by the Mexican revolutionary forces during a hurricane today, Alvarez Castillo, personal representative of Adolfo de la Huerta, was informed by his chief tonight. The Tacoma, it was added, is now completely sunk.

The message which was received by wireless through New Orleans and was signed by de la Huerta said:

"By orders of the supreme chief in the midst of a furious hurricane our small naval transports steamed out of the port to go to the aid of the Tacoma. Our vessels daringly plunged into the tempest regardless of danger of their own loss, and succeeded in saving the remainder of the crew of the Tacoma, which is now completely sunk."

Last reports to the navy department said that Captain Sparrow and 48 men were on the Tacoma, the remaining 278 men of the crew having been taken off by the cruiser Richmond, now off Tampico. The cruiser Omaha and six destroyers are due at Vera Cruz tomorrow from Panama waters and it is expected that they will pick up the rescued.

The Tacoma more than a week ago during a norther preceding the present storm went aground broadside in an exposed position on a reef sixteen miles outside Vera Cruz. Three naval tugs, which had been sent from American gulf ports to her assistance, were compelled yesterday by the present storm to seek refuge within the breakwater at the port.

SEARCH OF BRITISH SHIPS NOW ONE HOUR'S STEAMING

London, Jan. 22 (By the A. P.)—Departing from the accepted three-mile limit which has been the basis of British maritime law from time immemorial Great Britain and her dominions have unanimously agreed to grant the United States the right to search British owned vessels carrying contraband liquor within one hour's steaming distances of the American shores.

Australia and New Zealand because of the absence of their premiers were among the last overseas possessions to return their approval of the propose dtreaty, which for brevity is probably one of the most remarkable international documents on record.

It consists of less than three short typewritten pages and embraces first the decision of the British government to grant the United States a specia lextension of the three mile territorial limit; second the right of American authorities to search British vessels for illicit liquor within a boundary described as one hour's steaming distance from shore and third the right of British passenger liners to bring legitimate alcoholic stores into American waters when such stores are intended for consumption on the homeward voyage.

One of the last acts of the Baldwin government before it passed into history was to instruct its representative in Washington to inform the state department that England and the dominions had approved the draft treaty. Marquis Curzon the foreign secretary under Premier Baldwin had been eager ever since the impartial conference to have the outgoing cabinet enjoy credit for completing a treaty which Mr. Baldwin himself cited as one of the most notable achievements of his administration in fostering Anglo-American relations

The treaty will have to be ratified by the imperial parliament and the American congress before it becomes law, but as far as Parliamentary legislative sanction is concerned, the framers of the agreement here are confident it will meet with little opposition in the house of commons. They anticipate that Ramsay Macdonald, the new premier will readily endorse the measure.

ADMIRAL SIMS OPERATED ON FOR GALLSTONES

Boston, Jan. 22—Rear Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., (retired), was operated on yesterday at the Massachusetts General hospital for gallstones, it became known tonight. His physicians reported that the admiral's condition is "entirely satisfactory."

Rear Admirals Sims cancelled several speaking engagements recently on the ground of ill health. He left his home at Newport, R. I., several days ago to enter the hospital here.

Senator Moses wrote, however, that the suggestion is wholly beside the mark, adding that if the committee wishes to have these documents it has the power of subpoena to secure them."

Mr. Bok in a letter to Senator Moses today in reply to one written him yesterday by the chairman, said he would be glad to give to the author of the plan selected by the committee $50,000 when "your committee has selected the better plan," and $50,000 additional "if and when the plan in substance and intent is approved by the United States senate." He also offered to pay the cost of a national referendum on the committee's selection.

New Plan to Balance The German Budget

Experts Would Have Independent Gold Bank Established With Foreign Cooperation.

Paris, Jan. 22 (By the A. P.)—The expert committee under Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes investigating Germany's finances has reached the conclusion that an independent gold bank should be established in Germany with foreign cooperation, it announced this afternoon.

The committee has notified Dr. Schacht, head of the reichsbank, now in Paris, for consultations, that it would discuss the completed plan with him at Berlin on January 30.

The bank, the committee has in mind should be established, it considers, by mobilizing part of the gold and foreign currencies held by German nationals, the balance being furnished by foreign capital. The committee's opinion is that such a bank will be part of the ultimate plan to balance the German budget and stabilize the currency.

The committee's announcement read: "The committee of experts appointed by the reparation commission to consider the stabilization of the currency of Germany and the balancing of its budget has reached the opinion that an independent gold bank should be established, partly by mobilizing some part of the free reserves of gold and foreign currencies which may exist in the hands of German nationals and which at present discharge no economic function, and partly by the cooperation of foreign capital.

"In their view, such a step will form part of the ultimate plan to secure a future budget equilibrium and a stable currency.

"In this connection the committee think some of the features of the plan outlined before them yesterday by Dr. Schacht will prove in due course to be very useful and they were glad to have the advantage of his views as part of the whole field of possible or alternative action to be reviewed.

"The president of the committee had heretofore emphasized the need of allied unification in the program. The committee is convinced that foreign cooperation in the management of such a bank is similarly desirable for ultimate success.

"The committee, in view of the necessity of prompt decision and action have advised Dr. Schacht that it will discuss its definite plan at Berlin on Wednesday, January 30."

Moscow in Mourning For Premier Levine

His Death Occurred Suddenly Monday Evening—Arrangements Made For Impressive Funeral.

Moscow, Jan. 22.—(By The A. P.)—Nikolai Lenine, Russia's great Bolshevik leader, died suddenly last evening at his country villa in the village of Gorky, 20 miles from Moscow. The public announcement of the premier's death was withheld until the all-Russian soviet congress met this morning, and only tonight did the wires carry to all corners of the soviet federation word of the event, which even Lenine's political opponents declare saddens the nation.

In the interest of science an autopsy was performed this afternoon by eleven doctors, including the German specialist, Professor Foerster. It disclosed, according to the official bulletin, marked changes in the blood vessels of the brain and fresh ruptures of these vessels, which were the direct cause of death.

The death certificate was signed by four professors, four doctors and Health Commissary Semashko.

Another official bulletin, not signed, but dated the Kremlin, says that the all-Russian congress of soviets "will take steps in the near future to secure the work of the government without interruption, the soviet power standing firm guard over the conquests of the revolution."

Lenine's death, which the official announcement said was entirely unexpected, in view of recent improvement shown in his condition, comes at a time when party differences are being aired, and when the other soviet leader best known internationally, Leon Trotsky, is ill, and for reasons of health, out of state affairs temporarily.

The government is arranging for an impressive funeral at Moscow Saturday. Even before the public generally knew of the premier's death all arrangements for a great ceremony were completed. There will be nation-wide mourning for the head of the bolsheviists and, meanwhile party differences will be submerged.

Felix Djedjinsky, commissar for the interior, is chairman of the committee on funeral arrangements, which comprises many other prominent communists. Trotzky is not among those named. From six o'clock tomorrow evening the public will be permitted to view the body. Soon after the funeral the federal congress of soviets, the supreme legislative and elective body of the federation, will meet. This congress was to have met tomorrow, after the meeting of the all-Russian soviets.

All theatres and places of amusement in Moscow have been ordered closed until after Saturday, and tonight great crowds gathered in the neighborhood of the Pravda offices awaiting extra editions, which might contain further information respecting the passing of the premier and the political situation generally.

COMMITTEE TO RECALL FALL AND SINCLAIR

Washington, Jan. 22.—In the presence of law enforcement officers of the government, the senate Teapot Dome investigating committee took steps today to call again before it Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, and Harry F. Sinclair, lessee of naval oil reserves in Wyoming.

A subpoena returnable next Friday was issued for Mr. Fall who is now in New Orleans, and about whose name sensational charges in connection with the lease have centered recently. The committee informed counsel for Mr. Sinclair that it desired his appearance at the earliest possible date after his attorney had expressed willingness to cable to Mr. Sinclair to return from Europe.

The appearance of a representative of Attorney General Daugherty at the committee investigation was at the personal direction of President Coolidge, who has instructed the department of justice to take note of any irregularities or illegal actions on the part of any one which may develop in the course of the inquiry.

A formal announcement from the department during the day said that law officers also were making investigations on their own account. The announcement added that while the department awaited the result of the recommendation, if any, of the committee, this did not mean that there would not be prior action if evidence were developed competent to lay before a grand jury or a court.

WHITMAN VILIFIED WITNESS IN TRIAL OF WM. H. ANDERSON

Denounced A. Bertsall Phillips, Chief Prosecution Witness Against Head of Anti-Saloon League of New York, as a Traitor to His Country, a Blackmailer and an Extortionist — Testimony of Witnesses Indicated Irregularities in Financial Affairs of the League—That Anderson Wouldn't Let Anybody Get Any More Than He Did.

New York, Jan. 22. — O. Bertsall Phillips, chief prosecution witness in the forgery trial of William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the anti-saloon league of New York, today was characterized by Former Governor Charles S. Whitman, principal defense counsel, as a traitor to his country, a blackmailer and an extortionist.

Conspicuous among those mentioned as having been approached by Phillips for money in return for his promise to "deliver" Anderson were the Rockefellers, father and son; Henry J. Kaltenbach, an official of the Fleischmann brewing interests and of the National Brewers association; a number of New York newspapers, Colonel Jacob Ruppert, brewer and owner of the New York Yankees, and Ransom H. Gillett, chief counsel for the New York division of the association against the prohibition amendment. It was to the latter, Whitman charged, that Phillips, who said he now was a fund solicitor for the Young Men's Christian association, offered to "deliver" Anderson for $25,000.

The name of J. P. Morgan and Co. was mentioned by Whitman in connection with his accusation that Phillips had, in 1916, been associated with several men who had purchased from an employe in the Morgan offices information relative to munition purchases by the allies and had thereafter sold the secrets to munition interests.

"Did you not, in addition to abandoning your wife and six children, attempt to sell out your country?" the former governor thundered.

The witness stammered, hesitated, then replied in the negative. Pressed by the attorney, he admitted having had business relations with some of the men later identified as having been concerned in the sale of munition secrets, but pleaded that he knew nothing of their activities.

Phillips, the day's third witness, told, under questioning of Assistant District Attorney Pecora, of his employment by Anderson as a league fund solicitor in May, 1917.

"I told Anderson I would work on a 10 per cent. commission basis", Phillips testified, "but he said he would have me sign a contract giving me a salary of 20 per cent. of the first $25,000 I collected, with 10 per cent. of every additional sum. Anderson told me he wanted to enter into this agreement to fool the Rockefellers, who had been told any league collector would be on a salary basis and not a commission arrangement.

"Later Anderson said to me: 'I get $10,000 a year, and I won't let anybody in this organization get any more than I do; when your commissions come to more than that amount, you'll have to split with me fifty-fifty'

I agreed, because I had to in order to hold my job."

Phillips then related that the first commission split occurred in 1919, when he gave Anderson approximately $1,500. In 1920, however, his commissions totalled $18,893, he said. Without his knowledge, he explained, Anderson had his (Anderson's) share of the commissions paid to him in checks drawn to himself by the league's assistant treasurer against Phillips' salary account. "In March, 1921," he continued, "I received an office notice that the government internal revenue department had been notified that my income for the previous tax year, 1920, had been $18,893. I protested to William M. Potter, then head bookkeeper, that I had received only a little more than $14,000, more than $4,000 having gone to Anderson on split commissions. He said he would see about it."

Phillips said Potter discussed the matter with Anderson, and that Anderson directed the bookkeeper to transfer on the books $4,400 from Phillips' salary account to the league's hotel and traveling expense account. A new statement was made out for the government, he said, and he paid income tax only on the sums he had actually received.

Pecora introduced into evidence as order, signed by Anderson directing the transfer of the $4,400 item on the league's books. The witness then was given over to Whitman for cross-examination.

The former governor wasted no time in opening his attack, asking the witness if it were not true that his wife had divorced him for desertion and failure to provide for their six children. He quickly followed this up with a demand for an explanation of Phillips' association with the alleged sellers of allied munitions secrets, and as speedily demanded an explanation of the witness' attempts to get money after he had been discharged by Anderson.

"I wanted $5,000 with which to start two actions against Anderson," Phillips said. "I wanted to sue him for the the money he had compelled me to give up to him and I also wanted to sue him for damages."

Quickly Whitman produced an agreement signed by Phillips in which he relinquished all claims he might have had against the league or its officers, and then demanded particulars of the collector's alleged visits to various sources in his attempt to get funds.

Phillips admitted having called on Kaltenbach, from whom he asked $5,000, he said, "as I understood he had had a quarrel with Anderson." Kaltenbach, he said, told him he could not raise the money, but did give him "$200 or $300 with which I paid my board bill, for I was dead broke."

The Rev. Dr. George Caleb Moor, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church and secretary of the league, and Miss Mary E. Hill, assistant treasurer and head bookkeeper of the league, were the other prosecution witnesses. Dr. Moor identified various books of minutes concerning Anderson's engagement by and reports to the league directors.

Miss Hill testified as to the manner in which the $4,400 item was alleged by Phillips to have been paid Anderson as half his commissions in excess of $10,000. Under cross examination she declared the transfer had "no bookkeeping significance", but under re-direct examination by Pecora she admitted that this was erroneous and had formed the basis upon which she had made out the second income tax report on Phillips' commissions for the government.

She later admitted to Pecora that she had, when interviewed by him before Anderson was indicted, told him she considered the entries "meant just what they said."

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS IN CONGRESS YESTERDAY

Washington, Jan. 22—The shower of sparks sent off in the meteoric progress of the senate Teapot Dome investigation thw into shadow today all the other major luminaries that recently have cast their brilliance on Capitol Hill.

Provided with a sensation of first magnitude in th etestimony of Archie Roosevelt the Teapot investigating committee pressed its advantage in its cross-questioning of other Sinclair officials and summoned Albert B. Fall to appear before it on Friday. From a corner of the committee room the proceedings were watched by an assistant attorney general.

Meantime Senator Borah's Russian committee, which lost a good part of its audience after yesterday's quiet session, warmed up to the point of naming names in its discussion of soviet propaganda in this country. State department officials testified that the I. W. W. and some American socialist leaders had been hand in glove with the communists.

The committee that started to investigate the Bok peace award yesterday was not in session but before he left town Mr. Bok publicly informed his inquisitors that if they didn't like his peace plan they had but to produce a better one and he would award another prize.

A house committee made a start toward resuscitation of the Muscle Shoals row of last season, but go no where at its first session. In other committee rooms Herbert Hoover advised the governmental reorganizers not to attempt too much and John R. Quinn, field marshal of the American Legion, appeared in favor of immigration reforms and never mentioned the bonus.

On the house floor the day was occupied with debate on the interior appropriation bill, while the senate working on nothing in particular, talked of everything in general. Much of the talk was about Russia, Senator King relating in 40,000 words his impressions from last summer's trip to the land of the soviet.

ATTORNEY CORCORAN MUST FACE THIRD JURY

Boston, Jan. 22.—The tangled skein of indictments and trials growing out of alleged blackmail schemes in the city was complicated still further today. As the outcome of the day's developments William J. Corcoran, former district attorney of Middlesex county, must face a third jury on charges of conspiracy to extort money from various persons and also must stand trial on charges of perjury.

Last October Corcoran was brought to trial with Harry E. Levenson, a Boston attorney and several others on the extortion charges. After several weeks of testimony the trial was halted by the illness of Judge Quinn, of the superior court, and when his illness became prolonged the case was adjudged a mistrial.

When the case was brought up for re-trial District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien elected to proceed at this time against Corcoran and Levenson only, leaving the final disposition of the indictments against the other defendants undetermined. Last week Levenson interrupted the trial by pleading guilty and yesterday he turned state's evidence.

Because Levenson testified that Corcoran had told him that certain members of the jury were "fixed", Judge McLaughlin today took the case from the jury and declared another mistrial.

"I believe," said the court, "that there rests in the minds of one connected with this case, the slightest suspicion concerning the integrity and honesty of any man sitting upon this panel, but a very peculiar situation has arisen."

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

New Labor Cabinet Officially Announced — Exchange of Seals Between the Old Cabinet and the New Will Take Place at Noon Today.

London, Jan. 22.—(By The A. P.)—The labor government goes into action ahead of all expectations. J. Ramsay MacDonald kissed the hand of the king at Buckingham palace this afternoon thus sealing his entrance upon the high office of prime minister and the exchange of seals between the ministers of the old cabinet and the new will take place at the premier's official residence in Downing street at noon tomorrow.

The names of the new cabinet ministers were published officially soon after Mr. MacDomald submitted them to the king.

J. H. Thomas, secretary for the colonies.

Brigadier-General Christopher Thompson, air minister.

Stanley Baldwin met his cabinet for the last time as prime minister this morning. He then proceeded to the palace for a last official audience.

The prime minister—as he now is—attired in frock coat and silk hat neglected none of the conventionalities of office. He might easily have been mistaken for a dour Scotch university professor which he is in temperament and learning. With him went two of his colleagues, James Henry Thomas and John Rober Clynes, true to the proletariat, typified by bowler hats and short jackets. They attended in their capacity of privy councillors for a privy council was presided over by the king, at which Mr. MacDonald was sworn in as a privy councillor.

Mr. Baldwin spent half an hour in the royal presence; his successor, as was natural, had a much longer audience.

Parliament finished its deliberations by adjournment of both houses until February 12.

Almost the only business of parliament was to receive the king's reply to last night's address in which the king said: "I thank you for your royal and dutiful address and will at once give it my careful consideration."

Later in the afternoon Mr. MacDonald was again summoned from a meeting of the labor party to the palace when he presented to the king the names of his ministers. His own people gave the new premier a warm welcome when he emerged from the palace.

"Are you prime minister, Mac" shouted an old man. MacDonald nodded. "I congratulate you from the bottom of my heart," shouted his supporter.

In the house of commons Mr. Baldwin, the retiring premier, merely announced that the government had tendered its resignation to the king and that its resignation had been accepted.

The house adjourned until February 12 on proposal of Mr. Baldwin in agreement with the new prime minister.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
81 Church Street Telephone 1052

A meeting of the democratic city committee and democratic city officials was held at the Al-Pierre Tabarin Tuesday evening. Matters of party interest and concerning civic movements were discussed. Plans were formulated for the work of the committee during the coming year. The meeting was in charge of John R. Pickett, chairman of the city committee. The committees of the four city districts were also represented.

The kindergarten pupils of the Windham street school had a novel experience Tuesday on an inspection tour of the central fire station on Bank street and the police station and other departments of the town building. The children were in charge of their teachers, Misses Irene Kramer and Ruth Brown. The Bank street engine house was the first place visited. Assistant Chief Henry J. Kelley led the youngsters through the building, informing them as to the purposes of the equipment and the manner in which it is used. There was much interest shown in the big red auto-chemical pumper and the hook and ladder truck.

At the police station there was much affected quailing and murmuring, when the children were led into the cell room by Chief Allan MacArthur. The young visitors were given warning that they had better pay strict obedience to their parents and teachers and that they would do well to grow up as law-abiding citizens lest some day the big steel doors might clank mercilessly behind them. The court room and patrolmen's rooms also received interested attention. The offices of Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton, City Clerk James S. Donahue, Selectman Russell A. Andrews and Judge of Probate Otto B. Robinson, on the second floor of the town building were inspected next. Misses Mabel Roberts and Susie Matassa of Norwich, students of Willimantic State Normal school accompanied the children.

The business methods committee, with Louis A. Kingsbury in charge, controlled the activities of the weekly meeting and luncheon of the Willimantic Rotary Club held Tuesday noon. On the program appeared the names of A. Linn Weatherhead who spoke on "Welfare of the Employes and Public Service", in connection with the regime of the Southern New England Telephone Company.

Herbert W. Huber talked on "The American Bankers' Association" and Professor Richard E. Dodge of Connecticut Agricultural College spoke interestingly on "The Duties of a Teacher."

In order to keep the interest and good humor of the members while the program was being carried out, Lou Kingsbury distributed prime native apples. Lou holds the enviable reputation of being healthy, wealthy and wise, and it is said that the reason for this is that he unfailingly eats half a dozen apples before retiring, each night.

President James P. Mustard was in charge of the meeting. The attendance was 100 per cent. Dr. Stanley R. Osborn, state commissioner of health, a Rotarian of Hartford, was a guest. C. Harry Branch had as his guest his father, Charles N. Branch, of Springfield, N. Y.

The minutes were read by Secretary Charles W. Hill and approved. The secretary also read a letter of thanks and appreciation from a local boy, toward whose education at the Kimball-Union Academy the local club contributed $100, in addition to a sum last year. An acknowledgment of the receipt of this sum was also read from Stanley Kelley, former director of the boys' camp at Eastford who is backing the ambitions of the local boy.

An announcement was received from the Old No. 1 Club of Chicago that the canned food luncheon would be held next month by all clubs. Canned food producers who are Rotarians, are furthering the movement. P. J. Laramee will have charge of the canned meal here.

Judge Frank H. Foss delivered an inspiring message from the session of the Connecticut State Bar association, which was held in Bridgeport Monday. He told of some of the moments which the association is fostering.

John F. Ahern called attention to the fact that the tickets for the concert to be given here by Loretta Higgins of Norwich had been distributed and that each member was expected to sell his quota. The affair will be at the high school auditorium, under the auspices of the club. President Mustard then read a fine message entitled "Your Enemy and Mine" supplementary to the business methods program.

Adjournment was taken at 1:30 o'clock.

Damage to the extent of over $600 was done to a large dwelling in Hop River, Tuesday morning and the building narrowly escaped being entirely gutted by fire through the efficiency of neighbors, who used a water pump to extinguish the flames. The fire broke out at 8:30 o'clock and was caused by a defective chimney. Simultaneously, the roof was a mass of roaring flames. The Bank street Engine House in this city was appealed to for assistance, but as the place was out of the local jurisdiction the department members could not respond. Hop River residents got busy with their water pump and at 9:15 o'clock had the fire under control. The roof was badly damaged and some of the furniture in the upper tenement was destroyed. The building is owned by L. E. Oliner of 55 Broad street, this city and was occupied by Dorder Sorsokiep. The house is located at a point about two hundred feet from the Tolland Leather Board Company paper mill which is temporarily closed.

At the annual meeting of the Mansfield Center church a supper was served at 6 o'clock to about 75. Roll call followed, most of the absent members responded by letter and a number sent contributions. At the annual business session, Rev. T. H. Jones was in charge. Rev. Florence Jones offered prayer. The church officers and societies of the church gave reports. All organizations are in excellent financial condition. W. F. Storrs, church treasurer, reported all bills paid, leaving a balance of $48 in the treasury. The pledges for the coming year are the largest the church ever had. The officers are: Clerk; George H. Wyman; treasurer, Walter F. Storrs; assistant treasurer, Abbie F. Olds; deacons, T. Arthur Barrows, Henry S. Brown (for three years) and John Jacobson; trustees, Wilbert F. Davoll, Alfred Oden (for three years) and Robert E. Stearns; auditor, T. Arthur Barrows, superintendent of Sunday school, Marlette E. Walker; examining committee, the pastors, deacons, Mrs. Emma Crane, Mrs. Alice E. Stearns, George H. Wyman, Theresa S. Eaton and Walter F. Storrs.

Rev. T. H. Jones is to give a lecture on India, in the Mansfield Center church, Friday evening. Mr. Jones formerly resided in that country and received his boyhood education there. He is thoroughly acquainted with India, its geography, customs and religions.

The fourth annual installation and banquet of A. C. Tyler Auxiliary, No. 14 was a decided success, Monday evening in the G. A. R. Hall. The attendance numbered one hundred and thirty. City and town government officials were guests of honor with commanding officers of the posts and camps of the civil and world war. Members of A. C. Tyler Camp also attended.

JEWETT CITY

Shea Bros. gave the boroughites a real thrill Tuesday afternoon, when they visited the markets with their big truck filled with 18-inch ice. Those with visions of immediate ice cutting were quieted when told that it was some of the left-over crop of last winter.

During the snap of Monday night the fields froze over and Tuesday night there was two-inch ice reported.

There was no little anxiety among consumers last week with visions of one dollar-a-hundred ice, if it had to be shipping from northern points.

L. F. Lewis once had to get ice from Maine. In hot summer weather the shrinkage was close to 50 per cent. A car loaded at Bangor with 40 tons reached Jewett City at not much more than 20 tons.

Buds on lilac bushes in different parts of the borough were noted to have started under the influence of the mild weather.

When Peggy, The Darling of New York comes to town the fire laddies will all be there to see. A man reports that for a true fire scene and life net act it is a winner.

The lowest thermometer reading reported Tuesday morning was 3 degrees above. Not this winter has the mercury reached zero.

Old Cluey Watson was ever Tuesday to get a half dozen newly purchased steel traps, which came down to the express office. He says that with no snow his catch of fur bearing animals is likely to fall much below the year when his peltries netted him over $400. One of his trap lines runs north from in back of the old Wiley school house. Along side of the line for a short distance, in about the wildest country to be found anywhere, there runs an old logging road that leads, in a sort of uncertain way from Voluntown to Stone Hill.

Old Cluey tells about one day early last spring he was taking up some traps down in these forgotten wilds, when he heard an altogether unusual noise. He had no idea what was coming until mingled with the rattling and coughing, he could detect now and then a judiciously applied small cuss word. Cluey laid low and saw the circus pass. He now declares that that fellow named Barnett, the trout expert from Jewett City is the only man that ever went over that old road in an automobile. And he is ready to bet a stack of skunk skins on it!

KARA, MYSTERY MAN, ANSWERS MANY QUESTIONS

Kara, the original mystery man from India, who is playing a week's engagement at the Palace theater, answers the following questions that have been sent to him through The Bulletin:

R. V. S.: Regarding your question, I cannot tell you something that is not true as you would soon find it out. This would do you and all concerned more harm than good. I say that in time I feel that the freedom you desire can be obtained. Right now, you are a victim of circumstances, and you are making a sacrifice that will be rewarded with happiness and its interest. Have courage—lack of confidence will never win.

Mrs. W. H.: As well as I would like to give the name of the party who took the cart, I cannot, as I am not allowed by law. That class of people would perhaps sue you and I for damages. However, I don't feel that it is lost for good. It is my psychic impression that you will obtain same or the equivalent.

Mr. C. A. C.: While I feel that the party you mentioned cares for you a great deal, I don't think you have any right to think that you can marry her now as freedom of some kind must be obtained, especially since she has not said or done anything to lead you into the belief that she does know. Perhaps if the present condition did not exist she would be glad to.

Mrs. A. K., Danielson, Conn.: Regarding your son and daughter, I feel that they have both been adopted, from the institution they were placed either by you or by someone else. Space does not permit me to go into detail, as to their present names, etc. I say this to you, I feel that they are in circumstances now than you could afford to offer them. And to try to locate them would perhaps interfere with the good future that has been planned for them, by those who have adopted them.

Mrs. W. S. H.: Your husband has little or no chance to stop drinking altogether, as long as he will associate with the people he does, also as long as he can get liquor as easily, and as plentiful as he does at the present time. And, too, you must remember his father and mother both drank.

Mrs. M. E. M.: I feel a change is what you need, whether or not you remain there. Being dissatisfied you could not hope to be happy, healthy and successful. Even if you return to the former place, after being away and having found out that you were not better off, that alone would make you feel satisfied, and you will, I am sure, find things much different than you imagine they were, and would be able to appreciate things you never realized before existed. I am positive it is only psychological with you.

A. E. G.: Your quickest way to locate the bicycle is to inquire where second-handed bicycles are sold, as there is no doubt in my mind that it has been taken by a professional thief and would naturally be disposed of immediately, at a sacrifice, so as to throw anyone off the track that would be suspicious.

Mrs. C. C.: There is no reason that you should think that your life's dream of happiness will not materialize, and that the stork will not visit your house. I am sure the Lord will smile on you, and perhaps when he does he will not only smile, but laugh out loud, then the delay will be overcome.

Miss N. F.: I am very sorry that I cannot give you the name of the party who bought four aprons, in the Norwich store and charged them to you. I am not allowed to do this, as well as I know. If you are suspicious of someone you would do well to follow this down and I feel sure you would get light on this case. Your sister's diamond ring will only be located when a certain party dies and will confess, on the death bed that they were responsible for the disappearance of same.

M. S. F.: I am very sorry to have to tell you that I do not see that you will be able to leave Norwich in the near future, regardless of your plans. They will not materialize as you would have to use too much force to have come out as you plan so soon. Your stay is infinite, but not permanent. Anything that is obtained by force, influence, or pull, will not last, and should you resort to this, you are subject to lose whatever obtained the same way. In all things let the natural law work out.

L. E. D.: I fear you will be compelled to remain in Staten Island this fall and part of the winter.

L. E. W.: If you have not already placed your application in for the position you have in mind, you should do so at once, as there will be an opening soon. It is impossible to secure same now, if you did it would be worthless as you would be jeopardizing someone who needs the position every bit as much and perhaps more than you do. But if you will follow out my advice as soon as a vacancy can be made in that capacity, without hurting the interest of anyone else you will be called upon to fill same. It should not be later than early spring, between now and that time you will get enough extra work to give you the necessities of life. You don't need the luxuries. You will have your own home in the latter part of your life, when you need it most. When you are older and have a larger family will be a good time to have it.

More questions will be answered tomorrow. Send your questions in as per the rules. The questions sent to The Bulletin are answered in The Bulletin only and not from the stage. The questions answered from the stage are the questions asked by the spectators who are at that particular performance.

Write your full and correct name, and your question, address same to Kara, care The Norwich Morning Bulletin, and your answer will appear in the Kara's Question and answer column. Only your initials will be used in giving the answer to your question and the answers will be right to the point, at no time will the same be embarrassing to the most fastidious.

AT THE STRAND

How a man's dual personality can clash with itself, stripping one side of his nature bare of its grossness rekindling it with the fire of his better self, is pictured vividly in "Trifling With Honor," the Universal-Jewel production which opens at the Strand Theatre, Thursday.

It is the story of a professional baseball player who had won the distinction of being the crack hitter of his league and held the esteem of every fan who had ever seen him play, but whose memory was darkened with visions of gray days spent within prison walls.

Bat Shugrue was an alias for a chap who was known in the underworld as the "Gas-Pipe Kid"; the "Kid" had done his "bit" in Sing Sing Quentin prison, had been paroled, but violated his parole on the first day away from prison. He turned to professional baseball to mask his identity, his old life faded and he became one of the sensations of the baseball world.

How Bat was brought face to face with the biggest decision of his life with the trust of a boy balancing an iron gate barring his freedom presents a gripping human interest drama.

Bat stayed true to the faith of the boy, and out of the horror that had gripped his soul grew the first real moments of happiness that he had ever known.

The story was written by William Slavens McNutt and filmed at Universal City under the direction of Harry Pollard.

AT THE BREED

Many people have read the "Boston Blackie" stories by Jack Boyle. Probably the one with the greatest dramatic interest is "The Water Cross." This adventure tale has been produced for the screen by William Fox and is called "Boston Blackie". It will appear at the Breed theatre today and Thursday, with William Russell as the star.

If motion picture audiences demand thrills, and suspense, action and romance, recitals of courage and love, for their entertainment, then they would not be disappointed in the offering at the Breed. Russell is capable of playing the title role by reason of his rugged strength and the power that is expressed in his face. The feminine lead is given to Eva Novak, who in previous pictures, has proved an appealing screen type. The recent success of films adapted from popular stories augurs well for "Boston Blackie."

The little Fox actress is seen to best advantage in her new role of the stenographer of district attorney. Her employer soon finds himself enmeshed in the charm of the girl and proposes marriage. She accepts, but in the meantime is forced to accompany a former pal of her now reformed and repentant father on an errand of theft that the name of her parent may be spared from threatened blackmail.

In her unlawful but righteous mission the unfortunate Bess (Miss Mason) is discovered and later exposed to her husband. What happens from here on will afford an evening of exceptional entertainment.

In the cast with the Fox luminary is Albert Roscoe, famed for his brilliant support of many of the nation's feminine stage stars on Broadway. The production was directed by Henry Otto, and the cast includes such other names as Richard Tucker, Joseph Girard, and Edward Martindale.

Other pictures on the bill include a news and a scenic.

AT THE LYCEUM, NEW LONDON

Regina Wallace who plays one of the leading roles in George Kelly's newest comedy-drama, "The Show-Off", which comes to the Lyceum Theatre, New London, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee hopes some day to include her experience as an actress a condition which most artists fear most of all—being stranded in a town far from home and being forced to walk the rails.

"You see," smiled Miss Wallace, "this experience fails to be the lot of most actors and actresses some time in their rather hectic careers, but thus far I have been unfortunate enough to have missed this most wonderful, romantic, and delightful adventure. While being stranded without money to return home might have its direful results in the way of missing meals and not having a bed to sleep in, still I think you get a good idea of life from the viewpoint of the great army of people who habitually find themselves placed in similar circumstances.

Miss Wallace in "The Show-Off" plays the part of Amy Fisher, daughter of an American family who refuses to heed the advice of her folks in the matter of selecting a husband, but like most American girls, Amy thinks she knows it all and can see far beyond the vision of her elders. When warned that the man she has selected to be her husband is nothing but a braggard, boaster and show-off, after whom, incidentally the play is named, she refuses to believe what she hears and goes right on with direful results. How the predictions of her family come true makes this one of the most amusing and dramatic epics of the stage.

Stewart & French producers of Mr. Kelly's first play, "The Torch-Bearers", a satire on the little theatre movement and also of the merry comedy "Meet the Wife", now successfully being presented at the Klaw Theatre, New York, are the producers of "The Show-Off", Mr. Kelly directed the piece.

DANIELSON

Modernists who insist that a heavy wind may indicate no more than that some aircraft like the Shenandoah is in the offing, when a heavy gale blows, and are sure that the commotion is nothing but a swirl from the airship's propellers, were surprised Tuesday morning to find the temperature no lower than zero, although amateur forecasters who have lived a few years and experienced the bitterness of Monday night's weather were sure that the reading on the following morning would be at least ten below.

The fundamentalists seem to rate as victors in the latest weather forecasting—for far from being drawn away from basic considerations they were insisting Monday night that it's as cold as it's going to be; the temperature will not be any lower Tuesday morning." They win! It was zero here at Woodward's at 9 p. m. Monday and that was the average minimum recorded about town Tuesday morning. The conservative prediction was based on the fact that the wind was blowing a gale, making the weather seem more severe than it really was. It was a winning viewpoint.

One of the surprises of the morning was the fact that 80 per cent. of Alexander's lake was rough, blue water. It did not freeze over, even under the stress of Arctic-like weather. And the heavy wind, keeping the surface of the lake rough, is held accountable for that. So the prospective ice crop seems as uncertain as at any other time during the winter. Though calm, steady cold the next few days may again bolster up hope.

Speaking of weather, it has been recalled that the year 1810 developed a January that to date was very much like the present one. A writer under date of January 11 says:

My researches into old New England weather records, for parallels to the present winter's conditions, now bring me to the year 1810, when an extraordinary thing happened. That was the coldest year ever recorded in eastern Europe. Nobody can tell exactly how cold it really was, for the reason that the mercury froze in the bulbs of thermometers in some localities—but it has to be more than 37 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, to do that.

While the foregoing described terrific cold spell was raging in Europe, New England was having a lovely warm spell. The mercury recorded 71 degrees on January 12; 70 degrees on January 15; 73 degrees on January 17; and the sun set glowing red, with the mercury at 67 degrees, on January 18.

But that European cold wave was on the way.

That summerish January 18 was on a Thursday. And the next 24 hours are recorded in New England weather history as "Cold Friday," the mercury going so far below zero that many people were frozen to death in the streets of towns and cities in southern New England.

So came the cold wave of Monday and Tuesday after a remarkably mild January. It was nothing new in the way of January weather, as the records of the corresponding month 114 years ago clearly shows.

Tuesday evening in the rooms of the Social club friends of Miss Lena Roberge gave a linen shower in her honor. Many diversions were introduced to make the evening an especially happy one. There was a musical program, Misses Elizabeth Dunn and Miss Katherine McGorty assisting. Refreshments were served.

Tourtelotte High school's basket-ball team will make its first appearance of the season here this (Wednesday) evening for a game with the Killingly High school team. The visitors have a stronger aggregation this season than has represented the school in years. Killingly's powerful aggregation will not be worried about this; in fact, it likely will inspire them to pile up a bigger score than ever against Tourtelotte, one of the teams it will take particular pleasure in defeating this season.

East Killingly is a most extraordi-nary place—weatherwise and otherwise. In the first place it has a king. That, of course, has little relation to the weather, at least it may so be supposed. In summer it is from 10 to 15 degrees cooler up in that highland section of the town than it is in Danielson, and, by all that is strange and puzzling, the temperature runs from 6 to 10 degrees warmer there when Danielson is experiencing its frigid season. This, it would appear, is by favor of the gods, and their royal representative in that territory, where they have to buy less ice and less fuel to meet seasonal needs than their less fortunate brethren here in the valley.

Monday, at Brooklyn, there was a meeting of town chairmen, constituting the county committee, in the Pure Bred Bull campaign that is being conducted in Windham county by the county agent, F. L. Davis in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

County Agent Davis was well satisfied with the results of the meeting one of the events that eventually will lead to a complete inventory of the dairy herds of the county and of the bulls that are members of them, and as to whether these bulls are pure bred, scrubs—and the herd results being obtained.

Mr. Davis and A. R. Merrill, dairy specialist, were the speakers at the meeting.

Among those who attended the meeting were Milan D. Whitaker of South Killingly, Alexander Maitland of Thompson, Clarence Salmon of Brooklyn, Chester Jewett of Hampton, E. G. Gallup of Scotland, Fred Rosebrooks and Thomas Marra of Windham, John Tanner and E. S. Gallup of Sterling.

Tuesday afternoon, at his home in Central Village, funeral services for William F. Gardiner, 73, were conducted by Rev. Mary F. MacComber, burial being in Evergreen cemetery at that place. The bearers were Willard Gardiner and Wilfred Gardiner of the town of Plainfield, Herman Chapman of Plainfield and Henry Anderson of Danielson. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Mr. Gardiner was a native of Sterling. He had lived in towns in this part of the county practically all of his life. For years he was a resident on the West Side in Danielson and was engaged during his active years as a carpenter. He leaves his wife, a niece, Mrs. L. A. Bradford of Danielson and cousins who are resident in the town of Plainfield.

More damaged radiators followed attempts to drive cars in the extreme cold of Tuesday morning—even radiators that had a high percentage of alcohol mixed with the water in them.

The service battery has what will be one of the most important concerts and balls of the winter season scheduled for the latter part of next month.

Among the jobs that have been trying the nerve and staying qualities of those holding them down during the cold of the past two days are those held by the mail carriers, city and rural.

Mrs. Melissa Carver, 72, died on Tuesday at Goodyear, where she had been a resident for years. Mrs. Carver was a native of Pomfret. She was the widow of James B. Carver, who died three years ago. She leaves a son, Charles Carver, of Goodyear and a grandson, Charles Carver, of Danielson.

PUTNAM

Putnam's police have taken up physical culture, as a diversion of the mid-winter season. Aside from routine duties, there isn't much to claim the attention of the officers these days. In their spare time they are practicing at punching the bag and doing athletic stunts on a horizontal bar, that has been put in place at the police station.

One who has observed the officers keenly expresses the opinion that they are getting pretty good. He has seen Captain Jarvis whanging away at the bag and has noted the grace with which he can do evolutions on the horizontal bar. He has seen the patrolmen in action and allows they are getting into mighty fine condition practicing the stunts they have set for themselves.

All of this means tough going for any man who may get a bit flighty with Putnam officers if they try to arrest him for good cause and he starts to put up an argument.

There are officers in the squad who can punch the bag with such vigor that it sounds much like a hard rainstorm on a tin roof as it beats a merry rhythm against the top board. There are officers who can hang by their left ankle while shooting a perfect .38, and do a lot of other things like that—and they have perfected themselves in all this ability without letting more than the occasional visitors to the station know anything about it.

Their chests are out and shoulders back, as a result of the fine training they are taking. Occasionally a visiting officer who happens into the station is invited to join the gymnastics. The enthusiasm runs high. Once in a while an officer may get all tangled up in some evolution on the horizontal bar, necessitating the calling of a clinic to devise ways and means of disentangling him from himself, but progress is noted every day and the results are gratifying.

Students recently entering the state trade school in the various departments are—C. I. Button, Norwich, electrical department; G. E. Kaiser, East Killingly, machine department; W. Pigeon, Putnam, electrical department; W. Turovich, New London, textile department; Joseph Polak, North Grosvenordale, textile department; Edward Joyal, Putnam, carpentry department; Herbert Watson, Mystic, electrical.

The total enrollment of the day students at the school in all classes is 206. The evening class attendance at the present time numbers 134, making a total day and evening enrollment of 340. There has been some falling off in the evening classes since the first of the year.

The machine department has recently added to its equipment by making of small tools and the purchase of a new machine tool.

A new set of lockers have been added to the school equipment to take care of the increased need in this direction.

There have been some requests for instruction in the brick laying trade. The school administration feels that the demand should be well sustained before any action be taken to supply instruction in this work.

The carpentry students are busy installing inside finish in house located on Schol sotreet. This work is about completed. In addition to this very splendid experience considerable cabinet work of various kinds is being carried on in the carpentry shop.

The textile department has recently finished 425 yards of hospital bandage, to be used at the local hospital, also about 300 yards of oxford. This is an especially nice product and will be used by the sewing department for middy suits and the remainder will be disposed of locally. Four thousand pounds of raw cotton was purchased for this department a short time ago. This will provide material for instruction to be worked into yarn and cloth products. It is the policy of this department to duplicate mill conditions and build its instruction upon mill problems so that academic instruction will directly apply to the cotton textile industry.

The electrical department is carrying on considerable work in motor re-winding, battery work and house wiring, together with the study of the theory and experiments necessary for the full exploitation of this course of study.

The trade school plans to have its annual open night some time the latter part of March when the public will be invited to inspect the various departments while in operation and examine the quality of instruction given as evidenced by work performed.

Machine department instruction is at the present time centering about a new type of machine being designed and built by the school. The students hope it will meet the need for which it was designed, and they are getting excellent experience in its construction.

Students from all departments are benefiting very materially in the splendidly selected academic subjects applying to their particular trades in mathematics, technical knowledge and drawing, as provided by the drafting department. Here the carpentry boy gets mathematics as applied in his particular trade—such as estimating amount of materials from construction drawing, finding costs of materials and working out problems met with in various types of carpentry construction. Electrical students are instructed in drawing on electrical apparatus as used in the department and in accordance with the trade practices. Machine students are instructed in designing of tools, machine parts and general machine design, the aim being to make each academic study contribute toward the general development of an all-round mechanic.

Instructors' meetings are held frequently at the school, a meeting being scheduled for the afternoon of January 25th, at which time the following subjects will be discussed: Job Planning—from Expense Orders and Production Orders, Attendance—Effect on Department Cost of Training, Developing Confidence and Initiative in the Student. These meetings provide an opportunity for the exchange of ideas and are very beneficial from the standpoint of co-ordinating department methods and make for co-operation of all the faculty in the interest of the student.

During the last fifty years development of high specialization methods has given the world the highly skilled operator in one or two processes or sub-divisions of a trade. While this has been of inestimable value in the light of greater production and lessened costs of commodities it has tended to decrease the amount of trade knowledge represented by all members of the crafts. The school believes in enlarging and developing as fully as possible trade knowledge to the extent of its utility, thereby preserving fuller knowledge and processes of the trades.

At Pomfret, Monday evening, Coun-ty Agent F. L. Davis met with the town committee directing the Pure Bred Bull campaign that is interesting dairymen throughout Windham county. The members of this committee are Andrew Amidon, John Stromberg, Arthur Botham, Howard White, Thomas Hanley and Joseph Stoddard. This committee will canvass the dairymen of Pomfret with a view to getting reports on herd sires. It will be ascertained whether a herd is headed by a pure bred bull, a scrub bull, or whereby no bull is kept. When these reports are filed the Farmers' association, with headquarters here, will have what will amount practically to an inventory of the dairy herds of the neighboring town, and like work in this campaign is being carried out in various towns of the county, all of which will be covered before the work is completed.

Friends here will be in Worcester today to attend the funeral of Miss Katherine Elizabeth Burns, who was a nurse at the hospital, at the church of the Holy Angels.

The mercury brought up short, af-ter a sharp downward plunge, at zero, or thereabouts, in this city Tuesday morning. Some readings were 4 or 5 degrees above and some instruments noted for their exaggerations showed down to 6 below. The heavy wind that accompanied the cold wave made it especially hard to bear.

After having been subjected to an autopsy that it is hoped will show the exact cause of death, the body of Joseph Mathurin was re-interred in St. Mary's cemetery. The autopsy was performed by a Hartford surgeon who came here especially for the purpose. A claim for compensation may hinge on the results of the autopsy, on which no report was given out here, but may be made public later. Mr. Mathurin died in this city a few days ago.

As in other places in the county, gasoline has been advanced in this city recently and is now two cents a gallon above the minimum price reached after the long and gradual slump from the high rate prevailing a year ago.

Numbers who are in the habit of using automobiles in getting about found the trolley cars are much more convenient and comfortable means of conveyance during the cold wave, when the motor cars were in many instances given a rest for the time being.

The Killingly High school basketball team will come here Friday evening for a game with the Putnam High school team—the first meeting of the season between these teams.

High winds of the week have upped over lines of snow fences set up in towns hereabouts by state highway department crews and they will have to be righted before a heavy snowstorm comes to be of any great value in saving roads they are set to protect from being blocked.

A play-recital by Miss Grace Sage, in the assembly hall at the high school, Monday evening, attracted an appreciative audience. The proceeds will go into the treasury of the class of 1925.

A long list of new books—fiction and non-fiction—has been added to the shelves at the public library.

The GENERAL CORD

goes a long way to make friends

The Evolution of the Balloon Tire

1916

The first step in the development of the present Balloon type tire was made by General in 1916 when the original Jumbo 30 x 3½ tire was brought out. This tire was 19% over-size—very thin construction and excessively large air chamber—features which are merely magnified in the Balloon type tire of today. Thus it is found that even at that early date General was building tires according to present-day Balloon principles. This tire pointed the way and set the pace for the development of the Balloon idea.

The next step forward was the Jumbo 30 x 3½ Cord originated by General in 1919. General again led the field and emphasized the possibilities of low air pressure—only 40 lbs. of air pressure required for this tire.

Also in the larger sizes General Cords for years have been giving mileage that has made the name General famous on very low inflation—requiring 40% less air than is required for other standard tires of the same sizes. That is why General has been known for years as the low air pressure tire and this car-saving and comfort feature in the General Cord of all sizes satisfies the most particular demand.

The new Balloon type tires simply carry out and emphasize to an extreme degree the low air pressure advantages known to the General line for years. The General Balloon Cord represents the most advanced and dependable stage of Balloon type tire because it is based on long experience in low-pressure construction. It is the outgrowth of ideas which have been constantly employed by this company for seven years in the development and improvement of its regular line.

OUR MEXICAN POLICY.

Revolutionists in Mexico must by this time understand how the United States government feels towards those who use unconstitutional methods. This country has no disposition to take part in any political movement in the neighboring nation. It does not undertake to say who shall be president of Mexico or who shall not. It takes the position, however, that inasmuch as it has insisted upon the Mexican government meeting certain requirements in order to be recognized that it must naturally stand by a government which has done much for stability and which is now threatened solely because of the efforts being made to forestall the coming election. Those efforts are decidedly against the provisions of the Constitution of that country, and because they are and because they threaten constitutional government there this government has permitted the established government to obtain war supplies here and to move troops through this country. It has also put an embargo upon all supplies destined for the rebels.

Furthermore it insists that those who have resorted to unconstitutional methods to obtain government control in Mexico must not interfere with legitimate trade of American interests in Mexico. This is another move which this government has been forced to make by the revolutionists. While we are not actuated by the single purpose of helping Obregon in informing the de la Huerta forces that they must not interfere with American trade, it amounts to just about that for it is evident that no proper trade activities of other countries would be tolerated. If de la Huerta thought that this country was going to sit idly by, take a watchful waiting attitude and permit the revolutionists to get all the supplies they desired from this country and to interrupt our trade from Mexican ports, it has had a chance to realize its mistake. Their predicament is, however, of their own seeking. Had they made the test at the ballot box instead of by a display of revolutionary activities there could have been no objection and there would have been no participation on the part of this government.

BETTER FOREIGN SERVICE.

Perhaps no country attaches more importance to its diplomatic corps and consular service than the United States, and yet many other countries seem to do much more for their foreign service by laying the foundation in the first place for a well trained body of men, and then keeping them in the employ of the government through promotions.

It took much urging before congress was willing to put the government activities on a business basis through the adoption of a budget system, and it may be some time before it will be ready to take similar action concerning the foreign service. But there has been provided through the Rogers bill a plan that should be of inestimable value relative to the corps of foreign representatives, their selection, their training and their service.

It is not to be inferred that highly capable men are not to be found in our foreign service, but it is too often the case that just at the time when consular representatives get to the point where they are of the greatest service to the country that they are called away by alluring dollars from other fields. They believe they have reached about the limit of their rope in the foreign service and it is natural that they should look out for themselves. Others stick because they like it or because they are not dependent upon their salaries.

Under the Rogers bill there would be a reorganization of the foreign service by which there would be established a clear line of promotion, certain increases in pay and a closer relation between the careers of the consuls and the diplomats. A government must always be free to select as diplomats those in whom the administration has the greatest confidence, but there is nevertheless a big opportunity for training young men for the foreign service by giving them to understand that they are not going to be glued to one post for life but that promotions and changes will come as opportunity permits and efficiency is displayed.

CRAWLING UNDER THE BARS.

There is nothing surprising over the steps that are being taken to keep out the undesirable aliens or to block the schemes of those who undertake to evade the immigration laws of this country. It is all well enough to make sentimental pleas and urge leniency but inasmuch as the laws have been established for the best interests of the country it is evident that they must get some consideration.

Let the idea be circulated that there is a laxness in this direction or that and there will be a flood of those who will crawl in in violation of the law and become just that handicap to the country that the law was set up to prevent.

Stowing away on ships is one of the old methods of evading the law. Sometimes it is without connivance and sometimes it is. Inasmuch as those caught must be carried back it puts the ship officials on the alert to prevent stowing away, while the penalty of smuggling is such as to quickly discourage any indulgence that encounters proper enforcement.

Ducking under the immigration bars is resorted to by those who cannot get into the country any other way. Invariably it means a type of person that is not going to make a desirable citizen. This may not hold true to such a degree at the present time as it did once, for the restricted immigration quota is what some are anxious to escape, but it nevertheless means a violation of the established law, which cannot be overlooked if the law itself is going to accomplish the purpose for which it was adopted.

Repeated are the instances where new circumstances are used to have the rulings on the law set aside or to obtain exceptions in these cases. But when such is done it is forgotten that because of that very course it permits of others doing the same thing. It isn't so much what might be done in a single case but what is going to be done in the hundreds of others just like them. It is a situation where the best interests of the country have to get due attention.

RADIO AT INSTITUTIONS.

At frequent intervals there are organizations that make it a point to provide entertainment for the inmates of various institutions. It is a highly commendable undertaking and one in which those who make the arrangements and participate as interested in giving a treat to the unfortunate quite as much as those for whom it is done are pleased at such thoughtfulness.

A Sunday school class has recently presented a radio outfit to an almshouse in another state that life may be a bit brighter for the 300 inmates. This move is in keeping with that which has been made by certain organizations in this state in respect to some of our hospitals, but there is no reason why it might not be extended with good results to almshouses as well.

Perhaps there are those among the inmates who are there through their own folly. Others may be there because of circumstances over which they had no control. The fact of the matter is that it doesn't make much difference why they are there, but inasmuch as there are such institutions there is a good work that can be done to give the inmates a bit of cheer through such an instrument as the radio. That means entertainment when they want it, or at much more frequent intervals than might otherwise be the case, and it means entertainment for those who need something to make the time pass a bit more pleasantly.

That the almshouse inmates should be cheered by the radio is by no means surprising. It is only what might be expected and just the thing that would cheer and interest many other institution of that or similar character.

LENINE'S DEATH.

The latest report of the death of Nicolai Lenine is unquestionably authentic and it ends a career, in which the entire world has been particularly interested, especially during the last half dozen years. Before that he was virtually an unknown.

Lenine was a man of education and one who had been constantly wrapped up in revolutionary activities. He saw and made the most of his opportunity in the days following the overthrow of the czar. He wasn't satisfied to be among the leaders, but went to the top and there he has continued to stay despite the fact that on repeated occasions it was maintained that his government could not exist for more than six months. Bolshevism was the product of Lenine. It has had its run in Russia and Lenine was wise enough to see that it was too radical. Modification was the result and the changes that have been made are numerous but the Lenine government has never been brought to the point where it could get the recognition of the United States.

As the king pin of the Russian government has been removed much interest is bound to be centered in future action. Lenine's influence has unquestionably been powerful in Moscow and Russia. His death would naturally throw greater responsibilities on the premier's subordinates. Just what changes it is going to mean and how much confusion and weakness will develop rests with the future to disclose. Whether Lenine's passing will have any marked changes upon the policies of the Russian soviet government is something that will be awaited with interest by the whole world.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

How are the predictions of your favorite weather prophet panning out?

It is only natural of course that there should be those who are complaining of the heat in January.

In spite of the great performance by the Shenandoah most people are happy that they were not aboard.

The man on the corner says: Stoves, fireplaces and radiators haven't been so popular this winter as this week.

The Shenandoah is going to the north pole after real estate, just as if there weren't many bargains much nearer than that.

Perhaps the fellow who was handed counterfeit money for a cellar full of prewar whiskey didn't get stuck much worse than the chap getting the "real" stuff.

Those who are sending in votes on the Bok peace award realize of course that they are not obligated to vote otherwise than their judgment dictates.

The state will get an increase of $131,165 from bank taxes this year, but it will need it to make up for the revenue sacrificed in removing the toll bridges.

With taxation averaging $66.87 each for every man, woman and child in this country in 1923 some seem to think that it ought to be increased rather than reduced.

The Greenehams wondered and wondered from whom had come the beautiful little lamp which adorned their desk in the new living room. It was their only anonymous wedding present and it caused both Jack and Felicia much worry and endless speculation.

"Very likely somebody is feeling hurt because we don't acknowledge it," said Felicia. "Don't you know anybody in New York, Jack, who might have sent it? If only the name of the shop where it was purchased had been on the package we might have written and asked about it."

"Felicia, I have it! Bill Jennings is living in New York now. I don't see why I didn't think of him before. Of course he sent the lamp. He was always an artistic chap, and that is just the sort of thing he would select. You must write to him."

"You do it, Jack. I've written all the thank-you notes and I never knew Bill. You and he were such pals at college, I'm sure he would much rather hear from you than from me."

"All right, dear, if you say so," answered Jack indulgently.

It was just a week after this conversation that Jack brought a letter home from his office which he handed to Felicia with a grin.

"Oh, dear," she exclaimed as she glanced over the few lines.

"Why the 'oh, dear'?" he asked.

"Doubtless Bill will send us something snappy."

"But it's just as if we had hinted for it, Jack."

"Nonsense, darling. He says that he was too busy to attend to our gift before the wedding, but he has something in mind which will be sent soon. Now, don't look so skeptical. Give the old thing the benefit of the doubt. That's only decent of us."

"Well, I'm glad I didn't write the letter of thanks," remarked Felicia. "Do you know, Jack, I felt a little doubtful at the time, for the same moment that you thought of Bill Jennings I thought of our cousin, Lucy Strong. She doesn't live right in New York, but in one of those Orange suburbs. I haven't heard from her for a long time, but I did send her an invitation, and I feel sure now that it must have been she that sent it."

"Well you write her, Felicia darling, and see what you draw. I certainly have done my bit."

"I shall write to her most tactfully about a gift without a card. I'll just try to give her an opportunity to say she sent it, if she did."

"I should like to see how you do it, my dear."

"Well, you're not going to," answered Felicia with spirit, and as it turned out she worked long and hard at the composition of that letter.

She dispatched it with misgivings, which proved not unfounded, for Cousin Lucy Strong replied immediately that she knew nothing about the lamp that she never gave breakable presents herself. She said that was all in a line with modern extravagance, and that she was sending a quilted bedspread that had come down in the Strong family and she hoped that Felicia would treasure it.

"Well, we should treasure it, after all the trouble you took to get it," chuckled Jack.

"No more trouble than you took to get the present from Bill Jennings, which by the way, came today. It is a humidor, big enough to hold all the cigars you'd smoke in a year. I don't know what to do with it."

"I might give it to my Uncle John Greeneham. I've got to do something to pacify the old boy. I had a hot letter from him today."

"He is furious because we havn't acknowledged the desk lamp he sent us for a wedding present. He says he ordered it from New York as he didn't think that in the little western town where he lives he could get anything good enough for us. He says that if we don't like that lamp we can send it to him. He knows a school marm he could give it to. By ginger, Felicia, we must both write to him! We don't want him taking up with any school marms at his age. I'm his only heir, my dear and he may have millions and he may have nothing."

"Anyway," said Felicia, "whatever he has, it was dear of him to send all the way to New York for a gift for us."—Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Rev. Dr. William H. S. Demarest, who has resigned the presidency of Rutgers College, has been at the head of that well known institution of learning for the past eighteen years. Born at Hudson, N. Y., 60 years ago, Dr. Demarest received his A. B. degree from Rutgers at the age of 20 and his A. M. degree three years later. He then attended the New Brunswick Theological Seminary and in 1888 was ordained in the ministry of the Reformed Church in America. For several years he filled pastorates in New York state, until 1901, when he accepted the chair of church history in the New Brunswick seminary. Five years later he was called to the presidency of Rutgers. Dr. Demarest may be said to be a remarkable example of the transmission of hereditary traits. He is the fifth of his name who has been identified with the government of Rutgers College, his father, his grandfather, his great-grandfather and his great-great-grandfather all having been trustees of the institution.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Bok Peace Plan

Mr. Editor: My subject is Bok Peace plan and my text is from The Bulletin of Jan. 16, 1924:

"Is there going to be a lot of stay at home voters concerning the peace plan with general apathy in command?

My business is that of the ministry and I always take a text when I attempt to preach a sermon and in the beginning I wish to plead with the readers of The Bulletin to cultivate a breadth of mind that will not be too hasty nor too ill tempered in showing disappointment with the award which has been made in the Bok peace plan, that such caution is needed is evident to every impartial observer of the international relations of our country. They have become almost inextricably involved in party politics. It would be humorous were it not pathetic the extent to which Christian men and women lose their mental poise and balance when the league of nations is discussed.

With this introduction let me announce firstly: The league of nations is not a partisan question. It has been made so only by a contemptibly low stripe of politicians. There is a continually increasing body of broad minded men and women who do their own thinking, form their own conclusions and act above the low level of partisan politics. The question of a permanent court or league of nations is a question greater than the success of any political party whatever.

The democratic party as a whole has been committed to the league of nations but you will notice that the greatest republican of them all and one of the greatest of American statesmen living was chairman of the Bok peace plan committee and William Allen White of Kansas also a republican of national reputation, so that the committee making the award could not be accused of playing politics.

A second great fact stands out in bold relief—the attitude of Christian men and women. The great address of Mr. Fosdick at Springfield, Mass., at the general conference of Congregationalists last October, an utterance of such power as is seldom permitted a picked body of men to hear, was unanimously approved practically by every delegate present. The international convention of student volunteers in session in Indianapolis, The Federal Council of Church at Columbus, the World Alliance for International Friendship at Philadelphia, have been almost unanimously in favor of a world court of the league of nations. Party prejudices do not enter into these councils. Christian men and women do not permit party politics to stand in the way of human welfare when either war or world friendship is at stake. The great Christian conventions of recent years and recent days have been composed of some of the best informed most solidly thinking statesmen in our country and have been almost invariably in favor of the league or world court as great Christian movements.

Pushed by the zeal of Christian men and women, fired by the same great purpose that abolished slavery, and wrote into the Constitution the eighteenth amendment, the great end for which the league of nations and the world court seek to attain is the abolition of war and who doubts that the Christian men and women of America will fail?

During the strain and sorrow of the great war the feeling was universal that some way would be found, must be found for the nations of the earth to live in peace together. Anything less than this was unpardonable folly, unforgiveable stupidity. While our boys were dying in the trenches and on the battlefields, our slogan was "Make this world safe for democracy." We are sacrificing our sons for that great ideal and now, but six years later, the convictions and impressions of the great war are seemingly forgotten and we are drifting idly on the old stream of diplomacy which led on to the great war and which will as surely lead on to another more bitter and more deadly than the last.

Deep thinking far seeing men and women are not content to drift, but are insisting that something be done to prevent war and needless bloodshed, the breaking up of families and the wrecking of nations. Think soberly for once, and recall if you can any better plan for bringing this about than the league of nations or world court. If you can not recall a better plan or propose a better plan then why continue on under the old system which has proven so disastrous? Why not try the new plan?

Dismiss "General Apathy" from your command, sign the peace plan and be at peace with your better self.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS

Income from dividends form a considerable item in the aggregate income of many taxpayers. A dividend, for the purposes of the income-tax law, is any distribution whether in cash or property, made by a corporation to its stockholders or members out of its earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913.

A dividend is income to the stockholder as of the date when the cash or property is unqualifiedly made subject to his demand. For example a corporation may declare a dividend payable December 30, 1923, for which the stockholder did not receive his check until January 1924. The dividend is a part of his 1923 income.

Dividends received by an individual stockholder are exempt to the surtax, the reason being that the corporation which declares the dividend is subject to the normal tax on earnings out of which it is paid. Accordingly, dividends must be included in gross income, but they may be deducted as a credit in computing the normal tax.

Dividends or interest not in excess of $800 received by individuals during the years 1922 to 1926, inclusive, from domestic building and loan associations, operated exclusively for the purpose of making loans to members, are exempt from both normal and sur tax.

POETRY

The House of Fallen Leaves

So he came at last to the House
Of Fallen Leaves;
There was rustle of aspen boughs
About the eaves,
And a drooping stook stood near
Of withered sheaves.

The vacant windows gaped
And mowed at him;
There were faces weirdly shaped
In the aspen limb,
And he saw an open door
And a room half dim.

The walls were tattered and grime
Lay along the floor;
A dumb clock told of a time
That would come no more;
Then something drew him in
At the open door.

And a hollow voice cried out:
"This is your past!"
And he gazed and groped about,
Amazed, aghast;
And forth he fled from that house
With no look back cast.

The future beckons and beams;
His sigh perceives
Irradiant golden dreams
Of Loves golden sheaves,
But he cannot forget the House
Of Fallen Leaves.
—Clinton Scollard in New York Herald.

The Gardener

The gardener was dark as tongues of nightingales
That in the wide leaves tell a thousand Grecian tales

And sleep in golden nets of summer light.
"Sweet fig," he called me, and would stay the flight

Of plums that seemed Jove's golden feather rain.
Then turned, like Fortunatus, moved again

Among the boughs with silent feathered feet,
Spraying down dew like jewels among the sweet

Green darkness, figs, each like a purse of gold
Grow among leaves like dappled water green and cold.

"Beneath those laden boughs," the gardener sighs,
"Dreaming in emptiness, forgotten beauty lies."
—Edith Sitwell, in the Nation.

WOMAN HIKER HERE IN TRIP ROUND WORLD

A year ago Miss Nell Walker set out from Los Angeles, her home city, with the determination to see the capitals of the world afoot in five years. Health, knowledge and money were to be her rewards along the way. It was evident that the first of the three has come to her when she reached this city late Tuesday afternoon. She was on her way to Hartford, having come from Providence by way of New London.

There hasn't been a day since she started that she hasn't walked at least 5 miles and at times she has done 30 miles in a day's hike. When she set out, her route took her down into Mexico, then back through the central and western states into Canada. The Canadian territory was traversed from west to east and she has just come down through the New England states on her way to New York and along the Atlantic seaboard states to Florida. From there she may make a side trip to Cuba and in the spring she expects to sail for Europe and will cover that continent, the Orient, Asia, Australia and Honolulu on her way back to Los Angeles.

She travels in an approved hiking costume, khaki knickerbockers, jacket and stout shoes, carrying a knapsack wit ha 20-pound load. She stayed at the Wauregan house Wednesday night, but when the season was favorable stopped overnight at the camp sites which so many communities provide. A pneumatic mattress which she carried, besides providing a perfectly comfortable bed, proved a distinct health aid as she gained three inches in chest expansion from having to blow it up by lung power every night.

SUES FOR $12,000 FOR DEATH OF WILLIAM CRAMER

The death of William Cramer of Norwich from burns and injuries received in the fatal Hodson hotel fire in Waterbury several months ago is the basis of a $12,000 suit brought by his father, Abraham Cramer of Norwich, in the Superior court for New Haven county yesterday.

The Hodson Bros. company and Frank J. Hodson and James W. Hodson are sued separately. The case is returnable the first Tuesday of February.

The complaint alleges that it was through the negligence of the hotel owners in not providing proper means of exit that Cramer met his death.

An allegation is made that no knotted rope or other means of exit was in room 50, which Cramer occupied and that when he received many burns after trying to escape through the halls he leaped through the window and fractured his skull and received other injuries when he fell to the street. He was 28 years old.

EXPANSION HAS BEEN KEYNOTE OF YEAR WITH UNITED WORKERS

Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard was elected president of the United Workers at the organization's annual meeting held Tuesday evening in the parlors at the Hugh Osgood Memorial parish house. The meeting was called to order about 8 o'clock by Mrs. Bard who has been acting president since the death of Mrs. Henry T. Arnold. D., pastor of Park Congregational church, led the devotional exercises, offering a prayer. Mrs. Willis Austin read the following tribute to Mrs. Arnold:

The death of Mrs. Henry T. Arnold, president of the United Workers, leaves each member of the organization overwhelmed with a sense of very personal loss and grief. Seldom is it given a woman to so universally endear herself to her fellow workers. Her sweet and gracious personality made its appeal to each one of us.

Never did she fail us. Courageous and patient, progressive yet tolerant, filling extremely difficult positions with grace and efficiency, she left nothing to be desired as a leader and as a comrade. The debt of the United Workers to her can never be paid.

In the midst of our sadness, we are yet grateful, grateful that Norwich shared in that full and beautiful life. She is not lost to us. Never while any of us live, shall we forget that gentle guilding hand, that all-loving heart. Her firm faith will sustain us in days to come, the radiant memory of her will inspire us.

May the work to which she so lavishly gave herself prosper and grow! This would be the most fitting memorial she could have and the one she would most desire.

To her family, we send our tender and understanding sympathy and we resolve that this tribute be placed upon the records of the United Workers and that a copy of it be sent to Mr. Arnold and his family.

The following tribute to the memory of Mrs. Coit, honorary president, was read by Mrs. Frederick Cary:

The United Workers has suffered a great loss in the death of Mrs. Frances Dana Coit. For 40 years she has held a post of activity and service in this organization. Beginning in 1881 as secretary and treasurer of Rock Nook Home and later taking successively the offices of treasurer and vice president of the United Workers, she finally in 1910 succeeded to the presidency in which office she served for eleven years with conspicuous ability and zeal.

Knowing and understanding the wants and needs and difficulties of every department of the organization she was able and disposed to work and counsel wherever there was opportunity or occasion to employ her willing hands and warm heart.

During her administration the organization grew and expanded and became of greater benefit to the community. Hers was a loving service, unselfishly given and full of accomplishments.

Not only have we lost a worker and guiding spirit but each one of her associates has lost a friend and we feel the sadness of her death as we miss her face and voice in our gatherings and deliberations.

The tributes were ordered incorporated in the records of the organization and copies will be sent to each of the respective families.

Executive Committee's Annual Report

Mrs. W. C. Burgy, accompanied by Frederick W. Lester gave a vocal solo. The secretary, Mrs. Channing M. Huntington read the report of the last annual meeting and the report was accepted as read. Mrs. Huntington then read the annual report of the executive committee as follows:

Eleven regular meetings have been held by the executive committee during the year 1923.

The work of all departments has been carried on with the efficiency and interest which characterises our workers. The young and the aged in the homes of the organization, have been cared for and made comfortable and happy, while others sick or needy have been attended and relieved through various departments. The need of psychiatric work has become so great, that it was after much consideration decided to establish a neuropsychiatic clinic—in connection with the family welfare, and public health nursing departments. As much of this work is among children, the Rock Nook home committee contributes generously to its support.

An important change has taken place in the family welfare department, in the resignation of Miss Edith Moran, who has been succeeded by Miss Julia Corcoran, already familiar to us, as deputy factory inspector of Connecticut.

In the death of Arthur H. Brewer we have lost an active worker, who for twenty years was a member of the advisory board and for a portion of that time served as its chairman.

Last year we emphasized our dream of a new Sheltering Arms building.

This year we can say that the dream is coming true—the evidence being generous gifts which bring the fund to a starting point. The combined effort of the United Workers of Norwich is all that is necessary to complete this project, so dear to Mrs. Arnold, that we may feel that any special effort we make to realize it, is a memorial to her.

The January meeting is a memorable one, as Mrs. George D. Coit was with us for the last time; she had done her usual work for the annual meeting, in placing in various parts of the city, cards announcing the meeting.

In presenting her annual report as treasurer, Miss Adelaide L. Butts gave a brief summary of the financial activities of the past year. The collection which amounted to $61.36 was taken up for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms building fund. At this point in the meeting Mrs. Burgy again entertained with a vocal selection, accompanied by Mr. Lester, after which Mrs. Bard introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. Frankwood E. Williams of New York. Dr. Williams spoke on the topic The Mental Hygiene Clinic in the Community.

Dr. Williams Speaks

Dr. Williams presented in a very interesting way a brief history of the psychiatric movement. He explained how this profession originated and of what it is endeavoring to accomplish. Ten years ago we lived in a very peaceful world, said Dr. Williams. The psychiatrist was in the hospital for the insane, busy with his patients. He was not only busy with his patients but he was curious. He studied a number of individual cases. One patient who was brought to the hospital he found had been ill mentally for ten years. His record showed that during those ten years he was in jail several times. The doctor wondered what connection if any, there was between his mental illness and the jail. Then he began to wonder how many people there are in jail who are obviously ill mentally.

Another case. A mother with seven children had been under the care of half a dozen different social agencies. The doctor saw that the woman was feeble minded. How could she be expected to work out a budget and properly care for a family of seven. The doctor was seeing these things as patients come to his hospital.

A two year investigation at Sing Sing showed that 80 per cent. of those admitted to the prison during that time were obviously not normal. Lawyers doubted that so did judges. They knew that 50 per cent. of those who passed through their courts had been there before. More recently the National Mental Hygiene committee became interested in the county jails of New York state. The examinations were not made by one man but by 15 well trained men. These men reported substantially the same figures, so we can be sure we are about right.

The reports show that only per cent. of those in the county jails are what can be called normal. Eight per cent. are insane, and 15 per cent. are feeble minded. The remainder are epileptic, etc. The psychiatrist seeks to discover the reasons for emotional handicaps that retard a person's progress. The psychiatrist has been making classifications of individuals, just as society makes classifications, but making them with a little finer instrument and a little more expert knowledge than we have had before. What is the result? At least we learn what not to do, and the diagnosis indicates what the proper treatment might be.

The psychiatrist works on the hypothesis that individuals are made and not born. He is interested in the prevention of mental diseases. There are more hospital beds in this country for mental cases than for all other hospital beds combined. There are 50,000 new mental cases admitted to institutions every year. In 15 years there will be admitted to institutions 750,000 cases of mental trouble. What are these 750,000 people now? They are largely in our high schools or in their first years in college. No one becomes suddenly insane. Mental diseases are developed over a long period of years.

The psychiatric clinic can help your community. It can assist the courts by showing them what to do in certain cases. If the clinic saves [illegible] lous and expensive mistakes you have gained. The most important service this clinic can render is to the children. Difficult children should not be allowed to grow up and "out of it." You can be sure that the difficult child won't grow "out of it" without a scar.

What we need is a more accurate understanding and less blind blame for ourselves and the children.

Following Dr. Williams' address the election of officers took place. The officers were unanimously elected as submitted by the nominating committee, Mrs. Elizabeth Sherman Peale, Mrs. Annie Billings Bliven, and Mrs. Myra R. Gague. The list of officers follows:

MOCK TRIAL ENTERTAINS SHETUCKET LODGE, I. O. O. F.

The regular meeting of Shetucket Lodge, No. 37, I. O. O. F., was held Tuesday evening at Odd Fellows hall on Main street with Noble Grand Walter Kelly in the chair. Routine business was transacted after which the third chapter in the thrilling story of The Adventures of Tom the Tow-Head was rendered by Edward F. Kinney. The fourth chapter will be told next Tuesday evening when Tom will try to find his way out of the trackless forest where he was left by Mr. Kinney.

Shortly before nine o'clock the court room was filled with interested spectators and court was opened by Clerk John McNeely and as three members of the jury were absent, new members were impaneled to take their places.

Judge Edward Kinney then called for the prosecutors to present their evidence against the defendant. Prosecuting Attorney Frank G. Smith with his assistant John J. Parsons called six witnesses to the stand and, with Attorney Parsons questioning, a vast amount of damaging evidence was presented against the defendant, Edward S. Smith, who was accused the bootlegging.

Attorneys Archie Perry and Harry N. Howard for the defense then proceeded to knock to pieces, the evidence presented by the state and presented several witnesses in rebuttal.

At the meeting of the lodge scheduled for next Tuesday evening Judge Kinney will make the charge to the jury following arguments by the lawyer and it is alleged that his charge will be a judicial masterpiece on the fine points of bootlegging, a warning against every "scofflaw" in Norwich. The plea of Prosecuting Attorney Smith, as claimed by the state is to be a volcanic enunciation, which will strike terror into the hearts of all bootleggers, while the defense plea, which will be made by Attorney Perry will abound with eloquence and pathos in hope of gaining the freedom of the accused.

The trial will open at 8.15 o'clock following the regular lodge meeting and invitations have been extended to all Odd Fellows, and members of the order, their wives and friends to be on hand for the banner event. Light refreshments will be served after court, and it is alleged that the liquid refreshments will be provided by the defendant if he is found "not guilty", these to be something within the 18th amendment as the defendant wishes to take no chance of a second trial.

NEMROD GROTTO ELECTS AND HAS ENTERTAINMENT

The annual meeting and installation of Nemrod Grotto, M. O. V. P. E. R., was held Tuesday night at Grotto hall with Monarch George Zimmerman in the chair. Routine business was transacted and reports heard after which the election took place, resulting as follows: Monarch, Herbert R. Kind; chief justice, Herman Stelzner; master of ceremonies, Edward Hindle; venerable prophet, veiled; Marshal, Everett Peckham; captain of guard, Arthur Broadhurst; treasurer, Arthur E. Story; secretary, George N. Chappell. The officers were installed in office by the retiring Monarch, George Zimmerman, after which the meeting was closed by Monarch Kind.

After the meeting a social and entertainment took place, providing amusement for the members. Special features on the program were given by members of acts now playing at the Palace Theatre, including songs, monologues and humorous anecdotes. Music was furnished during the entertainment by the Grotto Orchestra comprising Kirk Ricketts, Bruce Rogers and Tyler Gilbert.

Later in the evening refreshments of sweet cider, doughnuts, coffee, ham, roast pork, and cheese sandwiches were served.

The entertainment was one of the best in recent months and was ably taken care of by the committee comprising R. C. Brittin, William Shanley, W. W Tannar, Kirk Ricketts and Day Fillmore.

PLAINFIELD MEN UNDER SERIOUS CRIMINAL CHARGE

Danielson, Jan. 22.—Reckless youth in this age of scofflaws may be held responsible for the development, Sunday evening at Plainfield, of such a case as is becoming altogether too common in these regulated days—a case involving the seduction of Miss Beatrice Blair, not yet 16 years of age, and a resident of the town of Plainfield, and the subsequent arrest of five young men of that town and their presentation late Monday evening in a justice's court in the town of Lisbon.

As a result of the hearing before Justice Walter Drew, Silvio Jolicoeur and George Bealsford were in the New London county jail at Norwich Tuesday, in default of bonds. Edgar Lambert is at liberty under bonds for his appearance in the superior court for New London county when cases on the criminal list are again taken up for consideration. Henry Bealsford and Harry Beckett, the other young men who were in Sunday night's party, were not held following the hearing, though they were picked up by state police officers from the Danielson barracks, when the case was being worked out, as having been members of the party involved in the incidents leading up to state officers becoming interested in the matter. Kelli Anthony is named as the driver of the car in which the party was riding.

Developments at the hearing in Lisbon Monday night may not properly be recorded in public print. Nevertheless, it may be said that Miss Blair, picked up in Plainfield, was subjected to such treatment on what is known as the Lisbon road, leading out of Jewett City, that the state police here, having received certain information about the affair, promptly took up the matter and during the course of the night picked up Miss Blair and some other members of the party and brought them to the barracks here for questioning. The car that figured in the affair was located in Jewett City and some of the young men who were in the party at a place in Plainfield.

Officers Stephens and Comstock worked on the case, which has proved to be of unusual character and having characteristics of a case that occurred in this town last fall and resulted a fortnight ago in a Putnam man being sent to the county jail for a period of nine months for his relations with a Dayville girl of tender years. Like the accused in the Killingly case, George Bealsford is a married man, though not of advanced years.

FINDS NO EVIDENCE TO HOLD COLCHESTER MAN

Harold R. Webster of Colchester charged with manslaughter as the result of the death of nine-year-old Shirley Gimple of Colchester who was alleged to have died of injuries received when Webster's car struck her, was discharged by Justice Fred E. Walker, who heard testimony in the case for six hours and a half.

Attorney A. F. Libby of Norwich Monday morning and afternoon prosecuting for the state, introduced 25 witnesses. It was alleged that Webster, accompanied by a party of friends, was operating his car on the evening of December 28 while he was under the influence of liquor; that his car struck the Gimple child felling her, and causing her to sustain a fractured skull of which she died seven days later at the Backus hospital, Norwich.

Attorney Edward L. Kelly of Bridgeport, counsel for Webster, however, brought out from testimony that there were three other vehicles passing by the spot in Colchester where the Gimple girl was fatally injured, at the same time. It was at the time raining and dark. Justice Baker, in his decision, declared that the state could not assume the car that struck the girl was Webster's and that there were no grounds for holding the accused. The case was put on at 10 o'clock in the morning and Justice Baker announced his decision at 4.30 in the afternoon.

One woman, tired, weak and discouraged, put on 15 pounds in five weeks and feels fine.

We all know that Cod Liver Oil is full of flesh producing vitamines, but many people can't take it because of its horrible smell and fishy taste, and because it often upsets the stomach.

Try This Way To Get Relief From Head Colds

To stop a head cold, try this simple, direct method. Melt a little Vicks in a spoon and inhale the penetrating Vapors of Camphor, Menthol, Eucalyptus, Juniper Tar, etc. Also put a little up each nostril and snuff well back.

Another method is to heat a tin cup, put in a teaspoonful of Vicks and inhale the vapors that way. As fast as the vapors lose their strength, throw out the melted Vicks and add fresh.

HOPPE WINS SECOND BLOCK FROM SCHAEFER AND LEADS BY 261 POINTS

Chicago, Jan. 23.—(By The A. P.)—Willie Hoppe, defending his title as world's 18.2 balkline billiard champion, tonight came from behind and led young Jake Schaefer, 1,000 to 739, at the end of the second block of their 1,500 point match. The final block will be played tomorrow night.

The game was an odd mixture of mediocrity, safety play and brilliance. Schaefer failed miserably after having taken last night's block, 500 to 369. Hoppe floundered badly except in his two displays of brilliance, a 183 for the high run of the match so far, after a dozen disappointing innings, and a 173 a half dozen innings later.

Schaefer had a 70 and a 50 but in the other 19 innings failed to get above 31.

Hoppe tonight counted 631 points for an average of 23 17-21 while Schaefer got 239 for an average of 11 8-21. The match averages are: Hoppe 30 10-33; Schaefer 22 13-33.

The score by innings:

Schaefer x4, 0, 1, 2, 16, 1, 0, 70, 50, 0, 1, 11, 2, 31, 1, 23, 1, 2, 1, 20—total 739.

Hoppe 14, 5, 9, 0, 35, 0, 0, 85, 4, 12, 21, 9, 183, 0, 2, 46, 1, 172, 2, 1, 36z—total 1,000.

LODGE ARRIVES FOR BOUT WITH FIRPO

Montevideo, Uruguay, Jan. 22.—(By The A. P.)—Luis Firpo, the Argentine heavyweight, today met "Farmer" Lodge, the American pugilist, for the first time on the deck of the steamer Pan-America, which arrived from New York. Firpo had come to Montevideo to meet Hugh Gartland, his American manager, who also was a passenger on the Pan-America. Gartland and Firpo will proceed to Buenos Aires tomorrow in a seaplane.

Gartland, in an interview, said he had brought with him the United States details of a proposed fight between Firpo and Harry Wills, the American negro fighter, but that he would not discuss them until after Firpo was ready to make a decision on them. Gartland added that he had offers for exhibition bouts between Firpo and other boxers in thirty American cities.

Lodge, who is soon to meet Firpo in a bout in Buenos Aires, said he was confident that he would beat the Argentine. He spent a large portion of his time on the voyage from New York in vigorous training and said he was in perfect condition.

Lodge will establish a training camp outside of Buenos Aires and employ local talent to aid him in his training for the "go" with Firpo. Lodge will remain over in Buenos Aires for the bout between Firpo and Erminio Spalla, the Italian heavyweight, in order that he may get a line on Spalla.

He said he was signed by President Ban Johnson of the American league, who was assisted in the negotiations by Bob Quinn, former business manager of the Browns, now of the Boston Red Sox.

Terms of the contract were not revealed by Shocker, but he did say that he was satisfied not only with his salary but also with the terms of settlement between himself and the Browns.

CHARGE RICKARD WITH DOMINATING BOXING GAME

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 22. — Charges that boxing in America is dominated by a powerful combine, consisting of Tex Rickard, John Ringling, the circus king, and the sports alliance and as long as this combination fastens its grip on the sport few championship bouts ever will be staged outside New York, were made by members of the National Boxing association, in annual session here today.

Officials of the association late in the day were trying to determine whether any of these interests had a spy at the present meeting and were said to hold the opinion that one member of the delegates present was acting as an observer for these men.

E. A. McAuley, Michigan boxing commissioner, has been leading the opposition to the appointment of William Muldoon, former New York boxing commissioner, as dictator of boxing. The Detroit delegate charged Mr. Muldoon alone stood in the way of New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts joining the National Boxing association. Mr. McAuley also charged the Rickard-Ringling faction with having sent paid agents to Shelby to ridicule and discredit the Dempsey-Gibbons fight because they didn't want to see a world's championship fight held outside of New York.

"So long as Rickard and Ringling control things in New York, we of the rest of the United States cannot hope to stage a championship bout," Mr. McAuley said. "They have a corner on real talent," he continued, "because they have a corner on the population. I don't exactly blame the fighters because they are fighting for a living and naturally go where the money is. But I think the whole taing is basically wrong."

ENLISTED NOT TO ENGAGE IN BOXING BOUTS

Washington, Jan. 22.—Protests from various individuals and organizations against participation of enlisted men in the navy boxing matches such as that recently held in Madison Square Garden, New York, have led President Coolidge, after a conference with Secretary Denby, to direct that orders be issued which will prevent a recurrence.

It was emphasized by a White House spokesman today that the president believed the boxing contests held within the army and navy of a non-professional character were a desirable part of the physical training of the men as well as a source of entertainment. It was deemed desirable, nevertheless, that a line should be drawn against large scale boxing contests for navy personnel staged ashore.

GENARO GETS DECISION OVER JOHNNY SHEPPARD

Boston, Jan. 22. — Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, earned the decision over Johnny Sheppard of Woburn, in a hammer and tongs 10 round bout here tonight. Genaro weighed 115 3-4 pounds and Sheppard 119.

Genaro outboxed Sheppard in the opening round. In the second he pushed the Woburn boy through the ropes and fell out of the ring himself. Sheppard thereafter fought toe to toe with his opponent, carried at least two rounds by a good margin, and divided the honors in several more. Sheppard tired toward the end of the contest and Genaro piled up a heavy lead in points.

CUTS WHALE IN TWO OFF BLOCK ISLAND

Off Block Island, Sunday the giant oil tanker, Frederic Ewing, crashed blindfolded into the past. Her great prow rose a little and she trembled from truck to keelson. Then there drifted astern, cloven in two by her sharp steel stem, a 60-foot whale.

The incident reported when the vessel arrived at Providence at the Mexican Petroleum Co.'s station at Kettle Point, where the 70,000 barrels of oil she loaded at Tampico is being unloaded. Somewhere at sea the bisected leviathan of the deep is oozing on the troubled water a kind of oil that was not so scorned a half century ago.

At 7.30 the Ewing was throbbing along at a good 11 knots. Chief Mate Lepp was on the bride. Capt. K. A. Jenssen was below in his quarters. All was serene above, below, and most important of all, ahead.

Without the slightest warning cry from the lookout the vessel struck. At the same instant a slender stream of water soared high over the bow. At the same instant Mr. Lepp rang three bells and a jingle for full speed astern, and the vibration that had run aft through the steel hull at the moment of impact changed to the heavy throb of triple expansion engines checking the ship's headway.

Almost before Mr. Lepp had sounded the collision call of "All hands on deck," the master was on the bridge.

"How now?" roared he. "Was it a schooner? I don't see anything. Has she sunk as quick as all this?"

"Didn't see a thing, sir," responded Mr. Lepp. "Whatever we struck, sir showed no lights, sir. I'll swear to that, sir, no lights, red, green or white, sir."

"By jiminy crickets, Mr. Lepp," said the captain, peering around in all directions, "this is funny business, I'll tell the whole cussed Atlantic ocean."

Joined by the second and third mates, who arrived on the run, the officers endured only a few seconds more of acute anxiety. From the darkness of the main deck the bos'n bellowed:

"A whale, captain. We cut it almost in halves. It is 50 or 60 feet long. It's just astern now."

This ended the suspense, but not the speculation, for as the Ewing bucked the seas again they talked it over on the bridge. At last from dim recollections of Melville's Moby Dick, these modern whalemen found an explanation of that slender stream of water that had soared over the bow.

Turning to his chief officer the captain said:

"The next time, Mr. Lepp, don't forget to sing out, 'Thar she blows!'"

ARMY-NAVY FIVE WINS ROUGH GAME FROM STAFFORD SPRINGS KACEY FIVE

In a game marked by its roughness the Army-Navy five took the measure of the Stafford Springs Kaceys for the second time this season, at Parish hall, winning by a score of 33 to 26. The game was fast but was marked by rough play making it appear more like rugby than basketball. Harry Mills, the rangy center for the locals, was a tower of strength, getting five floor baskets and four points on the free tries. For Stafford, Pollanck was the main scoring man, he being fed by the other four men on the team and his accurate eye accounted for more than half the points scored by his team.

Hap Harmon played a strong floor game displaying his usual speed on the attack and with his clever passing game. Mondi Normandin also showed up well in the attack. Joe Belair, who played with the Stafford Springs team, accounted for 10 points and played a fast game.

In the preliminary the Army-Navy Seconds slaughtered the Sons of Rest five by a 52 to 7 score. The Seconds completely bewildered the Sons with their passwork. The summary:

NEW LONDON TRAFFIC OFFICERS WARNED NOT TO CHAT WHILE ON DUTY

Funeral services for Mrs. Pattie Scott, widow of Adam Scott, were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Shiloh Baptist church, Rev. William Grimstead, pastor, officiating. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

New London's traffic officers are criticised for too much idle conversation and for not giving proper attention guiding traffic. As a result of the accusation against the officers, Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney this morning caused Sergeant Nelson Smith to deliver a reprimand to the day guardians of traffic in the squadroom at the police station. The officers were informed that in the past they have made a practice of conversing for lengthy periods with pedestrians upon matters entirely foreign to police affairs, some of the persons engaged in conversation making it a daily practice to appear in the street and hold a talkfest from five minutes to a quarter of an hour. Some of the officers, it is claimed, have also joked with pedestrians and drivers of machines even to the extent of some of the officers have been guilty of jumping to running boards of automobiles and engaging in conversation with the drivers, especially when the operators are of the female type. The officers were instructed to discontinue such practices and to heed their duty to a stricter degree.

The automobile owned and operated by William Salering of 70 Maple avenue and an unidentified automobile were in collision this morning on State street at the corner of Huntington street.

Frank and Minnie J. Young have sold to George L. and Margaret Almer a house and lot on Adelaide street.

The condition of Nelson Rousseau, of Center Groton, employed in the construction department of the S. N. E. Telephone Company, who sustained numerous head injuries and possibly a fractured skull as a result of a pole falling upon him, while at work between Center Groton and Mystic, yesterday afternoon, is vastly improved at Lawrence hospital today. The patient regained consciousness last night and today there was additional evidence of improvement.

There is no change today in State's Attorney Hadlai A. Hull, whose condition has been grave since Saturday.

Another quantity of liquor seized by the police in recent raids was destroyed today, when four barrels of grape wine that has been in storage at the police station a month, was emptied into the sewer, the destruction of the wine being ordered by Judge Victor Prince. This morning Patrolman William Graham and Station House Keeper Frank Corcoran rolled the barrels to the rear of the station house and poured the 300 gallons of wine into the run-way leading to the Thames. The liquid was the greater portion of the liquor and wine seized by raiders when a visit to the home of Arsido Basile of 32 Sixth street was made, Dec. 14th. Basile, a former barber, but who had performed little or no work since the advent of prohibition, was later in the police court for having the liquor in his possession.

The police are harboring a carrier pigeon, captured this afternoon after it had fallen, exhausted on State street, apparently having become fatigued because of its long flight and battering against a high wind. On the pigeon's left leg is a metal band bearing the letters, "H. T." and the numerals "10248". The pigeon crashed against the glass door at the entrance of the Lucy store in the Plaut building, shortly after 1 o'clock the noise of the pigeon attracting the attention of one of the clerks who found the carrier lying on the tile entrance. The police were notified and the pigeon was taken to the station house and fed and watered. Tomorrow if it has recovered its strength it will be liberated.

Daniel Westrick, a resident of New London a number of years, died suddenly at the lodging house conducted at 71 Union street by Charles Davis, last night. Medical Examiner H. H. Hoyer was notified and pronounced death due to heart disease. So far as is known the man has no surviving relatives other than a brother who resides in New York and an effort is being made to locate him.

Mr. Westrick was found in a dying condition by a member of the Davis family a short time before midnight and medical aid was immediately summoned. Before the physician arrived, however, the man had expired.

Seaside Council, K. of C., will realize a large sum from their minstrel entertainments, the last of which was given this evening before an audience that filled the Lyceum theatre. The same sort of an audience as to size was present Monday evening. The council reduced the expense to the minimum by having the rehearsals directed by a committee of its own members. Only praise was heard for the entertainers the council put on the stage and for the fidelity with which they rehearsed and presented all the acts. The two performances are expected to net the council something like a couple of thousand dollars. It required some discretion to perpetrate the local jokes and hits, but the troupe managed not to give offense.

The ice dealers in this city were hopeful that the intense cold that struck on Monday and which continued would hold for a few days, that they might get a crop of ice from local ponds, but that hope disappears this evening when the temperature rose several degrees and there was a prospect of snow, or at least warmer weather. A week of cold freezing weather is necessary to get ice of a sufficient thickness to warrant cutting. In the years long past, the dealers say when ice was not secured before the 1st of January, the chance of getting it was slight. Now, they say, they do not expect to get ice till February.

Officers of the police force who sought to get two days of respite from duty each month were denied that vacation last evening by the city council. The officers who circulated the petition among the members of the force made a mistake in that they did not half do their work and when the respite was asked for it did not come from petition, but from articles in the daily papers. Captain Pinney for some reason opposed the plan. He has not announced what his reason for opposition was, but many of the officers say they have their ideas as to that. Capt. Pinney was not consulted as to the matter until after the officers had been seeking the vacation some time and he is said to have become piqued at that, so he expressed the preference to the city manager that the men should not have the vacations they sought.

New London has a city planning board, but what its authority is no one can tell. Even the city council members are not agreed and the director of law has been asked for an opinion. He will give it, too, at the next meeting of the council. There are varied opinions among the councilors as to what the planning board can do and what it can not do, one member expressing the opinion that there is no authority to prevent an owner of land using it for purposes such as he shall elect if he keeps within reason and does not encroach upon the rights of others. It is held that aesthetic reasons are not sufficient to prevent an owner from erecting such building as shall meet his ideas of a good investment or such a building as he shall elect to construct that he may engage in legitimate business, that shall yield a return on the money invested. In other words it is held that no man can be expected to build to gratify the notions of his neighbors as to architectural beauty or as to ornate construction. The friends of the planning board hold that the city has a right to establish building lines and to enforce compliances with them, that the harmony and systematic lines of walks and residences shall be maintained. It is apparent that no structure shall be erected that shall create a fire hazard that would not exist without the new construction, but there the restriction seems to end. On many of the streets of the city building lines are unknown. Especially is this true on the oldest streets. It is expected that the planning board will be called in whenever new streets are laid out or old highways are extended, so that hereafter there will be no reason for complaint in this respect. There have been occasions where owners of land finding it difficult to dispose of their possessions at a price they would accept for them, have sought the most offensive of business enterprises to force adjoining owners to buy. It has been attempted to establish junk shops and to erect shed buildings along side of handsome residences in order to annoy the adjoining owners. That is one of the things the planning board is to put an end to. How far the city can go in its effort to bring about a change must be established by precedent in law and to find that precedent the city's law director is to devote attention.

The funeral of Frank G. Caulkins was held this afternoon at two o'clock at his home, 13 Garfield Ave., and was attended by a large gathering, including delegation of members of New London lodge of Elks. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Beveridge Lee, pastor of the Second Congregational church. The bearers were Arthur B. Calkins, William Wright, Frederick Freeman and Howard E. Beckwith. During the services Philip Edward sang Lead Kindly Light, and Crossing the Bar. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. Amy A. Johnson, 71, of Niantic died last night at the residence of her son, Charles H. Williams of Moodus, where she was making her home for the winter. Mrs. Johnson's death was sudden, for she expired following a severe coughing spell. Physicians stated that death was caused by heart trouble brought about by the severe strain upon that organ by the coughing period.

The Pioneer Hose company of Groton was called out twice last evening and in both instances the services of the firemen were required to subdue chimney fires, probably caused by the forcing of heaters due to the extreme cold weather. The fires were located in the homes of Alva Geer, Thames street, and James Trent, on Meridian street, and were extinguished by the application of chemicals.

Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church at the residence of the clergyman on West St. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are on a trip to Hartford. Upon their return they will reside on West street. Both Mr. Kenyon and his bride are employed by the Union Bank & Trust company.

On the front of the cup was the inscription, "To William Belcher, in appreciation of one-half century of service as a director in the New London City National bank, 1874-1924, from his fellow directors." On the reverse were the names of the directors, Herbert L. Crandall, L. Tracy Sheffield, S. A. Goldsmith, Arthur Keefe, Frank V. Chappell, John R. Latham, Charles A. Gallup, William M. What's the Reason?

IN thousands of homes where one or more of the family are nervous and irritable, the cause may be hidden—hard to understand. But usually, "There's a Reason."

Doctors and dietitians are very generally agreed that people who are nervous or suffer with digestive disturbances should not drink coffee or tea because these beverages contain a drug, caffeine, and their use tends to increase nervous irritability.

Many of us just drift into wrong habits of eating and drinking, though we usually know better. So if there are nervous ones in your family, suppose you make a change—serve Postum for thirty days.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage. It furnishes all the pleasure of a hot drink—cheery warmth and good flavor. Postum is refreshing, satisfying, healthful; and there's nothing in all the world quite so effective as health to overcome nervousness and make life worth while.

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one cent a cup.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY

New York, Jan. 22.—Reactionary price movements prevailed in today's active stock market which was featured by savy speculative selling of Sinclair Oil, apparently influenced by the testimony given before the senate committee investigating Teapot Dome. Sinclair broke more than three points to 22⅞ and then rallied to 23¾, the day's sales exceeding 80,000 shares, or about one-twelfth of the total volume of business.

Marked buoyancy again developed, however, in some of the high priced industrial specialties. General Electric continued its rapid advance, touching 217, a new high since 1902 and then easing to 214 where it was up three points on the day. Corn Products also touched a record top at 172 but it slipped back to 168½ off ¾ on profit-taking. National Lead hit 145¼ and then sagged to 144, up one.

Fresh buying came into the domestic oil group on the announcement of higher prices for California and Wyoming Crude Products and another series of gasoline advances in various sections of the country, but the early gains were not maintained. Producers and Refiners were pushed up to 43½ and then slid back to 41¾, up ¾ while Standard Oil of California fell from 65⅝ to 64¾, where it was up ½. Pacific and Associated Oils closed fractionally lower following the denial of merger reports by President Shoup of the Pacific company. Pan-American issues which have been adversely affected by the Mexican revolution and the senate investigation of oil leases, continued to lose ground, the A stock dropping 1⅝ and the B stock 2.

Reports of higher pig iron and scrap prices at Chicago were responsible for a temporary display of strength by the steel shares, but they sagged with the rest of the list in the late trading. U. S. Steel common went to 101⅝ but closed below par. Copper shares held relatively firm on the estimate of leader of the industry that the regulations promulgated by railroad bodies, with respect to automatic train control, will receive upwards of 225,000,000 pounds of copper in the next two years.

Brooklyn-Manhattan transit preferred established a record high at 53 in speculative expectation of an early inauguration of dividends. Strength of American Hide and Leather preferred was associated with reports that control was being sought in the open market. Several strong spots developed in the merchandising group, notably Woolworth, May Department Stores, and National Department Stores.

Revival of a demand for the Erie and Southern Railway issues, all of which closed fractionally higher, featured the railroad group. Trading in Lehigh Valley quieted down, the stock closing at a small fractional loss.

Call money again held steady at 4 per cent. Time money rates were somewhat easier, maturities up to 5 months being obtainable at 4⅝ with brokers bidding only 4½ for the 30 and 60 day dates. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchange rates made quick recovery from recent heaviness. Demand sterling advanced more than two cents to $4.22⅝ and French francs jumped more than 10 points to 4.54¼ cents. Other European rates improved in sympathy. Japanese yen broke 60 points to 46.05 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 22.—A sharp break in the price of Sinclair Oil company bonds today followed the disclosures made at the senate's investigation of the Teapot Dome lease. Under the pressure of speculative selling, the Sinclair Consolidated Oil's 7's dropped 3 points and the 6½'s almost 2 points for new low levels for the year. Sinclair Pips line issues also were under attack.

Strength of the traction issues, following publication of a satisfactory B. M. T. earning report and the circulation of rumors that favorable dividend action was impending for the stocks of this group, provided the other chief feature of trading. The advance of the local traction liens, including the Interborough and Third Avenue Railway issues, also was based on resumption of harmonious relations with the city. Other public utility bonds were in demand and recorded substantial gains. Over the counter buying was reported in considerable volume.

Low priced railroad issues again were active, with Erie bonds attracting attention. Profit-taking continued to send the St. Paul issues lower, the convertible 4½'s yielding 2 points and the 4's of 1934 falling back to the level at which the recent rise set in.

New financing in prospect was said to include a $40,000,000 Pennsylvania railroad issue, which may be offered in two installments.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Corn scored a material new advance in price today, and gave strength to wheat and oats. Predictions of another cold wave had a bullish effect, as did brisk sipping demand for corn, as well as smallness of receipts both of corn nad wheat.

Corn closed strong, ½c to 1½c net higher May 73, with wheat firm 3-4c to 7-8 up, oats at 1-4 to 3-4 gain and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 7c.

Persistent buying on the part of commission houses steadily absorbed the offerings of future deliveries of corn, and forced values upward until the close, wic was at the day's top level. Meanwhile, practically no corn was booked by Chicago handlers, on bids to the country. Some of the other leading markets were said to have made fair purchases on account of out-bidding Chicago but this fact was counter-balanced by indications that some speculators were recently identified with the bear side of the market had become aggressive bulls.

Although current reports pointed to a decreasing supply of hogs in the country, farm feeding of corn was said to be on a heavy scale, and was expected to be increased by renewal of severe cold weather, which simultaneously would further diminish receipts. On the other hand, bears contended that banks which had loaned funds to enable producers to hold grain back might soon be pressing for repayment.

Upturns in the value of the wheat were aided by attention given to fifty per cent. decrease of primary arrivals since January 1, and by opinions that cold waves had damaged winter wheat. Tariff advance gossip also was a bullish factor.

Provisions averaged higher in line with the hog market. Houses that have foreign connections were moderate buyers.

CURB MARKET

New York, Jan. 22.—Stock prices moved irregularly higher in today's curb market with special strength developing in a number of oil shares as a result of higher crude and gasoline prices.

Standard Oil of Ohio jumped 7 points to 322, Atlantic Lobos preferred advanced six points to 15 and Continental Oil, Illinois Pipe, Polar Refining and Vacuum moved up 1 to 3 1-2. Standard Oil of Nebraska spurted 9 points above yesterday's final to 256 and then broke to 246, off 3. Other Standard Oil shares held steady. Pan-American "rights" broke to 65 cents, 33 below yesterday's close.

Gold Dust Corporation, which closed 2⅜ higher at 35⅜, was the outstanding strong spot of the industrial group. Food Baking shares were again active, the A stock rising to 65¼ as against the recent low of 53½ and the B selling as high as 21⅛ or 2 points above the low. Bridgeport Machinery duplicated its previous high of 11¼ on expectation that the recent improvement in the oil industry will result in increased demand for its oil drilling machinery. Local tractions were firm.

COTTON

New York, Jan. 22.—Spot cotton steady, middling 33.25.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

ESCAPING THE WILD BOAR

"You can't cross over, Little Jack Rabbit," said the old woman who kept the toll bridge, mentioned in the last story.

"Why not?" asked the bunny boy, "I have money to pay the toll!"

"Hoity toity!" laughed the little old woman, "would you meet a wild boar?"

"No indeed," answered the little rabbit, and he was just about to ask a question, when, all of a sudden,

"What shall we do, little master?" he cried

they heard a great noise. And would you believe it, that dreadful wild boar came running over the bridge.

"Mercy me!" cried the little old woman, jumping into her little wooden house and closing and locking the door. It was only a tiny little house, like those little houses at railroad crossings in which the flagmen live.

On catching sight of the wild boar, Dapple Gray turned around and galloped away with the bunny boy clinging tightly to his mane. Pretty soon they had left the wild boar far behind—that is they thought they had. But, oh dear me! While the little pony was trotting quietly along, the rabbit boy happened to look back over his shoulder. Dear me! again, that dreadful wild beast had cut over the meadow and was making for them. He was now so near that the little pony had no chance to get away.

"What shall we do, little master," he cried.

Quick as a wink, Little Jack Rabbit turned around three times the Magic Ring which the Queen of the Fairies had given him, oh, maybe two hundred stories ago. All of a sudden, just like that, the Little Black Man stood before him. Kneeling down on one knee, he held his long sharp spear in front of him. Goodness me! the boar was coming so fast that before he could stop, he ran right onto the spear and killed himself.

"You came just in time," said the bunny boy, with a grin, although he was dreadfully frightened.

"Only yesterday my queen asked if I had seen you," answered the little Black Man.

"I will make her a visit," said the little bunny boy as the Little Black Man disappeared, and over to the wood rode Dapple Gray. By and by, after riding some distance through the trees, a tiny voice said:

"Oh where are you going my Little Sir Rabbit,

Dapple Gray needs a rest, I know,
So, wait till the fairy whistles blow."

All at once came the music of the fairy whistles, sounding much like the notes of a canary bird, only maybe sweeter, and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

MONTVILLE

Pequot Council, Knights of Columbus, Matthew Geary, grand knight, held a largely attended open meeting Tuesday evening at Hickey's hall. This flourishing council has now between 80 and 90 members. The speaker at Tuesday evening's session was National Deputy William J. Mulligan, of Thompsonville. There were addresses also by District Deputies Jerome Collins and P. F. Day, of New London, and by Council Chaplain Rev John F. X. Quinn. Refreshments and a social hour followed the formal meeting.

You Can Quickly Limber Up Sore, Stiff, Swollen Joints

Even Chronic Rheumatic Swellings in Knee, Elbow, Shoulder or Finger Joints Yield to the Mighty Powerful Influence of JOINT-EASE.

It's a low price remedy, to be sure, but that doesn't stop it from taking the kinks, lameness or torture out of your troubled joints.

Joint-Ease is the name, so called because it is compounded solely for the purpose of relieving all joint ailments.

Just rub it on the tromented, lame joints and in just a few seconds it will penetrate to the bone and blessed comfort comes quickly.

It absorbs instantly and is so clean and stainless that you can rub it on often and get thereby, results much more quickly, when the joint is inflamed and the agony intense.

Being such a powerful counter irritant, it cannot help bringing speedy and helpful results in congestion, sore throat, chest colds, lumbago and neuralgia much quicker than almost any remedy you can buy.

But you must remember that it is for joint afflictions that it is mostly dispensed and its helpfulness will astonish you after all ordinary liniments have failed.

James Agras of Westerly was in Providence Tuesday afternoon.

L. Clark of New Haven was a business visitor in Westerly Tuesday afternoon, before leaving for Providence.

Wilbur G. Cheever and Leon H. York, of Westerly, were among the Shriners of Palestine at Rhodes Tuesday evening.

The alarm bell of Westerly Fire department was sounded Tuesday night at 5.30 from Box 39, located at Granite and John streets, for a bad chimney fire at 40 John street. The trucks of the R. I. No. 1, Alert Pump and Ladder Co., and the Ahren Fox pump of the Cyclones were summoned to the large three family house on the left side of the street occupied by the families of Pasquale DePlacidio, Thos. Sardo and Angelo A. Altamano.

The fire had evidently started from a stove on the second floor which ignited the soot which nearly choked up the chimney sending out sparks at a dangerous rate in the high wind. The firemen took hand extinguishers to the third floor where they were enabled to dump the contents into the burning chimney so that when six or seven were emptied the fire was under control. Little damage resulted and the recall sounded soon after 6.30.

"Civilian Patriots of the American Revolution" illustrated by 60 colored slides are to be shown Monday evening in the Masonic hall, High street, as the Westerly Masonic club's January entertainment. The pictures are presented through the courtesy of the Bureau of Social and Educational service of grand lodge of New York, A. F. and A. M. nad will be followed by refreshments and cigars.

Paul Jennings, superintendent of the Westerly Textile Co., on Main St., for twelve years, has tendered his resignation, which becomes effective next Saturday night.

PLAINFIELD

The cold, cutting wind of Monday night did not detain the Boy Scouts from attending their meeting in the furnace room of the Congregational Church. There was a good attendance to elect officers; Secretary, Lewis Gallup, assistant secretary, Homer Starkweather, treasurer, Earl Butler. Richard J. Hetherston, with a good war record, is the Scoutmaster and Alfred Royle is assistant scoutmaster. The pastor of the church was present as a spectator, but gave a timely warning by citing instances of unfortunate boys who have in the last few days ventured on thin ice. The feature of the evening was the address given by Principal Cecil L. Butler, who gave a most interesting account of an experience of his boyhood when he spent a winter assisting the cook in one of the large logging camps in the Maine woods. The boys listened cosely to the vivid portrayal of the unique life in the deep snow of the dense woods.

Holmes was voted into the troop as a new member as soon as he is able to pass his tenderfoot test. He is to be perfected in his first degree by Scouts Wilson and Starkweather. A committe was chosen to plan for a winter hike.

SEEKS TO SECURE INTEREST ON FUNDS IN TRUSTEE'S HANDS

Judge Allyn L. Brown sat in the superior court here Tuesday afternoon for hearing on motion for judgment after committee finding made by the late Judge John M. Thayer in the New London suits Lee, individually and as trustee, vs. Benjamin H. Lee, excr, et al, appeal from probate, and Wight, individually and as administrator, vs. Lee, trustee, appeal from probate.

The point argued at the hearing Tuesday was whether Dr. Lee was chargeable with interest on $2,675 from Feb. 6, 1918, to Oct., 1923, amounting to about $1,200, at 6 per cent. The suit involves the estate of Denison Hempstead under whose will Dr. Lee became a trustee for the late Frances Ranouf Coit.

Judge Thayer's finding as a committee was that Dr. Lee owed the estate $2,975 and at a hearing before Judge Newell Jennings, judgment for the amount was entered but was opened when it was disclosed that the attorneys for Frederick Wight, administrator of the Coit estate, claimed interest on the sum named by Referee Thayer.

Dr. Lee was the first witness called on Tuesday by Attorneys C. Hadlai Hull and Frank L. McGuire, his counsel. He testified to a total of $7,681.50 estate money that he had paid to Hull, McGuire & Hull, out of which there had been payments of $4,795, leaving a balance of $2,886.50 in their hands. Of this last named amount, the sum of $1,500 was for three legacies. Dr. Lee also told of paying to the law firm on Oct. 18, 1922, the sum of $1,875.67, which he said was to make up the amount that Referee Thayer had found he owed the estate.

After Dr. Lee's testimony closed, the attorneys for Mr. Wight, John C. Geary and Arthur T. Keefe, called Attorney Hull to the stand but he was at once excused when he stated that he had no personal knowledge of the bank accounts of his firm at the time it held the Lee money in 1918, as he was in the army during that time.

Attorney McGuire was then called on to testify by Attorney Keefe. The witness testified to $1,219.98 on Apr. 9, 1918 and $6,461.52 on Apr. 10 paid over to the firm of Hull, McGuire & Hull by Dr. Lee. The attorney witness explained the firm's plan of keeping clients' money in a bank account, and said that $1,886.50 of the Lee money has been in the account ever since, without interest.

Aborn Smith, head bookkeeper at the Union Bank and Trust Co., and M. M. Baker, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, in which the law firm's account had been kept, both testified that the account had not fallen below $1,386.50 at any time between the dates involved.

Attorneys Hull and Keefe argued the claims after which Judge Brown took the papers and reserved decision. It was the contention of Attorney Keefe that the trustee was obligated to make the fund productive while it was in his hands, but this view was opposed by Attorney Hull.

MRS. LAURA M. ALLIS OBSERVED 90TH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Laura M. Allis observed her 90th birthday and received congratulations Sunday from her many friends, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Audubon L. Hardy, 15 Lincoln avenue, Amherst. Mrs. Allis was born in Brookfield, Vt., January 20, 1834 and was married in 1854 to Andrew S. Allis, and lived on the ancestral farm of her husband until his death.

Her home is now with her son, Egbert H. Allis of Randolph, Vt., but she spends a part of each year with her daughter, Mrs. Hardy and her other son, Wallace S. Allis of Norwich, Ct. Her grandchildren are Mrs. Dorothy Symmes of Toronto, Ont., Robert A. Hardy of Philadelphia, Paul W. Hardy, Donald B. Hardy of New York and Wilton A. Hardy of Boston, also a great grandson, Robert A. Hardy, Jr.

Mrs. Allis has remarkably good health, is alert and keen, quick at repartee, quite constant in attendance at church and Sunday school, expert in making rugs and patch work quilts, knits mittens, socks and sweaters for her many friends, writes many letters, is a great reader, keeps posted on local and national affairs. She is a staunch republican and a great admirer of President Coolidge and proud he is a native of her native state.

Beginning with President Polk she can remember all the presidents of the United States. Asked what she thought the great need of the world is today, she instantly replied, "More religion and the Golden Rule." She is willing to grant that the world is growing better, but wishes people had more regard for the observance of Sunday, and in matters which pertain to religion and the church. On the whole she allows that the dress of women is more sensible than that of some periods she can recall, but she deprecates the extreme fashions of the present day and wishes certain women would wear more over their shoulders and arms and that their skirts might be a little longer.

She is forced to admit that the children are better taught in school than when she was a teacher, and they have many more advantages than 75 years ago, but feels the children are not as considerate, obedient and responsible as those of three-fourths of a century ago.

TRAPPERS MAKE WAR ON PREDATORY ANIMALS

The extermination of certain forms of predatory animals and birds is not desired in Connecticut or in any other state, but every thinking person does want the number of predatory animals controlled, says the state board of fisheries and game. The depredations of the wolf, the fox, and weasel and many others may greatly reduce the numbers of weaker animals, but if these miscreants were completely exterminated an irritant would be removed that really keeps alert and strong the milder animals. A certain number of enemies of wild creatures keep the gentler ones of them careful and elusive and develops their senses in the highest degree. Certain forms of wild life have always served as food for certain other forms, but man has assumed the right to judge the value of subordinate forms of lifes. When the wolf or fox goes after the deer or relishes the beautiful grouse, or the weasel perfers a song bird and the horned owl a quail, man steps in and decides that the wolf, the fox and the weasel uses bad judgment, and must pay a penalty. So a sensible control of predacious wild life must be exercised. State Boards of Fisheries and Game and Sportsmens' Clubs have cooperated heartily with the federal department of agriculture in its efforts to control predatory animals. They are all studying the question carefully, and have new suggestions to offer each year.

Many of the pests, that annoy the farmers in gardens and vineyards and are serious checks on game increase, may be taken by trapping and the skins sold for profit. When the kill of the fox and weasel and mink is heaviest, the time is ripe for discriminate trapping. It is when the snow is deep or, in early spring, when the snow is crusted that most predatory animals get in their evil work. And it is at this time that the pelts are in fine condition.

January and February are the best months for farmer or gardener who has been annoyed by the invasion of predatory animals to bring in the fur harvest. Trapping too early in the autumn brings in unprime pelts and the late spring trapping interferes with the breeding females. Poison affects the skin of the animal. Smoking animals out of dens often suffocates them, and destroying the dens leaves no place for rearing the young, so trapping is the most profitable way of removing the surplus number of these animals which have few good qualities. The weasel and mink are good mousers. Muskrat are not wholly objectionable. The fox has some good points, but it is often necessary to protect bird life and crops from them, and trapping justifies itself. The losses, in the eastern states from pests in orchards, vineyards and truck farms, are reported to be severe. The fox, skunk, mink, weasel, wild cat, mole and muskat and the rabbit and even the house-cat have their bad traits, and must be watched. The rat, the mouse and the pocket gopher are out-and-out pests, and have, so far as is known, no reason for living. Development of the poultry industry has brought a realization of the seriousness of damage wrought by rats as destroyers of eggs and young chickens. Rat proof yards and houses for poultry are a necessity, but in the end the best means of ridding the world of this rodent, is poison.

During the spring and summer the losses of game birds and the destruction of ground-nesting birds, their nests and young, are the most alarming check on game increases. Not only the four-footed creatures are predacious. Some hawks and some owls and the crow need as much careful watching as any mink or weasel ever dared demand. In some communities all hawks are considered bad hawks; but this is wrong. Cooper's hawk, the goshawk and the sharp-spinned hawk should be killed whenever they are met. The red-tailed red shouldered, rough-legged and broad winged hawks destroy more rodents and field vermin than man can well comprehend until he examines the contents of the hawks' stomach. If a rule were to be made about hawks and owls, it would be, "Don't shoot until you are sure your bird is a criminal."

More wise and valuable owls are killed each year than injurious ones. The great-horned owl and the rare Arctic, or snowy owl are better off stuffed and in the museum, but every other owl is worth his weight in gold to the farmer or the gardener. Owls' pellets have been examined and found to contain 200, 300 and 400 mice which shows something of the value of these birds. The crow is one of the greatest destroyers of bird life. The rapid disappearance of the prairie chicken in the western states is directly attributable to the crow which from morning until night preys upon the eggs and young birds. The crow will eat any meat and fish, living or dead. The young crow in its nest will consume, daily, food that equal three or four times his weight. It is easy to see that the parent crows must range far and near in all sorts of places for food to satisfy these nestlings and respect no property.

There is a growing appreciation of the practical value of campaigns against animal and bird pests. Some states have made appropriations to carry on the work scientifically. Many farmers and stockmen have taken an active part in the actual work. In some sections of the West where the work has been carried on a sufficient length of time it is noticed that the increase in quail, grouse and deer is directly proportionate to the reduction of predatory animals and vermin.

COMRADE STOCKING IS REACHING 94TH BIRTHDAY

Many friends of Sabura S. Stocking, well known among G. A. R. people, who makes his home with Mrs. Margaret T. Ritchie in the Marguerite building, will be pleased to learn that he is in his usual health and will celebrate his 94th birthday on Thursday of this week. Mr. Stocking has trouble in getting about, his sight being slightly impaired and his lower limbs giving him trouble, but the old soldier still likes to meet and talk with old friends and feels that life is well worth living.

Mr. Stocking was born in Manchester, Conn., on January 24, 1830 and comes from old colonial ancestry, which he is proud to claim. When he was two years of age his parents moved to Norwich and later he learned the trade of a cabinet maker, under the direction of George W. Smith, who was in business on Elm street.

In 1852 Mr. Stocking moved to Boston, where he joined the Ninth Massachusetts Militia company, having been in the Norwich Light Infantry, commanded by Captain Converse, while a resident of this city. In the Civil war his regiment became the 15th Massachusetts Volunteers and went to the front. Mr. Stocking was promoted to commissary sergeant and brigade commissary, and part of the time was in charge of a government bakery in Wasnington on account of his business ability. He was in the war three years.

After the war he entered the furniture business in New York and remained there until 1902, when he again returned to Norwich. He was in the furniture business for 54 years.

In 1892 he joined Sedgwick Post, No. 1, G. A. R., of Norwich and for 10 years was quartermaster and had charge of the Buckingham Memorial, keeping it in excellent condition. Mr. Stocking is one of the oldest Free Masons in the state and was raised in Wilder lodge in Leominster in 1864.

Like many other men while young, Mr. Stocking belonged to the volunteer fire company, being a member of the old Hudson company, No. 1, of Norwich in 1849, later joining the old Hancock fire company of Charlestown, Mass. He was also a musician and played in the first band P. S. Gilmore paraded in Boston.

In 1854 he was united in marriage with Miss M. Louis Carter by Rev Dr. Bond. His wife was of Colonial ancestry and passed away several years ago.

Many people who know Mr. Stocking are planning to send him greetings or call on him personally on Thursday, for not a year passes as he nears the 100th milestone in life but his friends make it a point to cheer him on his birthday.

BATTERY B ELECTION AFTER SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Battery B, 192d F. A., C. N. G., held its regular weekly drill Monday evening at the state armory on McKinley avenue after which the annual election of officers for the ensuing year was held.

The men who have held the different positions in the past year, chiefly pertaining to the social and financial life of the Battery, have been so satisfactory that practically all were re-elected for the coming year.

The officers and their respective positions are: First Lieutenant, Howard S. Ives, chairman of the entertainment committee; Sergeant Bonnin and Corporal Breault, members of entertainment committee; Corporal Coleman, chairman of athletic committee; Private John J. Murphy, secretary of Battery; Private John Fitzgerald, re-elected treasurer.

Private Fitzgerald was given a rising vote of thanks for the fine work he had done during the past year, aiding materially in bringing the battery ahead financially.

After the meeting a pleasant surprise awaited the men in the form of hot coffee and sandwiches, supplied through the generosity of Captain William R. Denison. The refreshments were greatly appreciated by the men, who thanked Captain Denison for the treat.

The battery is looking forward to a year just as successful as the past ones have been, and interest in the affairs of the outfit is running high at present. All men receiving their discharges are promptly re-enlisting and there is yet room for more recruits. Anyone desiring information regarding enlistment may obtain it at the armory on any Monday evening.

HUGHES DEFENDS POLICY OF THE U. S. TOWARD MEXICO

At Meeting of the Council of Foreign Relations in New York the Secretary of State Described the Attitude of the Coolidge Administration Toward Mexican Rebellion as the Greatest Contribution Within Our Power to the Cause of the World Peace—Mr. Hughes Also Outlined the Purposes of the Liquor Treaty With Great Britain.

New York, Jan. 23.—The policy of the Coolidge administration in dealing with the Mexican revolutionary movement was described by Secretary Hughes in an address here tonight as "the greatest contribution directly within our power, and in accord with our established traditions and manifest interest, to the cause of world peace."

"This hemisphere should be the exemplar of peace," Mr. Hughes said, "and we look with confidence to the creation of a unity of sentiment of the American republics against resort to the brutal arbitrament of force in political controversies. To this end the United States gladly gives its cooperation."

Speaking under the title "Recent Questions and Negotiations" before a meeting of the Council on Foreign Relations, Mr. Hughes also outlined the purposes of the liquor treaty with Great Britain, signed today in Washington, and explained why the administration considered it necessary to give up extra-territorial rights in negotiating the new treaty with Turkey.

The secretary's discussion of Mexico was prefaced by a recital of the steps that led up to the signing of the two claims conventions by which the Obregon government was accorded diplomatic recognition.

"After this happy result had been achieved," he continued, "and we were looking forward to a period of quiet and to opportunities of advantage to both peoples, suddenly there was an attempt to overthrow the established government of Mexico by violence. It is plain that the purpose of those engaged in this enterprise of arms is simply to determine by forcible measures the succession to President Obregon.

"It is not a revolution instinct with the aspirations of an oppressed people; it is a matter of personal politics. It is an effort to seize the presidency; it means a subversion of all constitutional and orderly procedure. The contestants, seeking to overthrow the established government, have taken possession of certain portions of the Mexican territory and either are claiming tribute from peaceful and legitimate American commerce or are attempting to obstruct and destroy it."

Mr. Hughes then touched on the request of the Mexican government to purchase arms and ammuition from the United States. To refuse, he said, would have been to turn a cold shoulder to the government recently restored to friendly relations and "would in fact have given powerful encouragement to those who were attempting to seize the reins of government by force." By that course, he said, the Washington government would have "incurred a grave responsibility for consequent disturbances," while granting the request for arms involved "no question of intervention, no invasion of the sovereignty of Mexico."

He argued that the sale involved no "departure from the principle involved in President Harding's policy as to the sale of arms," which he said in no way precluded furnishing arms "to aid in the putting down of insurrectionary attacks upon public order in a neighboring state whose peaceful development is especially important to us."

Referring to the question of the constitutionality of the new liquor treaty with Great Britain, the secretary said the administration had no intention to violate constitutional provisions.

"The purpose is to facilitate their enforcement," he said. "I know there are some who have expressed doubt whether such an international agreement can be made under our Constitution. This doubt I do not entertain.

In negotiating the treaty with Turkey, he continued, the United States was faced with the necessity of giving up the long standing "capitulations" or else having no treaty at all and no protection for American interests in that country.

"In these circumstances," he said, "the only practicable course was to negotiate a treaty as with a fully sovereign state. If such a treaty fails short of expectations, especially in that it acquiesces in the abrogation of the capitulations, it should not be forgotten that the only way to maintain the capitulations was to fight for them.

"At no stage in the negotiations was the American position determined by the so-called Chester concession. This had been granted before negotiations of our treaty with Turkey had been begun. This government took no part in securing it; this government made no barter of any of its rights for this or any other concession."

Mr. Hughes also touched briefly upon the status of negotiations respecting mandated territories, the unofficial American financial commission to Persia and the recognition of the Egyptian government. With relation to Greece, he said the situation had now "materially changed" there and that it was hoped the elections held in December would result in establishment of "a government which will enable this government to extend formal recognition."

RADICAL DISRUPT MINE WORKERS' CONVENTION

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 23—(By the A. P.)—Cries of "let's go home" and "we're done" by radicals tonight ended the second day's session of the United Mine Workers convention in confusion. Radical delegates had mustered only 421 votes, for their proposal to reinstate the deposed district officials of Nova Scotia. The vote was on their demand for a roll-call, for which a thirty per cent vote is necessary, and it failed by about 150 votes.

President John L. Lewis, had just concluded a defense of his action in dissolving the Nova Scotia charter, which had been commended in a report of the resolutions committee, read by Percy Tetlow, international representative at Charleston, W. Va., and the vote was on a motion to concur in the committee's report. A howl of derision arose from administration supporters, at the small showing of hands held up by teh radicals in demanding a counting.

While President Lewis passed the stage, still breathing hard from the exertion of his strenuous attack on the former Nova Scotia officials of district No. 26, vice president Philip Murray took the chair. He pounded for order without effect for ten minutes, while the radicals continued their threats of a walkout, and cries of "we'll remember you, Philip". After the announcement of the count of only 421 votes for a roll call, he recognized Secretary William Green for announcements, and then yelled that the convention was adjourned.

REPORTS OF STATUS OF BRITISH RAILWAY STRIKE

London, Jan. 23—(By the A. P.)—The expected meeting between representatives of the executive committee of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, and the railway managers at which it was hoped discussions would be renewed with a view to ending the railway strike, did not materialize today.

The railway managers met this afternoon to consider the offer of the associated society for a parley, but their decision with regard to a discussion was deferred. J. Bromley, secretary of the society, told the newspaper men that he had not heard from the managers. He added that the strike of the men of the society was becoming increasingly effective.

It is considered probable that the railway managers will meet again tomorrow to discuss the situation. The mediating section of the trades union of congress met today and went over the strike situation, but adjourned without having reached any definite decision. The new labor government is reported to be pressing for an early solution of the trouble.

Continued improvement was shown today in the movement of trains. The strike, however, is having an increasingly adverse effect on the Scottish and Welsh industries. The iron, steel and tin works and the foundaries are running short of supplies. In South Wales 80,000 coal miners have been rendered idle in consequence of the strike and some of the blas furnaces have consequently been damped

In London, the coal stocks are dwindling alarmingly and householders are threatened with a serious shortage if the strike lasts into next week.

Neither miners nor employers expect an immediate agreement to come out of the sub-committee deliberations. Its instructions are to find a common basis on which negotiations can be pursued without conflict, and then report to the joint general wage committee of U. M. SEVEN MEN HELD FOR THE THEFT OF LIQUOR

Stockbridge, Mass., Jan. 23—Seven men were held tonight in various parts of the country in connection with a theft of liquor last night from the summer home here of Charles Mayer, according to reports received by state police. A band of 12 men with a fast car and three trucks took part in the raid. Two employees on the Mayer estate were forced at gun point to lead the way to a strong vault to the cellar installed before the Volstead act became law and containing liquors the value of which was said to be $100,000. A guard was left until daybreak to watch the two employes while the three laden trucks had a long start with the booty. When the guards left in the fast car after cutting the telephone wires. The value of the liquor taken was said to be $40,000

Teapot Dome Scandal Aired in the Senate

Washington, Jan. 23.—Teapot Dome discussion was brought out of committee room today to the floor of the Senate where charges even more sensational than those made by witnesses at the inquiry were lodged by the senators.

Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, who has had the lead in developing the inquiry, concluded the more than three hours' debate with formal notice that he would ask the comittee to recommend a resolution advising the president to present proceedings for the annulment of the Wyoming Naval oil reserve lease to the Sinclair interests by former Secretary Fall.

Moreover, the senator said he would ask the committee to include in the resolution a provision for the employment of a special counsel to prosecute the case independent of the department of justice by reason of the widespread "suspicion throughout the country against Attorney General Daugherty."

Senator Walsh said he was not prepared to say whether this suspicion was a fault or a misfortune of the atorney general. He added, however, that he felt certain Mr. Daugherty would be glad to have his department relieved of the matter in view of his long friendship for Fall and their service together in the cabinet.

Senate discussion came upon a demand by Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, for immediate action on his resolution proposing cancellation of the teapot dome lease. A vote on his motion to discharge the resolution went over, however, on a point of order by Chairman Lenroot, of the inquiry committee.

Senator Caraway renewed his charge of corruption against Fall and reiterated that Edward B. McLean, Washington newspaper publisher, knew he was not "telling the truth" when he advised the committee that he had loaned Fall $100,000, the sum the ex-interior secretary said he had taken from Washington to Texas to use in enlarging his New Mexico holdings.

Turning his broadside on G. D. Wahlberg, secretary to Harry F. Sinclair, Senator Caraway declared that he had made good the expectation which Archie Roosevelt son of the former president, said Wahlberg had expressed to him that "they would ask him to lie" about certain matters.

As the debate proceeded there were suggestions from Senators King of Utah and McKellar of Tennessee, democrats, that Secretary Denby should be asked to resign because he signed the lease. Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, renewed his notice that there would not be a "whitewash" in the Teapot Dome matter and declared that he was ready to vote now on the Caraway resolution.

Senator Lenroot opposed the resolution on the ground that it would halt the inquiry, but Senator Walsh disagreed with him. The Montana senator and Senator King agreed with Senator Lenroot, however, that many serious questions were involved in cancellation. Senator Walsh said the question of the validity of the lease was a judicial one and that he did not believe congress could determine it.

As the debate proceeded republican members of the investigating committee made it known privately that when Mr. Fall appears before them Friday that they will insist that he disclose fully the source of the $100 000 fund he took from Washington after his resignation from the cabinet. Moreover, they said they would follow the subject to its conclusion by calling as witnesses those from whom Fall testifies he obtained the money.

These members said the committee would not be content until it had fully substantiated all members regarding this fund by corroborating evidence, including an examination of the checks and securities used by Fall in raising the money as well as the notes or othe securities given by him for the loan.

Coolidge Urges Aid For Agriculturists

Washington, Jan. 23.—Moved by the increasing acuteness of the economic situation in the northwest, President Coolidge today sent to congress a special message outlining steps for relief and quickened efforts of the federal government to prevent further bank failures in that section.

The chief executive in his message presented five methods for "organized cooperation on the part of the federal government and the local institutions of that territory."

Congress, he declared, should extend financial assistance through a federal agency to promote diversification in farming by wheat growers and lengthen from March 31 to Dec. 31, 1924, the period during which the war finance corporation may take loans. The diversification proposal embodied in the Norbeck Burtness bills is under study by senate and house agriculture committees and the president's message is expected by administration leaders to give it impetus.

The executive branches of the government working in cooperation with private interests, Mr. Coolidge asserted, would seek to bring about the refunding of the pressing past-due indebtedness of the farmers, to restore the impaired capital of banks and confidence in those banks and to promote creation by private capital of new financing agencies such as have been organized by the livestock interests, to work in cooperation with the war finance corporation.

The work of restoring the impaired capital of banks already has been started with the sending of a federal mission headed by Comptroller Dawes to the northwest. The president conferred on the problem today with W. R. Ronald, publisher of the Mitchell, South Dakota, Tribune, and was told the situation calls only for assistance through the usual banking channels and the finance corporation.

The finance corporation has been directed to extend all aid legally can give and Mr. Coolidge has determined to call bankers in Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul, to Washington for conferences in event they hesitate to accord the cooperation asked by the Dawes mission.

The president told congress the welfare of large business concerns, railroads, mercantile establishments and agriculture supply houses was immediately connected with the welfare of the farmer and announced that he had directed Secretaries Hoover and Wallace and managing Director Meyer of the war finance corporation to confer with representatives of these interests to bring about refunding of farmers' indebtedness. Indications were given at the commerce and agricultural departments and the finance corporation that such conferences shortly would be held.

Reading of the president's message in the senate and house brought no immediate reaction except a declaration from Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, that he had pointed out six months ago the coming of such a situation as now existed. Administration leaders, however, expressed the view that the message would hasten action on agricultural legislation.

PROBING EXPORTATION OF CAPITAL FROM GERMANY

Paris, Jan. 23—(By the A. P.)—The second committee of experts investigating Germany's financial and economic situation today had before it Karl Bergmann, former under secretary of the Germany treasury who answered to the questions with regard to the exportation of capital from Germany.

This committee which is headed by Reginald McKenna former chancellor of the British exchequer at the end of the day's session announced in an official communique that it purposed to go to Berlin shortly to continue its investigations in the German capital. The communication said:

"The committee on evasion of capital has made a close preliminary survey of the problems submitted for its examination, and interviewed Doctor Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank and Karl Bergmann, on the general lines on which a practical investigation can be pursued in Germany. It will meet again in Berlin on Thursday, January 31.

"Meantime it will be necessary for the secretariat of the committee, at work in Paris, to prepare a considerable amount of statistical information which the committee feels will be necessary for further pursuit of its labors."

The first committee headed by Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes, was engaged today in a continuation of consideration of plans for the formation of a gold bank in Germany.

LIQUOR TREATY WITH GREAT BRITAIN SIGNED

Washington, Jan. 23.—The double-barrelled liquor treaty with Great Britain was signed today by Secretary Hughes and Ambassador Geddes, and is to become effective when ratifications are exchanged. By tacit agreement, however, the two governments are expected to give the pact some measure of immediate application in dealing with rum-smuggling and ship-liquor matters which may arise before ratification is completed.

Under the treaty suspected liquor smuggling craft under the British flag would be liable to search and seizure if intercepted anywhere within an hour's sailing distance off shore, the speed of the suspected vessel being the measure of distance in her case. In return for this aid in prohibition enforcement, the United States would grant to British ships the right to carry sealed stores of ship liquors within American waters anywhere on the same terms that such liquors now pass through the Panama canal. It is to run for one year at the end of which period it can be terminated on three months' notice.

Anderson, state superintendent of the anti-saloon league, gave written instructions for the transfer of the organization's books of financial transactions which form the basis of the forgery charge against him, a jury before supreme court justice Tompkins' was told today.

The testimony was offered by William M. Potter, former assistant treasurer and head bookkeeper of the league who identified a note instructing him to make the transfer as having been signed by the league head in March 1921. Potter further testified that Anderson had "paid to himself" $3,875 in checks which he had ordered drawn against the salary account of O. Bertsall Phillips former fund solicitor for the league, who had accused Anderson of having compelled him to "split" his colection commissions in excess of $10,000 annually.

Potter's sensational testimony from which he could not be shaken throughout a severe grilling by former Governor Whitman, chief of Anderson's counsel, closed the state's case.

Whitman then made the customary motions that the jury be instructed to return a verdict of not guilty and that the forgery indictment be quoad. Both were denied. Justice Tompkins holding that he considered the prosecutions to have made out a case against the defendant.

The defense will begin presentation of its case tomorrow morning.

Potter's testimony under direct examination of Assistant District Attorney Pecora, in charge of the prosecution was largely in coroboration of statements made on the stand yesterday by Phillips. And as he had done in the case of Phillips, Whitman made a vigorous attempt to tear down the credibility of Potter's statements.

"Is it not true," the former governor shouted at the witness, "that you are now, in the pay of the liquor interests and have been ever since you came back from Texas?"

"It is not," Potter replied.

Potter testified that he had remonstrated with Anderson at the time he directed him to make out two checks totalling $3 875 against Phillips' salary in 1920, saying he suggested that the checks be drawn in the collector's name and indorsed over to Anderson by him. Anderson refused, he said, and he complied. Phillips previously had testified that these checks represented the 1920 commission "split" which Anderson had "paid to himself."

Phillips, he said, complained to him about the office notice he prepared for the government's information on the collector's taxable income for 1920. The slip total was $18,889.

"Phillips told me that he had received only $14,400 from the league that year," Potter testified. "So I took the matter up with Anderson. I told him that from his manner, Phillips had given me the impression that he had been forced to 'split' his commissions with some one. Anderson nodded, said nothing for a moment, and then announced he would let me know about it later."

Later that same day, Potter testified, Anderson sent him a signed order directing that he transfer on the league books $4,400 from Phillips' salary account to the collector's expense account. He followed these instructions, he said.

Whitman opened his cross examination by asking Potter what he had done since he had been discharged by the league in December, 1922. He went to Texas, he said, where he married his second wife, a former employe of the Anti-Saloon league. In McAllen, he said, they opened a bookstore. A reporter of the New York Evening Mail called on him in Texas, he continued, and interviewed him concerning his connection with the league.

"Did you not receive another visitor, who offered to make it worth your while to return to New York and testify against Anderson?" Whitman asked.

Potter denied this explaining that he decided to suffer a $5,000 business loss to return to appear against Anderson because the league head was making "wild statements" about him. He refused to tell Whitman in the manner in which he sustained himself and his wife since his return here, but explained under direct examination that fortunate investments, the sale of the McAllen business, and the sale of property in Suffern, N. Y., and Asbury Park, N. J., had provided a livelihood.

After Potter had concluded his testimony, Whiteman conceded that $3,875 checks which Phillips had alleged Anderson had "paid to himself" had been deposited to the league head's account in a local bank.

Asked if he desired to change his testimony of yesterday, Phillips, who is now a fund solicitor for the Young Men's Christian Association, replied with an explosive "No" Still under cross-examination, he denied that he knew it was "criminal" to "split" his commissions with Anderson.

"I knew it was wrong," he explained, "but I had to do it to hold my job."

He denied also that he had intended to defraud the government in the payment of income taxes on his 1920 earnings, declaring that he had made return on $14,400, all that he had been paid by the Anti-Saloon league.

Under redirect examination, he explained his connection with men later found to have been engaged in purchasing allied munition secrets from a man in the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. Later he identified seven checks bearing with his name on their backs, the endorsement of Anderson. He declared these represented commission payments by him to Anderson during 1920, and said they were in addition to the checks totalling $3785 which he said Anderson "paid to himself."

SUIT AGAINST FORMER U. S. MARSHAL W. R. PALMER

Hartford, Jan. 23—The Dauntless Shipbuilding Company of Essex has brought suit in superior court at Middletown to compel forma. United States Marshal William R. Palmer of Oxford, to pay a bill of approximately $2,000 for the conditioning of his fifty foot yawl Hilda to participate in the New London to Bermuda race last June.

Palmer's boat did not win; in fact it was the eleventh to cross the finish line off Hamilton, with Palmer at the helm. It took five days to make the trip, and when well out to sea, the water tank sprang a leak, causing considerable inconvenience, and other difficulties were encountered.

No blame was attached to the shipbuilding company for the trouble with the tank, but, after making a small initial payment, Palmer balked at the price, and refused to pay the balance, which was in the neighborhood of $2,000. Officers of the shipbuilding company maintain that it was through no fault of the work done in reconditioning the vessel that it failed to win the race or make a better showing.

GUARDSMAN KILLED WHILE PRACTICING FOR TRACK MEET

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 23.—Lieutenant Arthur D. Smith, of Company B, 182nd Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, was killed tonight when he was accidentally struck by a 12-pound shot thrown by William Laughlin, a private in Company B. As he turned a raised corner, the shot struck him in the pit of the stomach. He died on the way to a hospital.

The police, who investigated, said that Private Laughlin and a friend had been amusing themselves by throwing the 12-pound weight against the raised corner and that the shot just thrown by Laughlin, struck Smith as he rounded the curve. They pronounced the case an accident and said that no action would be taken.

The evidence of an accident which happened, December 28, last in Chaplin was being pieced together Wednesday, by State Policeman Heinold, of the Stafford Springs barracks. On the date mentioned a Ford touring car driven by Miss Blanche O. Whitman of Chaplin, was damaged to the extent of $100 when struck by a Cadillac sedan owned and driven by Robert E. Boys, superintendent of cotton mills at Holyoke, Mass. One fender on the larger machine was slightly bent. At the time of the accident Mr. Boys alleged that he was in a hurry and drove on. A warrant was later made out and last Friday Mr. Boys was before Justice of the Peace Russ of Chaplin, to answer to a charge of reckless driving. He pleaded not guilty. Attorney Harvey of this city acted as prosecutor and Mr. Boys was fined $25 and costs. An appeal was taken to the May term of superior court and bonds were furnished. The accident happened at a sharp curve just south of Sherman's station.

In order to do away with the dangerous custom of jaywalking, the block pavement on Main street was sectioned off some time ago and cross walks were painted in convenient places for the safety of pedestrians. The idea was a good one and was adopted by all the sensible residents of the community. For the first year the work of repainting the white lines which mark off the safety zones was an arduous one. Painters had to get down on their knees and use a handbrush. Not long ago a new painting machine was purchased by the city. This device is pushed along like a baby carriage and paints automatically, but apparently it has not been used enough. The white lines are fading fast and several automobile drivers have been warned that they were parked on the "crosswalk". The last of these cases to be heard of was Wednesday afternoon when a State Policeman drove up Main street in his Ford and finding a parking space backed up to the curb. Some one stepped up to his machine and informed him that he was on the cross-walk. The officer got out and looked around him. He looked around for signs and he looked closely for white lines and finding neither his simple expression was "What the ——!" Bystanders laughed heartily and no one blamed them.

WINDHAM-TOLLAND DEMOCRAT MEET TO PLAN FOR CAMPAIGN

Willimantic, Jan. 23—A rousing meeting of the democrats of Tolland and Windham counties was held on Wednesday afternoon in the Hotel Hooker, this city opened by a delicious chicken dinner served at one o'clock. Plans were suggested by the democratic state central committee to organize members of the party in every town in the state for the state and national elections next fall. Edward M. Yeomans of Andover, chairman of the democratic state central committee, issued the call for the meeting. The notice, which was attested by Alexander S. Lynch, secretary of the committee, was for a meeting of the chairman and all of the town committees and democratic registrars to talk over plans for the campaign. Chairman Yeomans said that the purpose of the gathering was for "organization". He said that success always crowned the work of any individual or group organized to do such good work as is now the aim of the democrats in Connecticut. He predicted a democratic victory at the elections next fall.

Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch of Columbia, vice chairman of the state central committee gave an enthusiastic report of the success which she and her assistants were meeting in organizing democratic women's clubs throughout the state. There are now over one hundred clubs in Connecticut and she hopes that each of the 168 towns in the state will soon have such an organization. After advising that all women take advantage of the full benefit of the franchise she told of the purposes of the clubs.

Mrs. Jason S. Mowry of Oneco, told of the progress being made by the democrats in Sterling where the women are doing great work in making democratic voters.

Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton was introduced as the democratic leader of the general assembly and in an eloquent manner pleaded for greater unity in the party, calling attention to the fact that when the democrats are organized they will be a sweeping majority.

Secretary Lynch was the final speaker. He also favored the campaign for organization.

Those present were: E. M. Yeomans, Andover, chairman of the state central committee; A. S. Lynch, New Haven, secretary; Valentine L. Murphy of Willimantic, member of the state central committee from the 29th district; Mrs. Erlunia Ross of Thomson and Mrs. Mabel Ryan of Putnam, members of the committee from the 29th district; Osro G. COLUMBIA

A very interesting institute in agriculture and home economics was held at Yeoman's hall, Columbia, on Friday. The session lasted during the entire day, and was attended by twenty-five ladies and as many men.

Mrs. M. E. Dakin, extension dietitian of the Connecticut Agricultural College, gave practical demonstrations in the preparation of "supper dishes," which included salads, baked beans, etc. Those dishes were prepared in the hall and served as a portion of the lunch, and more declared to be excellent.

A. W. Manchester, who is at the head of the extension work of the college in farm management, spoke in the morning on the agricultural situation at the present time. He gave figures showing the gain or loss to the farmer from $400 to $1500 annually, which occurred by waves in a succession of years, apparently in unison with the general prosperity of the country. He said the farming population of the country has declined in recent years from 40 per cent to 28 per cent of the total residents of the country, and their earnings to less than 17 per cent of their investment, the chief cause being overproduction, and consequently poor markets. He said if farmers would produce only what is needed, by obtaining advance information of what will be necessary they would be in a better financial condition. He said that cooperative and group farming only, can now be successful, and that the day of remunerative individual farming is over.

Prof. Richard E. Dodge of the college, spoke of Columbia as a well situated and healthy town and made a plea for the entertainment of travelers and visitors. He urged that we give the children the best possible educational facilities possible, and that we should develop our towns, by working together for it, and then our children would have better living conditions than we have had, and this can be obtained by well organizing our community.

Miss Mildred Latham of Chestnut Hill, ill last week with tonsilitis, has recovered.

Rev. Charles C. Hann spoke Sunday morning on the zeal with which the gospel was preached in the early days of the church, and of St. Stephen, the first Christian to suffer martyrdom for preaching Christianity to the Jews.

The annual meeting of the Columbia Co-operative association was held at Yeoman's hall Monday afternoon. The officers elected are: President, Henry B. Hutchins; vice president, John Kingsbury; secretary and treasurer, Madison Woodward; directors, Hubert P. Collins; Milo S. Davoll, William M. Wolff, A. H. Benton, Lester J. Hutchins; auditing committee, George H. Champlin, Winthrop Davoll.

The reports presented showed that the association has had a very prosperous year, having received and sold 70 car loads, as in comparison with 45 carloads during the previous year and having done a business amounting to $88,000. One-half of the goods were sold to members of the association, and the balance to non-members at cheaper rates than could be obtained elsewhere. The association has over 60 stockholders and a well patronized in town.

DANIELSON

Some excitable person telephoned in a call for the fire department just after 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and the "33" call was sounded on the fire alarm system. It was a disgusted lot of firemen that came back to their quarters a few minutes later. They had rushed out for a grass fire that was burning, under supervision, over an area north of Young Bros. place of business on upper Mechanic street. There was absolutely no danger from the fire, which was being watched that it might be allowed to clean up the section of dry grass. Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department was among those who didn't think much of the sending in of an alarm for a fire of that kind. Nevertheless, grass fires at this time of the year are something of a novelty, and there must have been someone who did not want the firemen to miss seeing it.

This (Thursday) evening there is to be a meeting at which steps may be taken to lead to the doubling of one of Danielson's industrial plants, as to size, production, number of persons employed and payrolls. The concern is the Paco Manufacturing company, engaged in the making of marquisettes and other such materials. What the plans are would not be divulged Wednesday by those who are believed to know about the matter.

Following tonight's meeting some definite information may be available. It is known that the concern has an option on certain property that might be used in carrying out the expansion program now under consideration. Further than this, the public is without knowledge as to what it is proposed to do.

County Agent F. L. Davis has announced that he has secured W. H. Darrow, extension fruit specialist of the Connecticut Agricultural college, to conduct a pruning demonstration Friday afternoon of this week at 1.30 o'clock at the farm of Adelard Laframbroise in the town of Canterbury. This is an event that the county agent hopes will attract orchardists and all others interested in the growing of fruit and in the care of trees from every part of the county. It will be one of the specially interesting demonstrations under the auspices of the Windham County Farmers' association during the winter season.

A meeting of the Roundabout club is to be held Friday afternoon with Mrs. Harold Green.

Following a practice which has interested them during a number of winter seasons, a number of Danielson women are feeding flocks of birds daily—and the feathered friends never fail to respond to the call for lunch.

It is noted that Killingly's snow removal cost has been nil to date, this winter. This is of real interest in view of the fact that it has cost the town as high as $5,000 in some winters to keep the highways open.

No event of political nature has held the interest of workers in this territory so intently nor brought so much comment from them as the passing of the control of the British parliament to the Labor forces. It is readily recognized here as an epochal happening.

There is a large number of people in Danielson who did not include in their New Year's program a resolution to refrain from chewing gum in public. One can hear them everywhere.

Strawberries are among the tempting offerings for the table this week—fine large berries at prices not out of proportion, considering the season of the year.

With more than 1,000 motor vehicles showing on the new grand list of the town, Killingly has an exceedingly high percentage of cars in proportion to the population, one of the largest in Connecticut, in fact.

Well known republicans in this territory have received invitations to be at the McKinley day gathering in Hartford on January 29.

A suggestion is heard that Danielson's public clocks be brought into agreement as to telling time. They haven't been agreeing lately, sometimes differing two or three minutes.

Send this advertisement to The Plaut-Cadden Co., Norwich, with your name and address and you will receive a Book of Old Fashioned Songs free.—adv.

The members of the Roundabout club spent a most enjoyable evening Tuesday when they were dinner guests at the Park Inn. The dinner served by Mrs. Leila Spencer was delicious. Afterwards radio selections were enjoyed. Later the club attended the theatre and saw The Bright Shawl. The committee in charge of the evening were Mrs. Annie Anderson, Mrs. Alice Clark and Mrs. Annie Cuneen.

There appears to be general agreement among old time observers of the weather that February is going to be a real rough month, with long periods of steady cold and plenty of snow.

Construction is so far advanced that it is likely the first boxing exhibition in the new Casino arena may be staged as early as February. In any event, the structure will be ready for use early in February.

Killingly High school's basketball team will be accompanied to Putnam Friday evening by a large percentage of the student body of the school and by members of the alumni and other friends of the team.

Close watch continues to be kept, voluntary observers assisting, for the persons who have been thieving from cars left parked in streets in the business section. No thefts from cars have been reported for about two weeks.

The building on Academy street purchased some time ago by H. H. Starkweather and formerly in use as the Advent chapel has been remodeled into an attractive location for Mr. Starkweather's business. A partition running across the interior near the front has been removed, giving a large, light room.

Mrs. John Eben Young of Danielson and Mrs. Sidney W. Bard of Brooklyn, are members of committees representing this section that have been named in connection with arrangements for the annual Valentine tea to be given at Putnam under the auspices of the Woman's board of the Day Kimball hospital.

Miss Mary Young of North Main street has gone to New Orleans to spend the remainder of the winter.

Pierre Gazeau has notified the members of Rose of Lima council, K. of C., that there is to be a smoker at the rooms of the council in the Gallup building this (Thursday) evening.

At a little whist party given by the Girls' club, in their rooms, Tuesday evening, Mrs. L. E. Kennedy won first honors for the ladies and Owen Bell for the men. Consolation awards went to Mrs. Herbert House and Charles Main. Cake and coffee were served.

W. J. Robertson of Jewett City acted as installing officer when the newly elected officers of Orient lodge, K. of P., were inducted into office. Dancing followed the ceremony. Refreshments were served.

At the annual meeting of the Westcott and Wilcox Old People's home organization E. A. Jacobs was elected president and Frank T. Preston secretary-treasurer. The executive committee is made up of Mr. Preston, S. S. Stone and Miss Emma F. Pulling. Reports showed the past year to be the best in the history of the home, where a number of old people are now living.

Mrs. C. E. Woodis, for many years a resident of Danielson, is seriously ill at her home here.

John B. Maxstead of Lowell was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Wednesday.

The Westfield club has plans for a Valentine party.

The Baptist church has taken no action yet relative to calling a pastor. It is understood that several candidates will be heard before a call is extended.

Henrietta M. Spencer, 73, a native of Jewett City, believed to have been the only woman chief train dispatcher in the world, died Wednesday at Pomfret. Miss Spencer started her railroad career as a telegraph operator with the New York and New England railroad in Cranston, R. I., and was later promoted to train dispatcher. She was at one time with the old New England railroad, with headquarters in Providence, in the same capacity, remaining twelve years before going to the Long Island railroad as train dispatcher, under the Brooklyn office.

Upon leaving the Long Island road, Miss Spencer managed the Western Union telegraph office at New Britain, later going to Pomfret as house manager for the Ben Grosvenor inn, where she stayed for 32 years and where she died Wednesday.

Once more Arthur Pepin, of this city, has been unfortunate, in coming into possession of, as a dealer in second cars, a stolen machine. As he has done scores of times before, Mr. Pepin bought this particular car from an automobile dealer in Worcester and the transaction was entirely legitimate insofar as he was concerned.

It develops, however, that the car was stolen in Shirley, Mass., on December 11, from one George Sanderson, who lives on Lancaster road. The theft occurred in front of Sanderson's house at about ten o'clock at night.

It later developed that the men who stole the car sold it the same night to an automobile dealer in Worcester and on the following day the dealer sold it to Mr. Pepin of this city. Mr. Pepin in turn, sold the car to Andrew I. Spielman of Southbridge. Robert Malley of this city drove the car to Southbridge to turn it over to Spielman. When the car arrived there it was equipped with such an irregular looking set of number plates that it attracted the attention of a police officer, Thomas F. Dodd, and he held Malley for operating an unregistered car. Malley was presented in the court at Southbridge and fined $15.

A check up of the manufacturer's number on the car by Massachusetts automobile authorities resulted in Sanderson being notified and he went to Southbridge and found that Spielman's truck was his forming touring car.

In this case Mr. Spielman naturally will seek to be reimbursed by Mr. Pepin and Mr. Pepin will go back at the automobile dealer in Worcester to protect him against loss. There was a rumor here Wednesday that the men who stole the car had been apprehended in Massachusetts. The Putnam police had heard this rumor, but could not verify it.

An outstanding action of the stockholders of the Putnam Building and Loan association at his annual meeting Tuesday evening was a vote by which they increased the compensation of the secretary, Judge M. H. Geissler, from $300 to $500 a year. By this action recognition was made of the fact that the secretary's duties involve a great amount of very responsible detail work, and that the the service Judge Geissler is rendering the organization is cheap even at the advanced rate of pay. The funds of the association now total near $200,000, and the care of this fund, the collection monthly of the amounts due from stockholders, giving consideration to applications for loans and many other details of the work occupy much of the secretary's time.

Alexander Gilman was re-elected president; John M. Dean, Jr., Ernest B. Kent and Walter J. Bartlett, vice presidents; M. H. Geissler, secretary; Miss Elsie A. Gallant, assistant secretary; W. E. Moss, treasurer; Omer J. Milot, assistant treasurer.

The board of management is again made up of Omer J. Milot, John A. Dady, Silas M. Wheelock, Oscar Dugas, Ray C. Bosworth, G. Harold Gilpatric, Herbert J. Smith, Judge Geissler was named as attorney for the association.

The association was incorporated in 1916 and has been uniformly successful since the issue of its first series of shares in January of that year. Of the 17 series of shares made available for subscription during the current month, 184 had been taken out up to Wednesday morning; it was announced at the office of the secretary.

At the present time the association has applications for loans totaling $50,000 so that all the revenue for months to come will be invested at a profitable rate of, interest is rapidly as it becomes available.

The present value of the outstanding shares of the first series has increased to $117.50, this including accumulated interest.

Another three weeks will mark the completion of the new hall under construction in Livery street, for William A. St. Onge. The prospect now is that it will be used for the first time for the annual ball of the Putnam fire department. Work on the interior is being rushed. This new and commodious structure will provide Putnam with a place for holding dances which large numbers may attend, something it has been without since Union hall was closed to the public a few months ago, for staging athletic events, such as basketball or boxing exhibitions, and for concerts and minor dramatic events.

The interior of the hall is 90 feet deep and 60 in width. The section reserved for dancing is railed off leaving ample space on the north end and each side for spectators. A 30-foot wide stage is set in at the south end of the building, and the heating basement is set in under this stage. The floor is of quality hard pine, and gives promise of becoming one of the best dance floors in this section of the state.

The side walls are to be sheathed in pine to a height of six feet and the remaining six feet will be sheathed with plaster board. The roof clearance over the dance floor is 32 feet.

In order that the hall may be available for concerts Mr. St. Onge has provided 250 special style seats, built in pairs. These are removable seats.

The structure is one story in height, the walls of cement blocks. Entrance will be through a building fronting on Livery street. This building will have a plate glass front of attractive style and will contain ample checking facilities for patons of darnces in the building.

In building this structure, which has not been named as yet—its name probably to be selected after allowing the public to make suggestions through a contest—Mr. St. Onge has given Putnam a building for which there is much demand, as no other large hall is now available in the city for various events that require much floor space.

Mrs. Bessie B. Smith, 57, is dead at the home of Frank Hopkins, in the River road section of the town. Mrs. Smith was the wife of William A. Smith of Oyster Bay, L. I.

Members of Cargill council, K. of C. are being notified of a meeting of the organization called for Sunday, at which time the first degree will be conferred upon a class of candidates.

Mrs. Lewis T. Champlin and son, Dana, are spending this week with Mrs. Frank G. Neal of Charlestown, Mass., and Mrs. Charlotte Champlin of Arlington, Mass.

One of the ice concerns supplying Putnam was engaged Wednesday in cutting 9-inch ice from one of the small ponds in the vicinity of the city from which ice is taken each year to supply Putnam's needs.

Of interest here Wednesday was the unsuccessful effort of a young couple claiming to come from Providence to be married by the rabbi of the local synagogue. The prospective groom was a Hebrew, the bride-in-prospect a Gentile. The difference in the religious views of the pair stood as an irrevocable obstacle in the way of a marriage at the synagogue, and the pair were disconsolate upon leaving for Worcester for another trial at their mission.

Stanley Kelley, who has had a camp at Crystal lake for several years, has been in Eastford the past few days making arrangements for next summer's camp period. There will be a large number of boys in this camp.

A. M. Bowen of Eastford pirediets real cold weather for February—and plenty of ice.

Notwithstanding the cold wave of the early part of this week, robins continue to be reported from various towns in this section of the country.

All the sports in town are looking forward to next Sunday afternoon when the long talked of polo game will be played on Bennett's cove. Great rivalry exists between the two teams in all the sports especially because the captains of the two teams have always been opposed to beat other in previous sports and are accepting every chance to defeat each other. Thompson's team gave McCluggage's team a bad trimming New Year's Day for a turkey dinner and the following week defeated them at whist for a supper, but McCluggage says he will show up his opponents on the Ice Sunday in the polo game. McCluggage is considered a star at this game having played with professional teams, in Pawtucket, Providence and Lonsdale. Thompson never played in any professional as he preferred to keep in the amateur ranks, but is considered a fast and nervy player and says he will make McCluggage travel the fastest he has ever travelled.

The goals will be taken care of by Ben Schleiffer and Jack Davis and as both are considered in the A-1 class a close game is expected. Following are the teams:

W. McCluggage, captain, E. Raney, T. Dwyer, W. Benjamin, J. Davis; H. Thompson, Captain, E. LeClaire, L. Bakanowski, G. Willis, B. Schleiffer.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Campbell in Griswold, there was much enjoyment, Tuesday evening, Elmer Campbell, their son receiving a call from thirty-five friends to assist in the proper celebration of his 24th birthday.

An evening of games both of the new and old-time sort provided entertainment. Refreshments were served and during the evening the young man was presented a purse of money.

Ice stock took another slump on Wednesday with a decided rise in the temperature. At noon 40 degrees was reported in several readings. During the two days' cold, a couple of inches of fine ice was made on the Danielle fields, which was pretty well softened by the above-freezing weather.

Victor Campbell smashed all records for sowing spring rye, Jan. 17. He plowed an acre field which he seeded to rye, as is commonly done in April.

A distinction to be reckoned in the "some account" class, has come to the Jewett City rifle team. In the annual shoot of the National Rifle Association, held recently a number of local marksmen submitted their officially verified targets for the national competition medals offered by the government. Doubtless over 30,000 men all over the United States entered this country-wide contest. The first ten men receive medals. The government notification has reached here that in this first ten, there were three from the local team, John Kaufmann stood second, Dona Balon fifth and Charles B. Palmer tenth. The local team, by virtuue of these scores is on the marksmen's map with the top-notchers.

Superintendent F. H. P. Clement is authority for the following interesting school news: The eighth and seventh grades of the Riverside Grammar school have attended the Palace Theatre in Norwich where they have seen "The Courtship of Myles Standish". Through it they have gained some first-hand information as to how the Pilgrims had to struggle for their very existence in this new world. Also it showed the pupils the modes of living and custom of these early Pilgrim Fathers.

The seven hundred and fifty children of the Griswold public schools have been measured and weighed. Of these, sixty six or 8 4-5 per cent are under weight. This abnormalcy does not indicate malnutrition in every case, by any means, because a child can be perfectly healthy in every way and yet be under or overweight. However, where it is traceable to malnutrition such cases should be checked up.

What Kind Of Blood Have You?

Thin, Pale and Watery—Keeping You Weak, Nervous and Rundown, or Rich, Red Healthy Blood With Plenty of Iron in it To Give You Strength, Energy, Power and Endurance?

IRON IS RED BLOOD FOOD
Says Physician

How NUXATED IRON Puts Roses into the Cheeks of Women and Helps Give Renewed Strength to Men.

It's not always the youngest woman that is most sought after—there is an indescribably alluring fascination in the rosy cheek, the lustrous lips and sparkling eyes of a woman whose blood is filled with iron. You may be afflicted with iron starvation of the blood and not know it, just as thousands of other women are.

If you tire easily, if you look pale, haggard and worn, if you feel generally weak, nervous and run-down it would probably astonish you to look at a drop of your own blood under a powerful microscope and compare it with a drop of pure, healthy blood—rich in iron. Actual blood tests show that a tremendously large number of people who are weak and ill lack iron in their blood and that they are ill for no other reason than lack of iron.

For want of iron you may practically be said weaken at from 20 to 40 years, "heart-tired and "all fagged out." You may be in such a highly nervous, irritable state that you "go all to pieces" on the slightest provocation, while at 60 or 70 with good health and plenty of iron in your blood, you may still be young in feeling and as attractive and full of life as to defy detection of your real age.

Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in which a highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating half a quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples.

Over seven million people annually are using NUXATED IRON. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. It often increases the bodily and mental vigor, strength and endurance of weak, nervous, "run-down" folks in two weeks' time. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results. Beware of substitutes. Nuxated Iron comes in tablet only—never in liquid form. Always look for the word "Nuxated" on every package and the letters N. I. on every tablet. Sold by all druggists.

GET ALL THE FACTS.

In view of the claims that have been made and the testimony that has been received by the committee that is investigating the Teapot Dome lease, the right course has been pursued by President Coolidge in demanding that the department of justice give particular attention to the evidence as given. Whatever the outcome may be the inquiry needs to be thorough and the probe pushed to the bottom. If there are false claims, if situations have been distorted, if the facts are other than claimed, if there has been crooked work, if the charges are correct the axe should be applied, let the chips fall where they may. There have been revelations and disclosures which call for a clearing up of the entire affair if that is possible, and nothing should be allowed to stand in the way of it.

Albert B. Fall, formerly secretary of the interior, about whom the inquiry revolves, is quoted as stating that he is on his way to Washington to tell the committee anything that it wants to know about the lease and his affairs. That is the spirit that is to be expected. He has steadily denied any guilt in connection with the affair. Certain testimony has been offered to show that he personally profited from the lease, and there has also been introduced hearsay testimony, which may not be considered as sufficient to condemn a man, and yet taken in connection with other features of the inquiry makes it more necessary that all doubtful points be cleared up.

From the government's standpoint there is and has been no disposition to cover up any of the details. If the charges are based on other than suspicion or political activity the inquiry will establish it. What is wanted is the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth and it is the administration's purpose to be ready to act in case it is established that there is ground for such action. The need now is to get at the facts and the quicker it can be done the better. Let there be no stone left unturned.

INVESTIGATING BOK.

Even though it is granted that the senate's purpose in making its inquiry into the Bok peace award is just as sincere as the efforts of Mr. Bok in behalf of peace, which of course all will not concede, it cannot fail to be realized that it has made no progress in bringing to light any evidence that the man who offered the large prize has influenced the decision, by handpicking the committee of award or otherwise. Had the committee been endeavoring to show that the donor had gained a lot of advertising out of the idea the result would have been different.

When Mr. Bok told the committee that he did not know who had won the prize, that he had nothing to do with suggesting or picking more than one of the committee of award, that he had paid the entire expense of the undertaking himself, he set forth clearly the fact that it was his interest in the cause that had prompted his effort, that he was representing no organization and that he was taking this method of doing what he considered to be his duty, and doing it honestly and sincerely.

When Mr. Bok informed the committee that he was shouldering the expense, declined to tell what it was and said that inasmuch as it was personal he believed he was entitled to withhold it, little exception can be taken to such an attitude. Had the committee found any ground for believing that the award had been wrongly influenced, or that it was other than the conscientious decision of the committee selected for this task without strings, there might have been reason for insisting that Mr. Bok present his ledger account relative to the award expenses.

Few have been able to see that there was any good ground for the committee's inquiry, and certainly the evidence that has been obtained hasn't disclosed any. If the claim about propaganda is made there is no chance to maintain that Mr. Bok has not been open and above board concerning the whole thing. There is no denying the fact that he is interested in peace, but so far as known that doesn't constitute an offense against country or fellowman, regardless of what may be thought of the Bok plan, the league of nations or the world court.

INTENSIVE EDUCATION.

In these days of increasing expense the universities and colleges are hit as well as the individual. Some meet the situation in one way and some in another. Just what is the ideal method depends upon conditions. Some are in a position to not only seek but to go out and get the increased funds that are required for taking care of an unlimited number of those seeking education, while others are not so fortunate and believe that good business administration of the institution calls for the limitation of the number of students. Whether this limitation is temporary or permanent may depend on what the future reveals. At present, however, there is a feeling in the latter class that the institution should not be plunged into constantly increasing debt by endeavoring to teach more than the funds available will permit.

This is the course that has been decided upon at Colgate, the president of which has announced that the enrollment will be limited to 1,000. Colgate presumably stands where other institutions of learning stand in that it is not able to get sufficient from the tuitions to meet the expense of educating all that apply and it has an insufficient endowment to make up the difference. Instead of trying to give a poor education to many it will endeavor to give a good education to those that it can, while the others must look elsewhere. The idea of giving "an intensive rather than an extensive education" may be an experiment. It differs with some views, but in the test, in the manner in which the limit is fixed and in the effects upon the university will the maintenance of such a policy depend.

Colgate is apparently cutting its garment according to the cloth. It hasn't hesitated in its course because others have adopted a similar policy and then abandoned it. If it finds itself able to provide an education for all who are equipped to receive it at some later date it no doubt will be eager to raise its limit. The reaction on the institution as the result of its announcement will be watched with keen interest.

AIDING LAW ENFORCEMENT.

In view of the acceptance by the British empire and the signing of the treaty by this country dealing with the right to search ships for liquor beyond the three-mile limit of this country, the next step treaty-wise will be to bring about similar understandings with other countries.

Action upon the treaty by the United States senate remains to be taken, but inasmuch as it is aimed at the enforcement of the laws of this country which have been approved the sanction of the senate is not likely to be withheld.

Under this treaty the handicap of the three-mile limit in breaking up the rum smuggilers is expected to disappear. With the enforcement authorities able to search vessels for liquor within an hour's steaming distance from shore greater freedom for the authorities is provided, and while it may result in new tactics by the present occupants of rum row better enforcement is anticipated, when the coast guard is provided with the necessary equipment.

Not all the ships aiding and abetting the rum running fly the British flag. It is therefore important that similar understandings should be reached with other countries, and the negotiation of treaties therewith in the logical outcome of the progress thus far made.

Whatever may be the opinion concerning the dry law, enforcement is regarded as necessary by most people while the law exists. Thus whatever is done to aid in enforcement must be regarded as a move in the right direction. And while advantages in behalf of enforcement are being gained by this government advantages in the way of bringing sealed liquor into our ports will accrue to foreign shipping. In this give and take plan the United States is enabled to better uphold its own laws.

CANAL DEFENSES.

When the maneuvers of the fleet were centered about the Panama canal it was apparent that the outcome would show what could be expected of the defenses of that waterway as at present constituted. The mimic attack has been made by a portion of the fleet and the verdict is that it was successful, that the defenders were unable to drive it off and that the canal would be at the mercy of the enemy in case of war because its defense equipment, aside from the navy, is not adequate to meet the situation. We are not anticipating any conflict, but such great structures as the canal cannot be neglected in the consideration of proper defense before any trouble arises even though our aims and desires are for peace.

As the result of the maneuvers there will be reinforced the demands for increased defenses for the canal. The importance of the waterway, the constantly increasing traffic and the investment involved are fully understood. The canal is of great value in time of peace, but for the most effective use of our navy it is even more valuable in case of war. Advocates of stronger defenses lay stress upon the need of providing greater safeguards for it to better protect it should a crisis suddenly develop.

Although it is of great benefit to all maritime nations, that would not cause them to hesitate to wreck it should certain conditions exist. What is done will doubtless depend upon the report of the military authorities and the funds that are available.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Every day is going to be labor day in England for a while.

The Mexican revolution through the loss of the Tacoma has saddled quite an expense on Uncle Sam.

You understand of course that the weatherman must be expected to be on his job once in a while.

Some of the big cities are having mid-winter clean-ups. The good old spring cleanings are not so far away.

The man on the corner says: Perhaps it isn't because he doesn't want to that a chap doesn't do the other fellow.

Philadelphia still requires a weekly reminder to the effect that it isn't as clean or law respecting as it should be.

With the blockade of Tampico "postponed" the Mexican rebels may soon consider it advisable to postpone the revolution.

It is interesting to note that there is to be a search for propaganda in congress just because the people have dared to let their congressmen know that they want a reduction in taxes.

General Dawes has served notice that his committee will make its own report and that he is observing the natural safeguards to see that it isn't given out piecemeal or in a distorted manner.

When Secretary Mellon says "Don't put your money in another man's dreams," he repeats an old warning which many people are not willing to heed until they have gone through with the dream.

FLIVER PLANES

"This is awful!" said the girl who likes to talk, when she had read the newspaper clipping forced upon her. "I don't know why there should be any clapping of hands over this man who ate breakfast in Detroit, lunched in Chicago and dined in St. Louis all on the same day. It is a feat to be condemned rather than approved when one realizes the vistas opened up by such grasshopper tactics!

"People say that they have troubles enough now, what with the automobile and low price of gas, in keeping track of their energetic children and you can plainly see the land simply dotted with anxious parents hanging from the open windows in the rays of the lambent moon watching for any sky trace of the family flivver plane.

"'Oh dear me!' says the mother of young Hi Syne, shading her eyes from the bright light of the stars as she gazes across the Milky Way, 'here it is 4 o'clock in the morning and Hi is not home yet, I told him on no account was he to go to that supper-dance out in San Francisco because I wanted him to go to bed early and I knew well enough he has gone exactly there! I'll bet he took that Tennessee girl, too, and that'll make him later still! His father certainly must speak to that boy severely, worrying me this way!'

"Instead of Billy's mother calling up Tommy's mother in the well-known old way to inquire whether Billy is at Tommy's because it is time he was home for dinner, she will ring up Tommy's parent and say, 'Is Billy there? No? Of all things. He has disobeyed me again! After lunch today he begged and teased to fly down to New York this afternoon to see another boy and I told him simply on no account would I hear of such nonsense! He has gone so much of late—two days ago he had lunch with a boy in Galveston and he went to the movies in Boston another day and a tennis party in Cuba the day after, and no matter what others may do, I say that my boy has just got to learn to live quietly and attend to his home duties on at least one or two days a week!'

"'You are quite right, Mrs. Karrett:' Tommy's mother will agree. 'It is time we mothers took a stand and discouraged all this tearing around at all hours! Why, just three days ago when my husband and I were ready to step into our plane to go to a very important dinner party in Pittsburgh we found the roof absolutely empty! Tommy had slipped out while we were dressing and taken a crowd to the gulf for a moonlight swim—and no matter how warm the water is he always gets a cold in his ears when he goes swimming.'

"'Where'll we go this week-end?' the father of the family will yawningly inquire. 'I'd kind of like to try that village up in the Andes again myself!' 'Oh, father,' the marcelled daughter will object, 'that's the deadest place! Let's go to Cairo, Egypt, where there's something doing. And on the way back we can stop for tea in Paris!' 'I'm sick of Paris,' says the mother of the family. 'We are always going there for tea or something! Let's run down to Calcutta—I need some new brass finger bowls, anyway!' 'Aw,' says the heir of the household, 'why can't we go any place I wants go over Sunday? Let's have dinner at the Igloo in Alaska and sort of float around wherever we want to go on the way back—it's strawberry season in Siberia, Harry says, and then we could dash across to Switzerland and bring back some of that bully Swiss honey and have Sunday tea right here at home! The family agrees that his idea is swagger and off they hop.

"You plainly can see where this will lead us. In about five years of hopping a person will have used up all available spots on the earth and there won't be a solitary place to go or what is worse, to want to go. I tell you, I'm not at all in favor of turning this grand, mysterious old earth into such a casual amusement park! It won't do to get too familiar with it if we're going to have any respect for it!"

"It sounds noble," the cynical listener told her. "But I'd hate to have any one offer you a seat in the Equatorial One-Day Sightseeing airplane bus if there was only one seat left and I had planned on using it myself! Huh!"—Exchange.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS

Taxpayers, in the preparation of their 1923 income-tax returns, should note carefully the distinction between business expenses and capital expenditures. Business expenses are deductible, but a capital expenditure may not be. For example, a manufacturer may erect a new building at a cost of $100,000 and spend on it during the year $500 for repairs, such as painting the roof, replacing broken windows, etc. The cost of the incidental repairs may be deducted, but the cost of the building is a capital investment, which is not deductible.

Articles that will last more than a year purchased for use in business, trade or profession are considered capital investments. These include books bought by a lawyer, physician, or other professional man, a surgeon's instruments, an expressman's truck, or a farmer's tractor.

Even when used wholly in carrying on a business, trade or profession, the purchase price of an automobile is not deductible. If used partly for business and partly for pleasure and convenience, the cost of upkeep, gasoline, repairs, etc., may be apportioned accordingly and the part attributable to business purposes deducted as a business expense.

Necessary expenses incurred in the maintenance of property leased to others may be deducted by the owner. These include premiums on fire insurance policies, the cost of water light, heat, janitor services, and minor repairs.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Charles R. Flint, who today enters upon his 75th year, is an eminent merchant and financier whose career teems with the best traditions of American business. Born and raised at Thomaston, Maine, he completed his education in Brooklyn and in 1868 entered the commercial world as a dock clerk. Three years later found him a member of a firm of ship chandlers and by 1872 he had acquired an interest in one of the great New York shipping firms having important connections with South and Central America. As a delegate of the United States to the first International American Conference in 1889, Mr. Flint, because of his intimate knowledge of Central and South America was able to render important services. During the revolution in Brazil in 1893 he acted for President Peixoto in the purchase of vessels and munitions of war. He rendered similar assistance to Japan in the Chinese-papanese war and to Russia during the Russo-Japanese war.

Has He Found a Cure for Asthma?

Simple Prescription Gives Instant Relief. Makes Breathing Easy.

In New England, where Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis and other diseases of the throat and lungs are so prevalent, remarkably successful results are being reported following the use of a new form of treatment known as Oxidase, a physician's prescription.

Oxidase is a harmless but powerful combination of curative essential oils concentrated and compressed into a small tablet. One of these tablets slowly dissolved before going to bed seems to have the effect of releasing the muscular constriction of the bronchial tubes, opening up the air passages and regulating spasmodic lung action. This enables the patient to breathe easily and naturally while lying down and to get a comfortable night's sleep.

So much interest has been shown that local druggists including Lee & Osgood, have secured a small supply and state that they are authorized to refund the money paid for the first package if in any case this new treatment fails to give relief. Oxidase is pleasant to take, contains no harmful, habit forming drugs and is not expensive. This makes their test an easy matter.

Stories That Recall Others

'Tis a Cruel World

He was planning a visit to New York when a friend offered to give him a note to Jerry, who runs a quiet, unostentatious place and provides what is wanted for those he knows.

Armed with the card he sought the promised land when he got to New York. He tiptoed into the place, leaned over the bar and presented the card. A queer smile came over the bartender's face, but he said not a word. He merely reached for a newspaper and pointed to a story in the first page. The dear little oasis had been raided that morning!

The Ink Eraser Habit

A young colored man went to a drug clerk friend in dire distress. He had yielded to the galloping dominoes and was $2.50 short in his pay envelope. "The ol' woman sure'll macerate me" he declared in revealing his plight. Instead of a loan the clerk took an ink remover and changed the figures on the outside of the envelope so that they tallied with the cash within. It worked fine, but the clerk now had a regular visitor every Saturday for further applications of the ink eraser till he was obliged to put up a notice "Never again."

SUES TO COLLECT ON BALANCE CLAIMED DUE

Foreclosure of a lien on a house and lot in Wequetequock, Stonington, is sought by Isaac Sherman of Stonington in a suit brought against John and Mary Paul, husband and wife of Stonington. The plaintiff claims that between June 14, 1922 and Jan. 1, 1924 he erected a house for the defendants for which he was to be paid $3,200 but that the defendants have paid only $2,200 on the account.

The suit is returnable before the superior court in February.

POETRY

The Rosary of My Tears

Some reckon their age by years,
Some measure their life by art;
But some tell their days by the flow of their tears,
And their lives by the moans of their heart.

The dials of earth may show
The length, not the depth, of years—
Few or many they come, few or many they go,
But time is best measured by tears.

Ah! not by the silver hair
That creeps through the sunny air,
And not by the scenes that we pass on our way,
And not by the furrows the fingers of care

On forehead and face have made—
Not so do we count our years;
Not by the sun of the earth, but the mists
Of our souls, and the fall of our tears.

For the young are oft-times old.
Though their brows be bright and fair;
While their blood beats war, their hearts are cold—
O'er them the spring—but winter is there;

And the old are oft-times young
When their hair is thin and white;
And they sing in age, as in youth they sang,
And they laugh, for their cross was light.

But, bead by bead, I tell
The rosary of my years;
From a cross to a cross they lead; tis well,
And they're blest with a blessing of tears.

Better a day of strife
Than a century of sleep;
Give me instead of a long stream of life
The tempests and tears of the deep.

A thousand joys may foam
On the billows of all the years;
But never the foam brings the lone back home—
He reaches the haven through tears.
—Abram J. Ryan in Indianapolis News.

Simple Things

Folks laugh at things that please my heart,
The simple things of every day;
The creaking of the farmer's cart,
The shuffling feet along the way
The little candle's winking light
Upon the cottage window sill,
The robin's raptures of delight,
The winding path, the wooded hill.
Folks mock, for on one understands;
The plates above the chimney place,
The touch of hard, work weary hands,
The wrinkles in each homely face,
The prattled wisdom of a child,
The whispering of leaves astir,
All this is beauty undefiled,
And I bow down a worshiper.
—Edgar Daniel Kramer in Farm Life.

Good-bye Stained Teeth

New Safe Treatment Bleaches Dark Teeth in Three Minutes

Dentists have discovered a new safe treatment which bleaches stains from teeth giving yellow discolored teeth a beautiful flashing whiteness. It is called Bleachodent Combination, and consists of a remarkable liquid which curdles or softens the stains and a new kind of paste, which instantly removes the softened stains, and prevents new stains from forming. Simply brush the teeth with a few drops of the liquid—then use the paste and event the dullest teeth are quickly whitened. Tobacco stains disappear after first few applications. Bleachodent Combination was first made for children's teeth to avoid the use of harsh gritty pastes which are so harmful to children's soft sensitive teeth. While Bleachodent Combination will instantly remove surface stains, do not expect it to remove stains caused by silver fillings, as these are below the enamel, and Bleachodent Combination is not intended to act on the enamel in any way. Fine for the gums. Bleachodent Combination is widely used and recommended. Costs just a few cents and money back if not delighted. Get it today at all good dealers, such as G. G. Engler, H. M. Lerou, Andrew McLaughlin, Lee & Osgood.

OBITUARY

John P. Gorman.

John P. Gorman, 68, of Jewett City, died Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock at the home of his niece, Mrs. M. J. Curran, No. 114, Lafayette street, this city. When stricken with pneumonia, on January 14, he was taken there, at his own request, by a local physician. "Johnnie" Gorman, for that was the name by which thousands of people in this and of the state knew him, was born in Norwich, Sept. 14, 1855. Going to Jewett City at the age of 23 he lived in the Soule family, practically as one of its members, for nearly 40 years. The late Dr. William Soule offered him every advantage, placing him in his drug store as a clerk, and Johnnie made good in every possible way. He set himself steadily to the task of making every opportunity count, and as the result of hard study and persistent effort he became a druggist, and later a registered pharmacist. His natural courtesy made a friend of every one with whom he came in contact. His was a life that was on the level in all its dealings with mankind. Few men ever grow into a community as he did, likable in every way without a known enemy, and a friend to all. No person, young or old, in any trouble of whatever sort, failed to find in John just the sort of sympathy needed to fit his case.

He was small in stature, being less than four feet tall, yet with not a trace evidencing a physical defect, he was just a "little" man. This fact added to his popularity, everywhere he went, in social and fraternal gatherings.

Some time after the death of Dr. Soule, Mr. Gorman established a drug store of his own in Jewett City in a building which he bought on Main street, and here, too, came to him the successes he never failed to merit. In the state, he was an upright, reliable citizen, and a Christian character of the highest order. His best great love was for his church, and in the Methodist body of Jewett City he is recorded, in the role of benefactor, trustee, steward, and a member of its finance committee. In the town, he had served for years as a justice of the peace and was a notary public. He was especially beloved by the children of the town, and has given prizes in the local schools for excellence in certain departments of work.

His varied and numerous affiliations were the source of much pleasure to him. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine. In Norwich, Columbian Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar, Franklin Council and the Chapter held him as an honored member. Jan. 30, 1884, he became a member of Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, F. & A. M., of Jewett City, and was for many years its beloved chaplain.

He was past chancellor commander of Undaunted lodge, No. 34, K. of P., past noble grand of Reliance lodge, No. 109, I. O. O. F., being a charter member. He was a member of Ruth Rebecca lodge, Thames Past Noble Grand association, Faith Chapter, No. 82, O. E. S., the Masonic Veterans association, and Eleazer Jewett lodge, No. 236, N. E. O. P. In Norwich he was enrolled in the order of the Pythian Sisters, The Norwich Nest of Owls and the order of Moose and Red Men. Also at home an honorary member of Dorcas circle of The King's Daughters and the treasurer of the American Insurance Union. He was a member of Pachaug grange. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Catherine Murphy of Norwich, three nieces, Mrs. M. J. Curran of Norwich, Miss Elizabeth Murphy of Plainfield, Mrs. Richard Moran of Southington, and two nephews, I. J. Murphy of Somerville, Mass., and A. J. Murphy of Norwich.

Mrs. Henry Espieg

Death came suddenly Wednesday morning about 10.15 to Mrs. Johanna Espieg, wife of Henry Espieg, at her home, 4 Bruggemann place, Mystic. Death was due to heart failure and was unexpected, Mrs. Espieg being occupied in her usual duties when she died.

She was born in Sachen, Germany, June 6, 1857, the daughter of John and Theresa Einhenkel. She is survived by her husband and the following children: Chas. O. Espieg of Philadelphia, Mrs. Robert D. Mason of Westerly, R. I., Mrs. Delva Brown of Mystic, and Miss Elsie Espieg, also of Mystic.

Mrs. Charles C. Pettigrew

After a long illness the life of Jennie Moore Pettigrew of Quaker Hill, wife of Captain Charles C. Pettigrew, came to a close Wednesday morning in this city where she had been under treatment for her illness.

Mrs. Pettigrew was born in Waterford, Conn., the daughter of Nelson H., and Helen Hewitt Moore who survive her with her husband, Captain Charles C. Pettigrew; two daughters, Maude L. and Gladys V. Pettigrew of Quaker Hill; two brothers, George W. and James J. Moore, and two sisters, Mrs. Harold S. Burt and Miss Helen B. Moore of Norwich.

News of the death of Mrs. Pettigrew will be received with profound sorrow by a host of friends, whose sympathies are extended to those members of the family who mourn the loss of a loved one.

SOLID ROCK BOTTOM IN THAMES RIVER

A bed of solid rock at the bottom of the Thames river is encountered by workmen of the Connecticut Engineering and Contracting Co., which is engaged in putting in a new and enlarged dock for the Richmond Radiator Co. Favorable weather has enabled the work to be pushed along in good shape since it was started and if the open winter continues it will be possible to complete the work without interruption because of ice in the river.

The present small dock is being extended about 10 feet and a new dock is being put in from the southerly end of the present dock for about 500 feet. Because of the rock bottom it is impossible to drive spiles but holes have to be drilled into the rock into which spikes are driven to which the dock is bolted and anchored. A diver has to be used for the work.

STREET JARS CAUSE GAS MAINS TO LEAK

Leaky joints in gas mains in West Thames street have called for attention from the workmen of the gas and electric department recently and the work is nearly completed. It has been necessary to cut through the concrete highway to get at the joints and tighten them up wherever leaks have been found.

General Manager C. W. Taggart said Wednesday night the jar of the trolley cars and heavy trucks traveling over a solid pavement was the probable cause of the gas leaks. Cities, he said, are finding that gas mains that have been laid too near the surface become leaky at the joints when the streets have a solid roadbed laid in them and there is trolley travel with heavy traffic. The gas main in West Thames street, which, he said, was laid about two years before he came here as general manager, is two feet under ground, which is not deep enough to protect it from the effect of travel under present conditions.

There was some work done in this line of repairs last summer but more leaks have cropped out recently. According to General Manager Taggart there have been no complaints of the gas leaking back into the houses of that neighborhood but the leaks have become manifest from the odor on the street and are located by tests. The escaping gas has not been in enough volume to make an appreciable record on the measuring instruments at the gas works.

PARK CHURCH SCOUTS WINNERS IN CONTEST

In an inter-troop contest Wednesday evening at Park church parish house, the Park church Boy Scouts, Troop 13, won over their challengers, Troop 7, Hebrew Scouts of the West Side.

Troop 13 won in the following: A events—knot tying and semaphore signaling; B events—staff throw; while Troop No. 7 won in A events—first aid; B events—patrol standing broad jump, relay and centipede race.

Scoutmaster Kadish and his patrol leaders, Edward Land and Alfred Levene, came over with twenty scouts, in the true scout spirit, and although not winning the contest in scouteraft, their games showed to good advantage.

Between the events were the scout games: cock fight, Indian wrestle and leg wrestle in which everyone took part. All were in high spirits, and while serious when on the floor, a good time, including refreshments, put a fine finish to the evening.

Scoutmaster Johnson and Assistant Scoutmaster Banton were in charge of Troop No. 13, and the troop stands ready to meet any other troop in the council in all standard contest events.

the army work he graduated at Boston English high school and took three years at Salem normal school. He left school to enter the army work and graduated from the Salvation Army training school in New York city last June. It is unusual for a lieutenant to be in charge of a corps as an officer of that rank generally has to serve in some subordinate capacity before he is to given charge, but the appointment to Norwich that was given to Lieutenant Grillo is an indication of the satisfaction that was felt with his work by his superior officers.

Since he has been stationed here, he has had an average of from 7 to 10 per week who have been given lodgings and meals have been provided for from 10 to 15, besides doing the regular relief work for families in the city.

Avery and Acting State Attorney Warren Burrows his findings on the death of Shirley Gimpel, a little Colchester girl, who died after being hit by an automobile recently. Y. M. C. A. BIBLE STUDY ON PARABLE OF SOWER

The group of men present at the Y. M. C. A. Bible class Wednesday evening enjoyed the study of the parable of the sower, taken from Mark the fourth chapter, verses one to twenty. Following were some of the points brought out in the study. The word multitudes occurs often in connection with the activities of the Master; evidently crowds followed him often, and the reasons were probably varied, some followed out of curiosity, others for what they could get in the line of loaves and fishes, and yet others because they they really believed in him. Jesus was a person who quickly adapted himself to conditions; on this occasion he made a pulpit of a boat and spoke the wonderful parable to the waiting multitude. He looked out upon the farm land and quickly framed his picture story with a simplicity that was easily understood.

The very first word of the parable is significant: "the sower went out to sow." Every Christian man should be a sower. There seem to be many who are willing to reap, but all too few who care to do the sowing; many who get and do not give much; sowers are greatly needed. The seed that was sown was evidently good, for except that which the birds ate, all the other began to grow. The four kinds of soil are suggestive of the conditions of human hearts. Some hearts are so hard that there is practically no chance for the good seed to enter, and the life therefore remains cold and unresponsive to the high and holy things. The shallow ground is indicative of the shallowness of some lives; they begin the Christian life apparently with good promise, but soon their interest disappears; the seed did not really get a start. The thorny ground suggests the thought that there are those who allow secondary things to crowd out the real things of life; they do not put first things first, and their lives are spiritually empty to an extent. The redeeming feature of the parable, so to speak is the good ground. This is always true; though we may see many of our efforts fail, there are always some bright spots in our experiences, some good results from some of our efforts to help others. We have opportunity every day to sow the seed of kindness; of telling others of God's blessed promises.

MY DAUGHTER WOULD CRY AT EVERYTHING

Nervous and Irritable. By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Became Entirely Normal

Clinton, Wisconsin.—"My daughter was in a very run-down condition, and was irritable, and would cry at every little thing she was so weak and nervous. As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped me when I was a girl I gave it to her to build her up, and the results were all that we could wish for. I wish that every mother with growing girls would try it for these troubles girls often have. I had taken it myself before my girl was born, and she was one of the nicest babies any one could wish to have. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to women and girls and cannot praise it too highly."—Mrs. I. A. Holford, Box 48, Clinton, Wisconsin.

Mothers can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

ANOTHER BASEBALL SQUABBLE OVER RIGHT TO BALDWIN'S SERVICES

Baldwin's purchase from the owners of the Newark club was announced several days ago by the New York Giants but today Michael McTigue, head of a syndicate which recently acquired the New Jersey club's franchise, denied the legality of that proceeding and declared the twirler had signed a 1924 contract to play with Newark.

"Baldwin became our property with the franchise," said Mr. McTighe, "and we have sanctioned no deal with the Giants. So far as we are concerned he will play with Newark, according to his contract. We will oppose any effort to transfer him elsewhere."

Officials of the Giants, on the other hand, are equally as confident that they have clear title to Baldwin.

"We obtained Baldwin in a deal with Bernard Roan and William Ashton of Baltimore, former owners of the Newark club," said Judge F. X. McQuade, treasurer of the National league champions. "The agreement of sale with the new owners contained a stipulation that Baldwin could be sold by Roan and Ashton. We are satisfied that we have clear title to Baldwin and are not interested in the attitude of the new Newark owners."

The case has been carried by Mr. McTighe and his associates to John Conway Toole, president of the International league, who said today he had it under advisement.

In baseball circles it was believed ultimate settlement of the controversy may devolve upon Commissioner Landis. Precedent, however, it was pointed out, apparently favors the new Newark ownership, inasmuch as baseball powers have ruled previously in similar cases that players automatically were transferred when a franchise changed hands.

MAY HAVE TO RETURN WINNINGS OF HORSE

Cleveland, Jan. 23.—Owners of Clyde the Great, 2:04 1-4, which ranked third among the Grand Circuit trotters last year, although apparently innocent, are faced with the probability of having to refund thousands of dollars won by the colt, it was revealed here tonight.

Because Clyde the Great is alleged to have been ruled out of his class, his winnings—he topped the summary in one $10,000 stake and in two $5,000 events—must be turned back and distributed among some twenty or thirty horses which finished behind him in each heat of these and other events in which he will be disqualified. He raced in his class in only two events, it is claimed.

The muddle resulted from an investigation by Fred Edman, Memphis horseman and owner of Favonian, which frequently finished second to Clyde the Great. Several thousand dollars will be paid to Edman if Clyde the Great's winnings are refunded.

The records show that Clyde the Great raced at Indianapolis September 1, 1922, and in winning the second heat, stepped to a win race of 2:07 flat. The daily press and the turf journal it is said, carried the time of that mile as 2:07 1-4 which would make Clyde the Great a 2:08 trotter.

On the assumption that he was a 2:08 trotter, Tommy Murphy, prominent Syracuse driver, purchased the colt for a reported sum of $20,000 from C. C. Lammlein of Louisville, Ky. Murphy, it is claimed, raced the horse through engagements that had been made by Lammlein.

Clyde the Great's record of 2:04 1-4 was earned last season.

ROOKIE PITCHER GETS RELEASE BEFORE TRYOUTS

New York, Jan. 23.—Ben Karr, Atlanta pitcher acquired by the New York Yankees in the deal this winter in which they also obtained Pitcher George Dumont, has been sent back to the Crackers.

Karr's release before being given a tryout is the Yankees' first move to cut its roster down the 40-player limit.

THE TEAM THAT WINS ON ROAD MAY GET TITLE

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 23.—The team that can capture its games away from home in the intercollegiate basketball league race probably will win the championship, Coach Joe Fogarty of the Yale team, said tonight shortly after the game with Princeton in which his charges were defeated, 27 to 19.

He pointed out that the members of the league thus far had been able to win their home games and that the final result would naturally fall upon the out of town games. Commenting on the work of Yale, last year's intercollegiate champions, who this year have lost their three starts, he said: "I am satisfied with the work of the team, for they played the hardest they could."

ARMY TO CONDUCT OWN OLYMPIC TRIALS

New York, Jan. 23.—Authority to conduct its own Olympic trials has been granted the army by the American Olympic committee, it was announced today at a conference of athletic representatives of the regular army, national guard and reserves of the second army corps area, called by Major General Robert Lee Bullard, corps commander.

Colonel Isaac Newell, general staff, representing General Bullard, outlined plans of the war department's drive to qualify the greatest number of candidates for the national trials from all components of the army of the United States.

Tentative arrangements placed on foot by the athletic representatives will bring the best regular, national guard and reserve corps athletes to the metropolitan district for the army tryouts in the spring, and the winners at this meet are to carry the army colors in the national finals.

In addition to Colonel Newell, Major William C. Rose attended the conference for the regular army; Lieutenant Colonel C. J. Dieges for the New York national guard; Major Charles S. Tate for the New Jersey guard and Lieutenant Colonel J. A. Marmon for the organized reserves. The Delaware national guard was not represented but will enter a team in the tryouts, it was announced.

SAINTS TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM BROADWAY

St. Patrick's school basketball five took a fast game from Broadway school Wednesday afternoon by a close score of 17 to 14. There was plenty of action from start to finish and at times there was considerable roughness. Mingo was the high scorer of the game getting three clean baskets, two of the shots being made from difficult angles. Shea was a close second with two baskets. The floor work of Blum was a large factor in the Saints' victory. The summary:

Taylor deserted the Greenville club of the South Atlantic league in 1923 and Hickman refused to report to the Toledo club in 1920. Gainer deserted the St. Louis club in 1913.

Battery B Seconds Win.

Battery B Seconds turned back the West Ends Wednesday evening at the state armory by a score of 36 to 14 in a game that was marked by the brilliant passwork of the Battery five. ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

A Harsh Critic Of America

COPYRIGHT KEYSTONE VIEW CO. NEW YORK

Giovanni Papani, famous Italian author, who doesn't think much of America or Americans. He has raised quite a controversy by an alleged statement that America is the "land of the millionaire, of the nauseating Longfellow, of the degenerate Whitman and of the intolerable Washington." Although he has been invited here to lecture at Columbia University, many have protested against his coming here. His countrymen here, are especially "het up" because of this brutal criticism.

SPORT NOTES

The New York state boxing commission has withheld permission from Terry Martin, bantamweight of Providence, R. I., to engage in two bouts here within six days and he must cancel one. The commission ruled that at least eight days must intervene between feature bouts.

The Bermuda race committee announced today that the annual run from New London, Conn., to St. David's Head, Bermuda, would start June 21, the day after the annual Yale-Harvard crew race on the Thames.

Five more signed contracts bringing the total to date to 16, have been returned by members of the New York Giants, Secretary James J. Tierney announced today. They were from Lewis Wilson, Portsmouth outfielder; Joel Keel, Amherst pitcher; Kent Greenfield, Portsmouth pitcher; Moss Solomon, Columbus pitcher, and Walter James, semi-pro outfielder.

In its effort to avoid poor decisions by arbiters, the New York state boxing commission announced that in future the judges would be changed so that those who officiate in the preliminaries would be replaced for main bouts, thus preventing advance information of their identities.

Joe Cosgrove, outfielder of the champion Senators last year, will not manage the New Haven club for the coming season, according to an announcement made by George Weiss, president of the New Haven club.

According to the future plans of Jack Dempsey, he will engage in three more fights before retiring, after which he intends entering the real estate business. Wills, Gibbons and Firpo are the fighters he intends to meet.

Pat Duncan, left fielder of the Cincinnati Reds came to terms with the club management yesterday and signed a contract for the coming season. Only a brief conference preceded the reaching of an agreement.

AMERICAN LEGION MEMBERSHIP MAKING GREAT GAINS

Membership in the American Legion, throughout the state, is far ahead of what it ever has been in the history of the organization, according to a statement issued at Waterbury, by Captain E. P. Armstrong, state commander of the organization, formerly of Norwich. The Legion is this month conducting a membership drive, and according to state department officials, posts in all parts of the state are reporting 100 per cent. increases. Captain Armstrong, together with State Adjutant A. G. Parsons, has been devoting his entire time to Legion affairs. Captain Armstrong, a few days ago, obtained a leave of absence from his regular place of employment in Waterbury in order to devote his time to the American Legion.

HOPPE RETAINS WORLD'S BILLIARD TITLE BY BEATING JAKE SCHAEFER

Chicago, Jan. 23.—(By The A. P.)—Willie Hoppe of New York, by defeating young Jake Schaefer of San Francisco, 1,500 to 1,196, in a challenge match tonight retained his title as world's 18.2 balkline billiard champion. With but one exception Hoppe has had the championship since 1912.

The exception was in 1921 when Jake Schaefer won it from Hoppe only to lose it again a year later.

Hoppe drew three blanks, three of 500 points each night with an average of 27 40-54. His high run for the match was 182. Schaefer made 22 8-54 for an average and had 170 for high run.

Until the latter part of the match tonight both men played mediocre billiards. Schaefer had six blank innings, one of one point, one of two and one of three.

Hoppe drew three blanks, three of one each, two of two and one of there. Both men played a tight game and the low innings were due in part to bad leaves. However, not until toward the end of the game did either man show championship form.

Hoppe was challenged by Edouard Horemans, Belgian cue star who finished fourth in the tournament at New York last year. The champion accepted and will play Horemans within sixty days.

In the near future Hoppe and Schaefer will leave on an exhibition tour of about two months at the conclusion of which Hoppe will meet the Belgian.

BENCH WARRANT ISSUED FOR COLCHESTER MAN

Gilbert J. Murray of Colchester, was brought into the superior court here Wednesday afternoon on a bench warrant and was put to plea on the charge of manslaughter in causing the death of Mrs. Augusta Amidon of Hartford, when she was hit by an automobile driven by Murray at Colchester on Nov. 2, 1923. Deputy Sheriffs W. H. Casey and Manuel Martin served the warrant and brought the man to court about 2 o'clock.

He pleaded not guilty and the bond was set at $5,000 by Judge C. L. Avery and was provided by a friend of Mr. Murray. The case is not to be tried at this term of court.

Mr. Murray who runs a garage business was discharged at a justice hearing in Colchester but as that was not a court of final jurisdiction in such a case this did not free him from being presented in the superior court.

Judge Avery declared a recess after setting the bond for Mr. Murray and when court adjourned it was until the next morning at 10 o'clock, when Judge Aliyn L. Brown will preside at what is expected to be a brief session.

OFFER TO WORK OUT A NON-PARTISAN TAX BILL

Washington, Jan. 23.—The offer of republicans of the house ways and means committee to compromise with the democrats to work out a non-partisan tax bill remained unaccepted tonight by the democrats while the committee proceeded with consideration of the miscellaneous rates, using the Mellon plan as a basis.

Representative Garner, of Texas, speaking for the democrats in committee, said his party would not yield on the rates outlined in the democratic tax revision plan of which he is the author until the republicans had proposed definite terms of compromise.

Chairman Green of the committee, who made the offer for the republicans, indicated that while consideration of the new rates would be continued in full committee it was possible the majority members might decide upon a schedule among themselves, which could be adopted by majority vote in committee.

Side-tracking temporarily of the Mellon bill by the republicans came prior to the first consideration of the new tax rates by the whole committee. Mr. Green asked Mr. Garner if the democrats intended to support only their program for tax revision. At the suggestion of Representative Hull of Tennessee, who is chairman of the democratic national committee, Mr. Garner asked the chairman if the republicans intended to support in the whole the Mellon proposals.

The articles taken included a black leather suit case; a blue suit of clothes, brown overcoat and two silk shirts. Bachy left his room Tuesday morning at 5:45 o'clock to go to his work and upon his return at 5 p. m., he discovered his loss. Bachy was arrested Saturday night when he was caught in a raid on a black and tan resort at 11 Church street.

The Nameaug school was discovered with lights burning, and the entrance unfastened, late last night by Patrolman Clarence Wells. An inspection of the building did not reveal the presence of anyone, although the place had been occupied early in the night. The officer extinguished the lights, but he was unable to secure the entrance.

Ralph Clagnen, 43 Church street, reported to the police today that the automobile he was operating last Monday was in collision with an unidentified automobile on Pequot avenue and that both cars were damaged.

Questions poured into the Bulletin office today, addressed to Kara, exponent of the occult and who claims to be able to pierce the future and unfold the past. Questions came from this city in great number and from many outlying towns and villages. Besides some were from residents of R. D. routes.

Daily installments of Kara's replies will be published as long as he continues to furnish them. Forty-eight sealed queries were turned over to the alleged "Mystic" this morning. Answers to nine inquirers are published today.

Billy—There is no question in my mind that the party you speak of is as true to you as you can expect, under present existing conditions. You have no right to expect as much as you do since you are not free to do as you would like to.

F. E.—While you are subject to a general change of conditions in the near future, you will remain here quite indefinitely. The change that your husband is about to make, will be for the best. This will not seem possible until a little later in the year.

F. W. B.—If you will carry out your plans just as you have made them regarding the affair pertaining to your boy, you will never regret it. In fact when ever you follow your own judgment about anything, you never go wrong, but the moment you allow some one else to interfere with your plans you always regret it. You have very good judgment, but you lack confidence. That is what you must learn to overcome before your real success will come to you, after you have done this, success will come to you by leaps and bounds.

Mrs. L. H. S.—I fear the reason you have not been able to locate the party you speak of, by the name of G. B. R. is that you are looking for a party who has changed his name due to financial reverses, and left this country. I quite am sure he is very much alive and is living in South America. Had he met with an accident the authorities would have found papers on his person or premises, and his sister in Port Chester would have been notified. My best proof to you he is not dead is that he is silent. I am sure he is as anxious to see his people as his people are to see him. If ever he is straightened out he will write, despite the fact that it has been many years since he was heard of.

Mr. G. B.—You should expect some thing from other persons that you are able or willing to give yourself. You can not expect this woman to be any more to you than she is at the present time, since neither one of you are free to marry. She has a husband as you know, and you have your wife. Be careful, a man who breaks another man's home is subject to have the same thing done to him. If you can take her away from somebody else somebody else can take her away from you.

R. N.—I cannot truthfully tell you to change your position as I do not feel that it would benefit you in the least. I would suggest this, take a little vacation for awhile with the understanding that you can return to your position, and I am sure when you return you will be like a new person on a new job, and you will then be able to realize that it was only psychological with you. You will appreciate things that you can not put up with at the present time. It is your mental condition that causes this dissatisfaction, not the work.

J. E. D.—I am surprised at your question regarding your wife, especially since she is the mother of three beautiful children. I am afraid young man you have not been on the level is the reason you are suspicious of her, and you are afraid that things will come home to you with interest. If they do, that is just what you deserve, as you sow, so shall you reap. Under present existing conditions and unless you improve, I fear your wife is too good for you. You need watching more than she does.

H. R.—I am sorry to have to tell you, that you are at fault, and you should go to the party and admit this, I am sure you will be given an audience, and the friendship will be restored. You are the type of young lady who will ask for advice and very seldom follow it, that is the reason for all this trouble. I hope this experience will teach you the lesson so much needed to give the happiness you are entitled to.

L. E. G.—There is no question in my mind that the car was stolen by a professional thief, for that reason you stand little or no chance to recover same or the equivalent.

AT THE PALACE

For the last three days of the week the bill at the Palace is headed by the Dumas Belmont Revue a clever company of entertainers in an act entitled Syncopated Tunes and Twinkling Steps. It is said to be an exceptionally fast and clever act, with the latest and most popular song numbers. A welcome addition to the bill is The College City Four in excellent vocal numbers. They are very capable singers and offer an act a little out of the ordinary. A very clever pair of misses are the Crompton Sisters, rightly termed the dainty dancing duo. Leo Touse, the Eddie Cantor of Vaudeville is one who will please with his clever impersonation of the celebrated Cantor. Kara, the mystery man of India who made such a decided hit the first three days will be held over for the last half of the week. The feature picture is the photoplay version of one of the most thrilling of present-day mystery plays, "The Unknown Purple". This play, by Roland West, who personally directed the motion picture adaptation, was a sensational success on the New York stage, where it played for a solid year and afterwards for two seasons on the road in all principal cities.

Its themes may truthfully be called unusual. It revolves about a ray of purple light, the possession of which makes it possible for one holding its secret to become invisible to the human eye. While in writing his play, which is now also in published form, Roland West offered it as nothing more than entertainment of a different type, nevertheless it may be considered from a scientific viewpoint, as being a prediction of what may eventually be the world's greatest discovery—the power to make solid objects invisible to the human eye.

When the submarine, the aeroplane, wireless telegraphy, the radio, were first predicted those who spoke of them were derided; yet all these things have come to pass. Is it not possible, therefore, that this or some succeeding generation may discover a force, the controlling of which will make it possible for a human being to become invisible? Author-Director West has taken this mysterious force as the basis for "The Unknown Purple" and woven around it a theme which is gripping and thrilling. In the cast which portrays this story are Henry B. Walthal, Alice Lake, Stuart Holmes, Helen Ferguson, Ethel Grey Terry, James Morrison, Richard Wayne, Brinsley Shaw, Johnny Arthur, little Frankie Lee and Mike Donlin.

A special school children's matinee will be given Saturday morning at 10 o'clock when the first of the Chronicles of America will be shown the first being Columbus. A great many parties have already been made up and a capacity house is expected. The admission price 10c.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AT THE BREED

At the Breed last night, William Russell, Fox star, began a two day run in "Boston Blackie," adapted from a story by Jack Boyle. Husky, capable as an actor, Russell has been well cast in the title role. The story deals with prison reform, denouncing the sort of punishment practiced in some jails. There are numerous incidents that hold the spectators gripped by their dramatic tensity. Above everything else the human appeal of the film stood out and it is this element which, more than any other, makes a picture popular.

The production has a good share of romance centered about Eva Novak, whose performance was more than satisfactory. Those who want a pleasant evening of entertainment will find it in "Boston Blackie" at the Breed. What more could be asked?

Aided by the excellent support of Albert Roscoe, the noted Broadway leading man, Miss Mason succeeds in giving one of the finest performances of her long and varied career on the silver screen. The story which was written by George Scarborough, the well-known magazine writer, deals with the tribulations befalling the bride of a district attorney innocently forced through a sequence of circumstances to aid her father's former pal in an elaborate swindle. To save the name of her parent, now repentant for his ill-spent past, from the threatening blackmailer the heroine consents to participate in the crime. She is discovered and then comes the climax of the tale. How she is extricated from her plight offers a good evening's amusement.

Other pictures on the bill include a news and scenic.

AT THE BROADWAY

A complete change of program is at the Broadway Theatre starting today. The six acts of Keith Vaudeville have a wonderful variety that is hard to beat.

Tom Brown's Tip Tops is the feature with six people including Jessie Sherman in songs, dance, comedy, music.

Kelsey & Autumn offer a comedy skit. Kamplain and Bell present the comedy in "Manana Land". Harry Berry and Miss offer a novelty with Miss Theo Keith, America's sweetest cornet virtuoso.

Frank Farron is a dealer in laughs. The Three Rubes close the bill with a great act of comedy, song dance and acrobatics.

A murder mystery, a thrilling chase in speed-boats through a storm-lashed sea, a terrific fight with a gang of boot-leggers—these, and a hundred other thrills, are contrasted with engaging vistas of peace and quiet in a prosaic little village! Scenes of happy childhood in the little school, and scene of rustic simplicity around the old blacksmith shop and the general store. And through it all there runs a beautiful love theme. These are the ingredients of "The Little Red Schoolhouse," a new Arrow production which features Martha Mansfield, E. K. Lincoln, Sheldon Lewis, Edmund Breese Paul Everton and Harlan Knight. It comes to this theatre starting today.

AT THE STRAND

Boyish hero worship taught Bat Shugrue that a man to remain a man must live up to the ideals that his work creates.

At heart he was a crook. But he was a professional baseball player and the crack hitter of the league. His name had a magic effect on every kid who followed the game, and wherever Bat appeared he was the favorite of the day.

Tangible evidence of this hero worship on the part of the hundreds of boys was brought closely home to Bat when the story of his life was written by a sports reporter for a newspaper syndicate.

Rockcliffe Fellowes, who plays the role of Bat Shugrue in "Trifling With Honor" the Universal-Jewel production which opens its engagement at the Strand theatre today, is well cast as the crook who rebuilt his character to be in reality the hero that he was in the minds of the boys who worshipped him.

As the "kid" in this picture, Buddy Messinger portrays just that type of youth—the real American kid, who might live on Main street, anywhere from New Jersey to Oregon. His is a leading role in the picture, and he play sit with a naturalness that stamps him as one of the real juvenile artists of the screen. Others in the cast are Fritzi Ridgeway, Hayden Stevenson of "The Leather Pushers," fame Emmet King, William Welsh, Frederick Stanton and Robert Daly.

Short subjects include a comedy and news.

Public Health Nurses' Visiting Costing More

The department of public health nursing, after going carefully over the past year's operating expenses, found that operating costs had so advanced that it was necessary to increase the price of the regular nursing visit.

The cost of the nursing visit up to the present time has been sixty cents. Now it will be seventy-five cents. All patients, except those for whom The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company pays, are expected to meet the expense of the nurse's services, or as much of the cost as they are able. Usually the nurse can best determine the amount a patient unable to meet the full price can pay, as she is in a position to know the financial status of the family.

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

New York, Jn. 23.—Irregular price movements continued throughout today's market but the main trend was upward in reflection of a series of favorable trade developments. High priced specialities were again the center of speculative interest. Sales ran over the million share mark for the first time since last Thursday.

Buying of stocks was influenced by the decision of a special master declaring the New York state $1 gas law unconstitutional, higher copper prices, another series of crude oil and gasoline advance, publication of weekly trade reviews reporting an increasing demand for steel and predictions of higher sugar prices and a resumption of dividends by some of the important companies.

Consolidated Gas was heavily bought on the announcement of the master's decision, the stock jumping from a low of 63 1-4 to 67 3-4 and closing at 65 7-8 for a net gain of 2 1-8 on the day. Brooklyn Union Gas closed 1 3-4 higher at 126 3-4 and moderate improvement also was noted in most of the out of town public utilities.

Mariand Oil was in good demand in anticipation of the stockholder's approval of the sale of a block of treasury stock at their meeting in Wilmington, Del., tomorrow. The stock crossed 39 and then eased to 38 1-8 where it was up 1 1-8 on the day. Pan-American B showed a loss of 1 3-8 on the day but the A stock and Sinclair were only fractionally lower.

Corn Products was again the feature of the specialty list, touching a record breaking price of 174 7-8 and closing slightly below that figure for a net gain of 5 points. Special buying in United Fruit, which carried that stock up more than four points to 189, was said to have been based on expectation of a favorable earning report. General Electric which has been mounting to new high records almost daily fell back nearly two points today to 212 1-4. Strength of United States Industrial Alcohol which closed nearly 3 1-2 points higher at 74 3-4 was attributed to rumors of an early consumption of dividend payments at the $6 rate.

Anouncement of wage increases for certain classes of New York Central employes had a somewhat depressing effect on the railroad shares, most of which showed fractional recessions. Special strength was shown, however, by Pittsburgh and West Virginia, which closed more than a point higher at 43 1-4. Lehigh Valley one of the recent strong spots, dropped more than a point on profit-taking.

Call money ruled unchanged at four per cent. the time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with no change in rates.

Foreign exchanges were again reactionary. Demand sterling dropped more than a cent to $4.21 1-2 and French francs again dropped below 4.50 cents. Shifting of capital from London and Paris to New York, was the only explanation obtainable here for the renewed heaviness of European currencies.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 23.—Pronounced strength of liberty bonds with prices of several issues reaching new high levels for the year. An advance in local gas company bonds following the decision declaring the $1 gas rate confiscatory and continued improvement in the traction issues carried the general price trend of bonds upward today despite speculative selling of oil company liens on prospects of naval lease cancellations.

With the exception of the liberty firsts 3 1-2s and the treasury notes, all government issues made substantial gains. The advance was accomplished with little if any British buying, but the rise was attributed partially to reports that the federal reserve card would buy large blocks of these bonds. Withdrawals of British buying also was seen in other sections of the market, the change in ministry apparently having been discontinued in last week's trading.

The price movement in the railroad issues was mixed with St. Paul bonds giving evidence of steadying after their recent decline. gains were recorded by the New Haven issues with the exception of the Franc's7s which yielded 1 1-4 points.

Favorable trade reports sent industrial issues to higher ground with advances in Anaconda and other copper bonds and abligtions of the Wrner, Punta Alegre and American Sugar companies.

Award of the $50,000,000 Canadian National Railways loan to a Canadian syndicate was sid to mean that none of the bonds would be sold here. The issue of thirty yer 5s was sold for 97.812. Canadian funds, and will be payable in Ottawa, Toronto and Montrel.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Corn rose briskly today to a new high price record for the season, and lifted oats also to a fresh top record. Scarcity of offerings together with speculative buying of corn was chiefly responsible. Wheat sympathized, but only in a slight transient way, closing unsettled at 1-8c lower to a shade higher, May 1.08 7-8 to 1.09 and July 1.07 1-4 a 3-8 to 1.07 3-8. Corn finished 1-4 to 7-8c up. Oats at 1-8c to 5-8c gain, and provisions unchanged to 40c down.

Corn showed an upward tendency almost from the outset, but the advance began in earnest about the middle of the board of trade session. At that stage, brokers who usually act for a big trader here took to the buying side of the market. Previously the surplus in the pit had been absorbed by commission houses, and as a result the market temporarily was bare of sellers. On the ensuing advance, May went to 80 3-8 a 1-2, a jump of more than a cent a bushel above yesterday's finish. Then, heavy profit taking sales set in and a lively reaction took place, but considerable of the gain was still held as the day came to an end.

Country offerings of corn were said to have increased a little after the bulge in prices. In the aggregate however the amount of corn obtained by Chicago handlers was relatively small. Reports that resellers were offering corn cheaper in the east failed to have any apparent influence on the market here.

Throughout the day, wheat lagged owing to lower quotations at Liverpool nd to slackness of domestic milling demand. Besides the banking situation in the northwest was a bearish factor.

Less active foreign demand had some depressing influence on the provision market.

CURB MARKET

New York, Jan. 23.—Speculative buying in today's irregular curb market shifted to the industrial list which developed several strong spots. Glen Alden coal was the individual feature being pushed up nearly four points to 85 1-2 a new high record. On unconfirmed rumors that the stock would soon be placed on a six dollar dividend basis. It closed at 84 3-4.

New high records also were established by Bridgeport Machinery at 11 3-4 buying of all three being influenced by reports of higher earnings. Brooklyn City railroad touched 14, its highest price in more than two years. Gillette Razor dropped about two points on profit taking the turn over being small. Lehigh Valley "rights" and coal certificates were heavy. Ford motors of Canada jumped 7 points to 488.

Oils were reactionary. Standard oil of Nebraska dropping five points. Prairie oil and gas three, and Magnolia, Pen-Mex, Fuel and imperial of Canada a point or more.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. —(Adv.)

Effective February 10, the Token Rate of Fare on Connecticut Company Lines will be 3 for 25c

The Trend of Trolley Costs and Revenues:

NOVEMBER, 1920, TO MARCH, 1922	MARCH, 1922, TO APRIL, 1923	APRIL, 1923, TO JANUARY, 1924
REVENUES UPWARD — Because of 10c Fare	REVENUES UPWARD — Because of Increased Riding	REVENUES DOWNWARD — Additional Riding Did Not Equal Fare Reduction of April
COSTS DOWNWARD — Because of Economies in Operation	COSTS DOWNWARD — Because of Wage Reductions	COSTS UPWARD — Wage Rate Increases Necessary in June
RESULT: MARCH, 1922 FARE REDUCED TOKENS 3 FOR 25c	RESULT: APRIL 1, 1923 TOKEN FARE REDUCED 2 FOR 15c	RESULT: NECESSARY ON FEB. 10 TO READJUST TOKEN FARE TO 3 FOR 25c

In all lines of business, when costs rise, prices must rise to meet them. This fundamental rule is no different when trolley operation is considered. When costs show a downward trend, prices ought to be downward, and vice versa.

In March, 1922, the Connecticut Company made a voluntary reduction in the then exisiting 10 cent fare to three tokens for 25c, a reduction of about 16⅔%. This was done as the trend of revenues was upward, because of the 10c fare and because of relief from unrestricted jitney competition. The trend of costs was downward.

Again in April, 1923, a voluntary reduction in token rate was made, two tokens being sold for 15c. This was a reduction of 10% over the previous rate, and was made because increased riding had kept the trend of revenues upward, and wage reductions and other economies in operation had kept the trend of costs downward.

This reduction has resulted in a steady downward trend of revenues, because, while riding has increased under the 2 for 15c rate, the increase has not been sufficient to offset the 10% reduction. In addition, wage rate increases to employees were necessary in June, adding over $750,000 a year to payroll costs. The trend of costs is decidedly upward.

From June (the date of the wage increase) to December 31, 1923, the decrease in revenue compared with the same period of 1922 was $197,000 or 2%. If the decrease in revenue by months is considered, the trend is readily preceived. The loss in revenue for the month of November, 1923, compared with November, 1922, was $41,000, or 4%, and the loss for the month of December, 1923, over December, 1922, was $86,500 or 7%.

The loss in revenue during December, as compared with December, 1922, was $2,800 per day. The increase in payroll costs was $2,150 per day.

The decrease in token rates of last April, and the increase in payroll costs from last June, have resulted in a decrease in the net revenue of the company, from June 1st to December 31st, of $585,000, or at the rate of one million dollars a year.

As more passengers were carried in 1923 than in 1922, it is undesirable to economize any further by reduction in street car service.

In addition to the above figures, the Connecticut Company still owes the State of Connecticut about $800,000 in back taxes. At the termination of the war period, this figure was $1,800,000, but since June, 1922, slightly over a million dollars has been paid to the state on this long overdue account, as well as over $840,000 paid in current taxes since that date.

It is generally assumed that the financial condition of the Company has benefited by the recent mild weather conditions.

The opposite is the fact.

On account of the small number of automobiles in service last winter, the increased riding on the trolleys produced $100,000 more than the cost to keep the tracks clean.

The figures are presented to you so that you may know all the facts which make necessary a readjustment of token fares at this time. The increase over the present rate is exactly 5/6 of a cent. When prices fluctuate in other lines of business, the differences in costs usually amount to considerably more than this. The Company does not desire to lower the present standard of service to its riding public. But it asks the consideration of its patrons of the fact that when revenues decrease and costs increase, a change in price, or rate of fare, is imperative, if service is not to be seriously impaired — exactly the same as in every other business helping to produce necessary commodities.

— THE CONNECTICUT COMPANY.

WESTERLY

Fire breaking out in the undergrowth and long dead grass a half mile south of the Potter Hill river bridge along the bank of the Pawcatuck river, Wednesday morning, about 10 o'clock, was fanned by the strong south and west wind. As many men as could be spared were sent from the mill of the Pawcatuck Woolen company and fought the rapidly spreading blaze, under the direction of Constable Perrin. Julian Crandall, of Ashaway, brought more men from the Ashaway Line and Twine plant at that place, their combined efforts preventing the spread in places where property was endangered. The rush of flame was checked when the highway was reached and its crossing was prevented by the hard work of the men. The loss from fire was slight.

Workmen in spite of the high wind of the past few days have continued to lay the tile roof on the south pitch of the roof of the new Washington Trust building, corner of Main and Broad streets. The colored tile stacked on the Broad street sidewalk is raised to the roof where it is secured in place. Men are now occupied in painting the colored stencil patterns between the projecting rafters, in panels, on the underside of the overhang of the roof. The Broad street side having been completed, the painters are now employed at the rear of the building. On the top floor of the structure, the partition walls of the numerous offices are nearly completed. A spiral iron staircase with 92 steps, next to the elevator well on the Dixon House side of the building, is now used by the workmen in going to the roof.

A remarkable new discovery of German Chemistry for the relief of rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia is astonishing the medical world. This marvelous oil seems to kill rheumatic pains just as effectively as these other German pain killers—Novocain for painless dentistry and Aspirin for headache pains.

Rheumatism is very many cases is due to internal abscesses, such as a blind pus pocket in a tooth which gives off poisons and which are carried in the blood to the joints and muscles. This new German oil when applied to the affected parts, seems to quickly penetrate and be absorbed by the body tissue. Even in the most severe and stubborn cases almost instant relief has been obtained.

Note: The oil referred to above is known in this country as Buhler Oil. At the present time, following druggists report that they have secured a limited quantity of Buhler Oil for distribution in this city. So remarkable have been the results from the use of Buhler Oil that these druggists are giving their customers a written guarantee to refund the price in full to any purchaser of Buhler Oil who fails to get immediate relief. On sale at Lee & Osgood Co., Andrew McLaughlin, J. A. Morgan, G. G. Engler, George M. Rathbone.

MORE BIRTHS, DEATHS, MARRIAGES IN NORWICH IN 1923 THAN YEAR BEFORE

The annual summary of vital statistics made at the office of Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook shows that Norwich had more births, deaths and marriages in 1923 than in the year before. If births and deaths were the only measure of population changes, these would show a net gain in population for the year of 396 as the births exceeded the deaths by that number. In 1922 the births exceeded the deaths by 279.

The 795 births in the town in 1923 were 35 more than in the year before, the 283 marriages exceeded the 1922 mark by 3, and the deaths, which numbered 502, were 18 more than in 1923.

September was the banner month for babies as there were 93 new citizens placed on the records in the 30 days of that month. October took the wedding crown from June in the past year through having 42 marriages performed which was one more than in June. March is completely in disfavor for weddings as only seven took place in that month. Between May and September inclusive was the healthiest period of the year, as the fewest deaths occurred in those months. December leads in the number of deaths with 53 and January is close up with 48.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR MISS RIVY ROSENBURG

A number of friends of Miss Rivy Rosenburg gave her a surprise party Wednesday evening at her home on Greene avenue in honor of her birthday. The surprise party was planned by Mrs. M. Levine and she acted as chaperone for the evening, being assisted by Mrs. Rosenburg and Mrs. Thune.

Games were enjoyed and several musical numbers were rendered by guests. Later in the evening the guests were invited to the prettily decorated dining room where covers were laid for seventeen. Dancing followed refreshments.

PRESIDENT OF LIONS SPEAKS TO ROTARIANS

With a large number of members in attendance the noonday luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club was held on Wednesday at the Wauregan hotel. The club was visited by District Governor George H. Cooper of Pittsfield, Mass., who in a brief talk complimented the club on its activities, saying that if all the clubs in the district had the spirit that is shown by the Norwich club they could set the North river afire.

Rotary is the biggest organization of its kind in the world, he said, having 1400 clubs made up of business and professional men who are making great strides along the line of unselfish work. The thing most needed in this period of the world's history is unselfishness. We need rest from selfishness, which has put off the day of international settlements. But we are nearing the dawn of a new day, when the test will be love of man and love of God.

President Charles A. Saxton presided at the business session and Frank P. Welch was song leader. Lionel Ethier was at the piano in the absence of the club pianist, Henry J. LaFontaine. There were the usual selections and one rendered by William G. Park assisted by the visiting Rotarians and guests. One of the club members who was recently blessed with a new daughter was duly acclaimed by the members of the club and responded with a very appropriate story. Grosvenor Ely invited the members of the club to attend and participate in the trap shooting match with the Danielson Rod and Gun club at the Norwich Golf club on Thursday afternoon. He also spoke of the activities of the business methods committee and read a short article on The Ten Commandments of Business.

A contribution of $50 from Robert O. Fletcher Post, American Legion, to the Dr. John S. Blackmar Fund for Boys Work was announced by Secretary J. Nelson Weymouth. Dr. Blackmar was the second commander of the post.

Secretary Weymouth also read the conditions of the proposed attendance contest between the Norwich club and the Meriden club which will be conducted through the coming three months. It was voted to agree to the terms of the contest, the prize for which will be a beefsteak dinner given by the losing club.

President Saxton called attention to the Grace Sage concert under the auspices of the Lions club which is for the benefit of the crippled children of the Newington Home. He urged that every Rotarian cooperate with the Lions to make this affair a success. He also urged support of the concert to be given by Miss Fearson under the auspices of the Norwich Music association.

George A. Finn, president of the Norwich Lions club, gave a very interesting talk on Lionism and what it means to the community. Mr. Finn said in part:

To the casual observer, perhaps, Lionism may have appeared as nothing but another luncheon club, organized to provide a feed for hungry business men who like to get together once a week and talk shop. But Lionism, like Rotary, has a larger significance and broader scope. Lionism is greater than the individual. The abstract idea, at least, is greater than any single person, and if clubs live up to it, they will perform the highest type of service in their own communities. Within three or four weeks' time we will receive our permanent charter from national headquarters—it will then be one of several hundred full-fledged clubs scattered throughout the United States and covering even other cities in English-speaking countries.

We of the Norwich Lions propose to take an active interest in every forward looking movement. "How can I serve the community through my business" is the objective held up to every member. In a common sense fashion the Lions stand ready courageously to face the forces that threaten institutions, philosophies and ideals that Americans hold dearest—to face them squarely, and thus find that they usually are slinking hyenas that are born of fear.

Lions clubs are non-political, non-sectarian organizations, composed of representative business and professional men, who feel an interest in the welfare and progress of their city and their community. Lionism promotes the principles of good government and good citizenship. Lionism takes an active interest in the civic, commercial, social and moral welfare of the community. Lionism unites its members in bonds of friendship, good fellowship and mutual understanding.

The primary object of Lionism is to further education, large social and civic opportunities, support the laws, direct public counsel and in every way make the lives of men better and happier.

The Lions stand for loyalty to country, community and home, individual integrity in thought, word and deed, one flag, one language, new ideals, new hopes, new ambitions in business and the professions, service that is founded on the Golden Rule.

As Lions, we are pledged to cooperate fully and heartily with all other clubs, the chamber of commerce, and other civic and community organizations in all movements which seek to promote any betterment, civic, industrial, educational, and any plans looking toward the elimination of class distinction.

Since the biggest asset of any nation is its people, one of the cardinal points of Lionism is the cultivation of a spirit of genuine brotherhood among men.

To be a true Lion requires that a man put his heart into the work of the organization.

Lionism implies courage, strength and activity. It implies fidelity to a person, a principle, a duty and a trust. Lionism is real, two-fisted, red-blooded patriotism. Lionism is friendship—and friendship is life. Good fellowship, from the standpoint of the individual, is absolutely negative until you make it positive. You and you alone can complete the circuit.

Therefore, the Lions are ardent devotees of the idea of the glad hand and the welcome smile. Good fellowship is the feature of their meetings. It's not the time for business discussion—it is the time and occasion for cementing bonds that should unite all true citizens in a common purpose. Men have the chance to get acquainted. Lionism opens the way to real friendship, good friendship, warm friendship. The members have the opportunity to talk man to man and plan and achieve for the betterment of the community.

And the weekly meetings cultivate a friendly spirit and appreciations of the highest possibilities of the other fellow.

The International Association of Lions Clubs stands for Americanism pure and simple. Its loyalty to the ideals of the forefathers is unquestioned. It is in thorough accord with progressive Americanism. The nation's safety is the greatest concern of the Lions, and the organization is absolutely hostile to anything and everything that in any way threatens the integrity of American ideals. Liberty and Intelligence are the two great cornerstones on which this patriotic edifice is builded.

PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT BY SINGER AND CHILD READER

The audience at the Community House Wednesday evening enjoyed a fine entertainment by Hartford talent, under the auspices of the Men's Club of Trinity Episcopal church, and a good sum of money was realized by the club to be used for charitable work.

The artists providing the entertainment were from the Clements Entertainment Bureau of Hartford, A. J. Clements, managing director, and their numbers included song and dance numbers, monologues and readings.

The feature numbers of the program were by Neil Paterson, Scotch songster and comedian, who with his varied numbers kept his audience in good humor. Possessed of a good voice strongly marked with Scottish accent, Mr. Paterson sang many of the old Highland numbers. In the role of a comedian he was also excellent and his jokes were original and to the point. Mr. Paterson also favored with several Bagpipe selections including everything from the weird Highland marches to the so called "National Athem" Bananas.

Perhaps the most unusual feature of the program was furnished by Olive Pamela Lamoy, reader. Although but twelve years of age Miss Lamoy has made many public appearances and as a reader has not many equals at her age. Miss Lamoy chose for her first number, Exhibition Day in Centerville, which afforded a fine opportunity for displaying her talent. Another reading that reached the hearts of her audience was the The Newsboy in Church, a touching piece which proved that in the heart of a boy, known to many as a newsboy, there was a soul clean and spotless.

The accompaniment for the vocal selections was by Mildred Arnold and her work at the piano aided greatly in making the numbers the successes they were.

The program was opened by an organ prelude played by Miss Annie Taft, organist of the church.

The committee in charge of the benefit entertainment comprised: A. P. Williams, chairman; George A. Finn, president; Rev. J. Eldred Brown, rector; S. Hussey Reed and Walter A. Gilbert.

PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING HAD BUSIEST YEAR

The busiest and the most helpful year in the public health nursing department of the United Workers was reported by the department superintendent, Miss Kate MacKenzie, at the annual meeting of the United Workers Tuesday evening:

The year 1923 has been the busiest years and one of the most profitable in the history of the public health nursing department. That the work of this department becomes better known in the community each year is shown by the increase in the number of cases referred and in the sources referring them.

Bedside nursing, the keystone of this department, since its beginning in 1887, continues to be a vitally important feature of the work. During the year 9,296 nursing visits were made, 384 obstetrical cases were given care, more than six times the number care for in 1916, the year in which the department was re-organized. More cases are being referred by the physicians each year; this closer cooperation is much appreciated and the physicians are never too busy to talk over their cases with the nurse.

Prenatal work is being done systematically throughout the town. This care is offered to every expectant mother in Norwich desiring it. The number given such care in 1923 fell far short of what is should have been. Until this number more nearly equals the number of babies born the goal set will not be reached.

Mr. Herbert Hoover, in his address before the opening session of the American Child Health Association, said: "The physical and moral well being of the nation marches forward on the feet of healthy children." It behooves us, therefore, to keep the well children well and restore to the ranks, as quickly as possible, the children that are not well. About 550 children under five years of age are visited monthly by the United Workers' nurses. Mothers are advised as to diet, clothing, exercise, and in the rules of the health game in general.

The Well Babies' conferences at Washington street, Yantic and Occum give an opportunity for exact weighing and measuring, as well as complete physical examinations at regular intervals. The Rock Nook children's clinic offers free medical advice to those needing it, each case being followed up by a nurse.

When one realizes that, according to Mr. Arnold Gesell, three-quarters of the deaf, many of the blind, one-half of the crippled and three-quarters of those suffering with speech defects, became afflicted before school age, is it not wise to put forth very intensive effort toward improvement of the mental and physical equipment of the child? The psychiatric clinic begun in 1923 has already proven its worth in the child hygiene work of our department.

During the past year 276 new children were enrolled in the conferences and clinic, 5,232 child hygiene calls were made.

The tuberculosis clinic, under the supervision of Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, is held weekly at No. 9 Washington street. Eighteen patients have been discharged to sanatoria. An endeavor is made to reach all contact cases, especially among the children, in order that the preventative work might be done at the most effective time.

Thirty-five cases of communicable diseases, such as diphtheria, measles, whooping cough and typhoid were either given nursing care or instructive visit. Until the rank and file feel the necessity for preventive measures, as for instance, vaccination against small-pox, innoculation against typhoid, immunization to diphtheria, etc., the public health nurse must carry on the slogan of "Prevention."

The supply committee has been kept busy, making in all 3,162 surgical dressings. These dressings have been sterilized at the Backus hospital, a service graciously given and much appreciated.

Volunteer service in the copying of birth certificates and in the typing of records has been given throughout the year by members of the nursing committee.

We are not satisfied with our accomplishments for 1923. Far from it, a beginning, only, has been made, but we are satisfied that it is the beginning of the most satisfying task one could possibly undertake.

Norwich Belt Company Noon Meeting

The weekly noon meeting Tuesday under Y. M. C. A. auspices at the Norwich Belt Company was held with a good attendance of the employees. The speaker, Edwin Hill announced as his topic "The Greatest Thing in the World"

Answers to this question, he said, would probably be just as many as the men of whom it was asked. In clusiuion he said that the greatest personification of the greatest thing in the world is found in Jesus Christ, who went all the way to Calvary for you and me. Let us believe that love is the greatest thing in the world; for nothing else will cure the ills of this old world; let us do our best to love those about us and so make the world what it should be.

AUTOMOBILE CAUGHT FIRE IN SCHWARTZ GARAGE

The fire department was called out twice Wednesday, the first call coming in at 11.58 o'clock when the automobile owned by Abner Schwarts caught fire. The car was in a garage off Perkins avenue and a man was working on it when it backfired. The damage was slight.

A second call was received at 12.22 o'clock as the apparatus was returning from the first fire. This was a small fire in the grass in the rear of Palmer street.

DISMISSES HIS CLAIM FOR WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

After a hearing to determine the period of disability in the workmen's compensation claim of Joseph Berniski of 388 North Main street, against the United States Finishing Co., Commissioner J. J. Donohue has disallowed and dismissed the claim.

From the evidence it was found that Berniski strained his back by lifting a roll of cloth onto a truck on June 20, 1923. Te reported the injury to the company nurse who sent him to a physician for treatment. Berniski was injured on a Wednesday, continued at his work the rest of the week and the following week and was laid off for lack of work in the third week. He resumed work again and with the Finishing company the week of July 28 and worked a full week and also worked 3 full days the next week, ending August 4, when he was laid off indefinitely for lack of work. He went to work for another company on Aug. 13 and continued there to Nov. 16. It is therefore found that the claimant has since his injury of June 20, 1923, been employed at all times except when laid off for lack of work.

By DAVID CORY

Seeking The Flower of Youth

Well, you remember that the fairy whistles were blowing just as we ended the last story.

Urging Dapple Gray forward, Little Jack Rabbit rode a little farther into the forest when all of a sudden, the Fairy Queen looked out of a big Jack-in-the-Pulpit Flower and said:

"Little Jack Rabbit, where have you been
All this long time, I pray,
And where are you going upon your good horse,
Tramping the woodland way?"

"I am seeking adventure, your Highness," answered the bunny boy doffing his plumed hat.

"I have a message for you," went on the Fairy Queen. "The little Fresh Water Crab has swam all the way from the Bubbling Brook to say that your Uncle Lucky is getting very old. But I know of a wonderful flower, the Flower of Youth. You must find it and take it to dear Uncle Lucky. It will make him young and strong!"

"Hop off your horse and sit by me," answered the fairy queen. "You are so high up in the air, atop your pony that I must shout with all my voice."

When the little rabbit was seated by her side, the fairy queen explained that he must follow the path through the forest until he reaches a big stone cross. "There wait until a little star is reflected in the pool of water that lies near the great stone cross."

Again mounting Dapple Gray, the little bunny boy set out in quest of the Flower of Youth. By and by after a while, as he rode down the forest path, a tiny voice whispered:

"Make haste, make haste, little rabbit boy,
The big horned owl is flying on high.
He may cross your path on his noiseless wings
To throw sleep sand in your pony's eye."

Dear me! On hearing this, Dapple Gray broke into a gallop, and pretty soon the great stone cross came into sight. Just as they reached it, a great owl threw a handful of sand at the little pony who closed his eyes just in time, the sand bounding back off his forehead and falling into a little ant house, sending all the ants to sleep for a week and a day.

"Well, here we are, safe and sound," sighed the brave little horse, halting beside the stone cross. "That wicked owl only threw away his sleep sand, although I believe a little grain dropped into my left ear.

And while the little rabbit is waiting and Dapple Gray is drinking from the spring, I will write the next story.

ANDERSON TESTIFIED UTTER STRANGER GAVE HIM $25,000

"Because He Liked My Kind of a Darn Fool—" The Donor, John T. King, Address Unknown, Simply Could Not Tolerate Mr. Anderson Working for a Paltry $4,000 a Year—Offered Witness a Job With $10,000 Salary—Witness Doesn't Know Whether King is Alive or Dead—Such is the Explanation Mr. Anderson Gives of How He Acquired $25,000 Which He Claims To Have Loaned the Anti-Saloon League.

New York, Jan. 24.—William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, today told a strange tale of the manner in which he acquired approximately $25,000 which he claims to have loaned to the organization of which he is an official.

The story was reluctantly unfolded at the direction of Supreme Court Justice Tompkins and under the persistent hammering of Assistant District Attorney Pecora, who is prosecuting the league head on an indictment charging forgery in the third degree.

The strange recital, involving the gift of a comparative stranger, who, Anderson said, provided the small fortune because he "liked his kind of a darn fool," was made with Anderson on the stand in his own defense, after he had made a categorical denial of the state's accusations against him.

"John T. King," address unknown, was the identification given by Anderson of his mysterious benefactor. The stranger, he said, introduced himself in the Baltimore offices of the Anti-Saloon league of Maryland late in 1912. After a futile attempt to induce him to "take a job guaranteeing him $10,000 a year," Anderson told the jury in an even voice, "King," because "He liked my kind of a darn fool and believed in the prohibition cause," invested his own money for the league head's account and accumulated the tidy fortune for him.

A tense silence held the court room throughout the recital, and not until Pecora had obtained from the witness the admission that he did not now whether "King" now was alive or dead did the tension break. First a giggle was heard, and then handclapping started, but the demonstration was cut short by the court's pounding gavel and the vigilant court attendants.

The "King" testimony provided the climax for the day—a climax that capped several smaller ones provided by three other defense witnesses who paved the way for the appearance of the defendant. Under the questioning of his chief counsel, Former Governor Whitman, Anderson told of his prohibition activities of the past twenty-five years.

After practicing law for a time following his graduation from the University of Michigan, he said he began his long service in the "dry" cause in Springfield, Illinois, later going to Buffalo and still later to Baltimore, where he was state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland. It was on January 1, 1914, that he took his present office.

Interrupted in a detailed recital of the functions and activities of the New York league by Pe'Piora's objection, he told of the relations with O. Bertsall Phillips, league fund solicitor, whose accusations form the basis of forgery indictment upon which Anderson now is being tried.

It was before Anderson had engaged him, Phillips previously had testified, that the league head told him he must "split" his commissions on collections when they exceeded $10,000 in any one year. Anderson contradicted this flatly, declaring nothing was said of "split" commissions until June, 1918, at which time Phillips himself proposed that he give his superior a part of his earnings.

Anderson's Version of Transfer.

"He returned to me after we had had a conference one morning," Anderson testified, "and said he thought it only fair that I take half of his earnings above $10,000 a year, because I assisted him greatly in getting subscriptions. I told him I would think it over."

He thought it over, he said, and agreed that Phillips' proposal was "only justice to me," and for three consecutive years the two shared half of all commissions in excess of $10,000 paid annually to Phillips. Anderson then denied he had told Phillips he preferred to make a certain contract with him "in order to fool the Rockefellers," and added that he had never attempted "to fool anybody."

Speaking of the $4,400 which he is alleged to have ordered transferred in the league books from Phillips' salary account to Phillips' expense account, Anderson declared he had agreed to the transfer in justice to the collector, because the money represented the "split" commissions paid to the league head for the year 1920.

Asked why he had ordered the item transferred to Phillips' expense account, Anderson replied that he considered it belonged there in view of the fact that the collector was giving him compensation for assistance in inducing persons to subscribe to the league funds.

"I paid the money I received from Phillips to the league," he added.

Cross-Examination.

During cross examination, Pecora literally hurled his questions at the witness' head, and Anderson replied in sharp, crisp tones, admitting that John D. Rockefeller and his son had contributed to the league approximately $75,000 a year for three years orafter Phillips became its fund solicitor. Before that, he said, the elder Rockefeller only contributed $5,000 a year.

Pecora, reminding the witness that he had testified he turned over the commissions received from Phillips to the league, obtained from him the admission that he deposited the commission checks to his personal account. He was asked by Justice Tompkins to explain this procedure.

"I did so because the league owed me some money and I saw an opportunity to save it money by banking my shares of the commissions," he replied.

"How much did the league owe you?" Pecora asked.

"Was it $24,700?"

"It was."

This sum is the amount involved in indictments pending against Anderson in which extortion and grand larceny are charged. He claimed to have advanced it to the league in purchasing publicity for the furtherance of the cause of prohibition.

"Where did you get the money?" Pecora asked.

"And who was the friend?"

Anderson appealed to Justice Tompkins.

"Your honor," he pleaded, "it would be a violation of personal confidence to reveal the name of that man."

Whitman was on his feet asking the court's attention with upraised arm. The spectators strained forward in anticipation. Court attendants who before had been wandering aimlessly about, came to a standstill.

Whitman added his objection.

Ruled Against Anderson.

Justice Tompkins ruled that Anderson must give the name, and the witness, after attempting to voice another protest, said:

"This friend told me when I met him in Baltimore in the latter part of 1912 that his name was John T. King. He introduced himself to me in my office—the office of the Anti-Saloon league of Maryland."

There followed a question-and-answer duel between Anderson and Pecora, in which the prosecutor sought intimate details of the man named by the witness. Anderson said he had not seen "King" since early in 1914; he said "King" had told him he lived in New York, but he did not recall the address; he had said he was in the business of "promotion and real estate development," and had connections in Baltimore, but he did not wish me to call there, as he was favorable to the prohibition cause, but his business associates were not."

"He was about 45 years old, of medium height, or less, and had a close-cropped dark moustache and hair," the witness said.

"Do you know whether or not this man is alive or dead?" Pecora asked.

"I do not," was the reply.

"Was he ever alive?" demanded the prosecutor.

Whitman objected as the spectators laughed, and the question went unanswered.

"Do you want this jury to believe that an utter stranger gave you about $25,000, asking and receiving no receipts, during 1913, and dropped from sight at the end of 1913?" Pecora asked.

"That's what it amounts to," Anderson replied.

"Why did he give you this money?" Justice Thompkins interpolated.

Told Anderson He Was a Darn Fool.

"Well," replied the witness, "he told me I was a darn fool to be working for $4,000 a year when I could get much more in some other business. He offered me a job with him—a job of promotion and real estate development in various parts of the country—guaranteeing me $10,000 a year and saying I could share in the profits of the business and make at least $25,000 a year. I refused, saying I preferred to work for the Anti-Saloon league.

"Later, he told me he liked my kind of a darn fool. 'I want to make money for you,' he told me. 'I don't want you to think I'm a grafter, so I'll invest my own for you and you can have the profits.' In a week or so he came into the office and handed me a $1,000 bill, saying he had made it for me and telling me I could either take that sum or let him reinvest it for me. I let him reinvest it, and he came to my office several times with different amounts, varying from several hundred to two and three thousand, and I placed it all in my office safe."

Court was adjourned at this point, and Pecora announced he would continue his cross examination for several hours tomorrow.

The three other defense witnesses —Bertram H. Fancher, vice president of the Fifth Avenue bank and league treasurer; William F. McLaughlin, accountant, who scrutinized the league's books, and Miss Maud O'Dell, for twenty years an employe of the Anti-Saloon league, at all times in connection with Anderson—were mainly concerned with testimony of a technical nature.

They explained the nature of the ledger and journal entries made at Anderson's direction, in which the $4,400 of 1920 commissions were charged to Phillips' expense account. Miss O'Dell also told of a conversation in which Phillips offered to "split" his commissions with Anderson in 1918, testimony which later was corroborated by the defendant.

MUNSEY TO CONSOLIDATE N. Y. TELEGRAM AND MAIL

New York, Jan. 24.—Announcement was made tonight that Frank A. Munsey, proprietor of the New York Herald, The Sun and Globe, and the Evening Telegram, had purchased the Evening Mail and would consolidate it with the Evening Telegram.

The purchase was made yesterday, Mr. Munsey said. The consolidated newspaper, which will be called The Telegram and Evening Mail, will appear Monday.

The Evening Mail was founded in 1865. Ten years later it was combined as The Mail and Express with The Express which had been founded in 1836 by The Brooks Brothers of Portland, Me. Later the earlier name was resumed.

Mr. Munsey entered the New York newspaper field more than two decades ago with the purchase of The Daily News which later abandoned publication. In 1912, he bought the New York Press which he consolidated with The Sun which he bought with The Evening Sun in 1916.

His next purchase brought him The New York Herald and The Telegram. He consolidated The Sun with the New York Herald, using the latter name and changing the Evening Sun to The Sun. Several months ago he acquired The Globe and consolidated it with The Sun.

Purchase of The Mail leaves but three other English Evening newspapers outside Mr. Munsey's group—The Journal, The Evening World and The Post, the last of which was purchased less than a month ago by Cyrus H. K. Curtis of Philadelphia.

Warships Recalled From Tampico, Mex.

Rebel Leaders Have "Definately and Absolutely" Abandoned the Proposed Blockade.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Orders for the withdrawal of the American cruiser Richmond from Tampico, Mexico, were despatched today by the navy department and it was announced that as soon as salvage work on the wrecked cruiser Tacoma is completed, the cruiser Omaha and six American destroyers at Vera Cruz also will be recalled from those waters.

Decision to withdraw the Richmond was reached at the state department after advices were received from Consul Wood at Vera Cruz saying that the Mexican rebel leaders had "definitely and absolutely" abandoned the proposed blockade of Tampico

TENSION OVER MEXICAN SITUATION HAS RELAXED

Washington, Jan. 24.—Tension over the Mexican situation appeared to have been completely relaxed today when the state department announced that American war vessels ordered to Vera Cruz and Tampico were already in process of being withdrawn from Mexican waters since the rebel leaders had abandoned their attempted blockade of Tampico and had ordered mines removed from the harbors under their control.

With this compliance with the demands of the Washington government; the De La Huerta leaders have withdrawn all threats against the continued movement of peaceful American commerce, and the occasion for sending the ships has passed.

Unless American lives and property should again be jeopardized it is unlikely that the Washington government will take any further action than to continue to make sales of war munitions to Obregon. Secretary Weeks approved today the sale of an odd-lot of spare parts for airplanes and a number of bombs.

Consul Wood reported from Vera Cruz today that De La Huerta had ordered that ample guarantees be extended for protection of American lives and property in the region about Tampico, and that the oil industry be permitted to resume operations. A message from Tampico later said the oil companies actually had been granted such permission.

PLANNING RELIEF FOR FARMERS OF NORTHWEST

Washington, Jan. 24.—Administration plans for relief of the northwestern agricultural situation as outlined yesterday by President Coolidge in a message to congress, will be developed at a general conference to be held before the end of next week, in which representatives of banks, business and transportation services will participate. Secretaries Hoover and Wallace have been called upon to suggest those to whom invitations should be sent to attend, in the attempt, it was said today, to "insure a gathering which will be able to do something besides debate."

Representation at the conference is planned to be national rather than sectional. Although bank failures in the grain growing territory have presented the most acute phase of the problem which the administration is endeavoring to meet, the pressure on the farmer is considered to have been transferred to the general western community in such degree that more than merely banking or credit measures will be necessary to affect a remedy.

Doheny Loaned A. B. Fall $100,000

Loan was a Year Prior to Tall Signing Contract for Lease of California Naval Oil Reserves.

Washington, Jan. 24—Albert B. Fall, while secretary of the interior, received a loan of $100,000 in cash on his personal note from E. L. Doheny, California oil magnate, Mr. Doheny testified today before the senate Teapot Dome investigating committee.

The date of the loan was given as November 30, 1921, or more than a year before Secretary Fall signed the contract leasing to Doheny interests the California naval oil reserves out of which committeemen reminded Mr. Doheny he has testified expects to make a profit of $100,000,000.

Mr. Doheny declared to the committee however, "that the loan had no relation to any of the subsequent transactions;" that it was made by him personally" and that "in connection with this loan there was no discussion between Mr. Fall and myself as to any contracts whatever."

"The transactions themselves in the orders which they occurred, Mr. Doheny said, "dispose of any contention that they were influenced by my making a personal loan to a lifelong friend."

The oil magnate testified that he had advanced the money to enable Mr. Fall to enlarge his New Mexico range holdings and that he had fully intended to collect the loan if Mr. Fall's health remained good and that, if necessary, he had planned to employ the former secretary to look after his Mexico holdings so as to enable him to repay the debt.

Responding to questions on cross-examination, Mr. Doheny said the note sent him by Mr. Fall was unpaid; that it bore no interest rate, and that no interest had been paid on it. He said he had drawn a check for the $100,000 on a New York bank and that his son had taken the cash from New York to Washington, receiving in return the note, which he thought was in Mr. Fall's hand writing.

The witness was unable to produce either the note or the check, although he said he had conducted a search for them before leaving Los Angeles. He declared they were not lost and possibly were in New York. He was accused after three hours on the witness stand with the understanding that he would endeavor to find the check and note for the committee.

Mr. Fall declared in his statement to the committee that he had obtained the $100,000 used in enlarging his ranch from Edward B. McLean, the Washington newspaper publisher. Mr. McLean telegraphed the committee from Florida to the same effect. But they examined at Palm Beach, later by Senator Walsh, democrat, of Montana, he testified that he had given Mr. Fall checks for $100,000, but that they had been returned to him uncashed.

Mr. Fall arrived in Washington late tonight from New Orleans. He was to have been examined tomorrow, but he telegraphed the committee in advance of his arrival that his physical condition would not permit of his appearance at the time set and the committee agreed to defer his examination until Monday.

Tomorrow, however the committee will hear J. W. Zevely, personal friend and attorney of Harry F. Sinclair, whose interests acquired the lease of the naval oil reserve in Teapot Dome, Wyo., which, until today, had been an outstanding point in the long investigation of naval oil reserve leases signed by the former interior secretary.

TAXES LEADING ISSUE NOW BEFORE CONGRESS

Washington, Jan. 24.—A new bombshell explosion in the Teapot Dome inquiry drowned out today the whirr of the machinery of legislation in congress. E. L. Doheny, the California oil magnate, whose interests hold a naval oil lease in California, all but took away the breath of the Teapot investigating committee by a sudden disclosure that it was he who loaned Interior Secretary Fall the mysterious $100,000 in 1921.

At the same time, with little debate and by unanimous agreement the Caraway resolution for cancellation of the Teapot lease was taken out of committee and will be debated on the senate floor tomorrow.

Of all the other issues before the country, taxes alone commanded extensive attention in the proceedings of senate and house. The Mellon plan was attacked by democrats and defended by republicans but neither the senate debate nor that in the house appeared to have advanced the subject materially toward the realm of accomplishment.

BRITAIN TO RESUME FULL RELATIONS WITH RUSSIA

James O'Grady, Labor Member of Parliament, Has Accepted an Offer of the Ambassadorship to Russia—Premier Ramsay MacDonald Has Completed All Important Posts of His Government—The New Prime Minister is Working on His Legislative Program for His First Session of Parliament.

London, Jan. 24. —(By the A. P.)—The new labor government is to institute full diplomatic relations with soviet Russia. It was learned tonight that James O'Grady, labor member of parliament for the southeast division of Leeds, has accepted an offer of the ambassadorship to Russia.

Despatches from Leeds say that the communication to the secretary of the South Leeds party respecting the acceptance of the ambassadorship was from Mr. O'Grady himself.

HOW THE NEW LABOR GOVT IS PROGRESSING

London, Jan. 24.—(By the A. P.)—With the appointment of Frank Hodges, secretary of the miners' federation, as civil lord of the admiralty, Harry Gosling, president of the National Transport Workers' association, as minister of transport, Ramsay MacDonald has completed the important posts of his government. There are still several offices to fill, but they are of less importance from an administrative viewpoint.

Much comment has been aroused at the celerity and smoothness with which everything has been achieved, and although most of the members of the new administration are inexperienced, it must be remembered that quite a number, like Viscount Chelmsford, Lord Parmoor, John R. Clynes and Arthur Henderson, have been in previous industries. Many of the others, like Sidney Webb, have been engaged for years in drafting legislative proposals and in other administrative work behind the scenes, giving them ample acquaintance with departmental work, and this intimate knowledge has been invaluable to their colleagues.

The new ministers are showing a great deal of promptness in getting acquainted with their duties and seem disposed to introduce a new spirit of punctuality and energy into the rather casual methods of many of the departments.

Another great help to the ministers and a sign that nothing extremely revolutionary in administrative practices is contemplated comes in the names of the men chosen by the ministers as their private secretaries. For instance, Premier MacDonald has already appointed among his secretaries two, Sir Ronald Waterhouse and Robert Gower, who filled similar position with the late Andrew Bonar Law, and a third, C. P. Duff, who was private secretary to Lloyd George.

It is interesting to note that Sydney Arnolds, who heretofore was among Mr. McDonald's secretaries and who is said to be a strong advocate of a capital levy, has been appointed under secretary for the colonies. The advent of the new government will cause many changes in the trade union world. It is a tradition of British politcs that on acceptance of office a minister should resign directorships in any profit making company. This tradition has been held to apply to the political secretaryships of the big trade unions, many of which are well pad postons.

In pursuance of the idea Miss Margaret Bondfield has resigned the chairmanship of the council of the Trade Union congress, Mr. Hodges, Mr. Thomas and the other heads of the big unions who joined the government taking a similar course. This sets the precedent that the ministers must give their undivided service to the government.

Premier MacDonald has still many departmental matters to settle, and evidently will require all the time at his disposal before parliament reassembles. Seats must be found for those members of the government like Arthur Henderson and Henry Slesser, who are still without them, while the statutary requirement of a certain number of ministers in the house of lords has not yet been met; hence the prime minister must create peerages.

While all these troublesome details require settling, the prime minister has also to prepare a legislative programme for his first session.

DEADLOCK REACHED IN BRITISH RAILWAY STRIKE

London, Jan. 24.—(By The A. P.)—A deadlock has been reached in the strike of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen the managers of the railways announced tonight that they would not reply to a letter sent them today by J. Bromley, secretary of the associated society, informing them that he regretted that the strike must continue.

There is a fundamental difference of principle between the associated society and the railway managers regarding the finding of the wages board, from which the managers refused to depart, although they assert that they would consider cases of individual hardship among the men the strike were called off.

It is said to be costing the associated society about £7,000 daily to pay the strikers.

It is asserted at the headquarters of the National Union of Railwaymen tonight that it had been learned from several provincial centers that many of the members of the union who had joined the strike had returned to work.

The next step to be taken in the strike will be action by the new labor minister, Tom Shaw, and the trades union congress mediating committee.

GOLD CURRENCY BANK DISCUSSED IN BERLIN

Berlin, Jan. 24.—(By The A. P.)—The prospective gold currency bank suggested by the experts' committee in Paris already is provoking lively discussion in bourse and banking circles here, although the advance comments are wholly based on cursory despatches from Paris which pretend to reflect the approving opinions of the British and American experts of the program outlined to them by Doctor Schacht, president of the reichsbank.

Pending the return of Dr. Schacht and the outcome of present conversations, Berlin official quarters declined to anticipate further progress in these deliberations, or to forecast the government's success in furthering the organization of the proposed new bank without aid. The latter aspect of Doctor Schacht's program moves several of the editorial writers to observe that the proposed foreign participation in the bank is a hopeful sign of returning confidence in Germany's credit, notwithstanding the danger that the presence of foreign capital and administrative authority suggest the surrender of German sovereignty and unrestricted freedom in connection with the control of the nation's finances.

Critics of the plans for the new bank, as now revealed, point out the desirability of having the institution located within Germany, and also demand that its directorate shall command a German majority in order to protect the nation's economic organization from undue foreign control or influence.

DEATH OF FORMER GRAND DUCHESS OF LUXEMBURG

Munich, Bavaria, Jan. 24.—(By The A. P.)—Former Grand Duchess Marie of Luxemburg died today in Hohenburg castle, at Lenggries, Bavaria. She was the reigning duchess of Luxemburg at the outbreak of the great war, and when the Germans demanded passage of their armies through Luxemburg, on the way to attack France, the grand duchess demurred, and in way of a formal protest drew her motor car across the street through which the German columns were about to pass.

Neither she nor the government of Luxemburg, however, attempted to oppose them forcibly, and the Germans quietly occupied Luxemburg, which was regarded by some of the allies as Germany's willing auxiliary.

Grand Duchess Marie abdicated in favor of her sister, Charlotte, the present grand duchess, in January, 1919, and then took the veil in September, 1920. Since then she had been a nun in a Carmelite convent.

MRS. PETER GERRY BUYS $40,000 STRING OF PEARLS

New York, Jan. 24.—A string of pearls brought to this country by Prince Felix Yousupoff, Russian nobleman, famed for his part in killing of Rasputin, the monk, has been sold to Mrs. Peter Gerry of Washington, wife of Senator Gerry, Rhode Island, for $40,000, it was reported today.

The transaction, it was said, was made through an international jewelry house in Fifth Avenue. Mrs. Gerry and some of her friends reported, wore the pearls at a social function last night.

The string, said to be the most perfectly matched in the world, was brought here in November by the Russian prince in a box of jewels valued at more than $1,000,000. In the group of gems, besides emeralds from the crown of the last czarina, was a number of extremely rare black pearls of great value.

Mrs. Gerry is well known in New York society, she was Miss Mathilde S. Townsend, of this city before her marriage. Members of the Gerry family belong to the Knickerbocker Riding and New York Yacht clubs in this city, as well as the Metropolitan and other clubs in Washington.

Louis Delorme of 82 Union street, this city, has been sued for $30,000 damages by Thomas Brondeau, Miss Mary Gorman and Mrs. Mary Gorman of New Britain. Deputy Sheriff Addison J. Greenslit of this city served the papers in the case Thursday. The plaintiffs are represented by a Hartford law firm. The cases are returnable before the Hartford county superior court, the first Tuesday in February.

The civil action is the result of an automobile collision between cars of Mrs. Gorman and Mrs. Delorme, October 28 last, at the function of Walnut and Main streets. The Gorman machine was overturned and Mrs. Gorman injured. In the three writs it is claimed that defendant was guilty of negligence and of reckless driving. That he failed to give the Gorman car the right of way and other allegations of similar nature.

Mrs. Gorman, who owned the machine, claims damages of $10,000. The machine was damaged. Mrs. Gorman sustained a lacerated wound on the upper lid of her left eye and severe body bruises and lacerations. Accordingly to the writ, she has suffered and continues to suffer from sever headaches. She claims that the injuries are permanent in nature.

Miss Mary Gorman, a school teacher, complains that as the result of the injuries which she sustained she has been unable to continue her duties. She received a scalp wound and slight concussion of the brain.

Brondeau was the driver of the New Britain car and he alleges that he received a lacerated wound on the forehead and cuts about the face and other bruises about the body. He also alleges that he met with severe injury to his eye which he believes will permanently impair his vision. He and Miss Gorman claim $5,000 damages each.

Followed the collision, Brondeau and Delorme were presented in the police court on charges of reckless driving. Judge Frank H. Foss was on the bench. Absolute blame could not be fixed on either party and both were fined $25 and costs. Brondeau and Delorme then took appeals to the superior court and furnished bonds of $200 each. At the time of the court trial Delorme had a strong following of witnesses who testified in his behalf.

After attending a dance in this city Wednesday night, Lew H. Swartzburg of Norwich, came out of North street, went down Main, and in turning into Union street cut to the left of the silent policeman at the intersection. The man from the Rose of New England was arrested by Officer Lariviere and Thursday morning was before the judge of the police court. Swartzburg admitted that the evidence given by the officer was all true, but put up a successful defense on the grounds that Norwich automobilities allowed automobile drivers to cut in on silent cops on Franklin Square, under certain conditions. Swartzburg probably forgot that he was in a city where no allowances are made for violation of the traffic rules. The court thought the matter over and finally decided that Swartzburg's mistake was unintentional. The case against him was nolled, on payment of costs, amounting to $8.16.

CREAM of RICE

Where you buy bulk rice you almost invariably get "polished" rice. When rice is polished practically all of the valuable mineral salts and health-giving vitamins are lost. So it's important that you buy rice by name. That's the only way to be certain of getting rice that has not been robbed of all food value and flavor.

To get rice at its best, always ask for Cream of Rice. Cream of Rice is rice with only the outer, indigestible husk removed. It is then granulated and combined with pure milk powder. So Cream of Rice is healthful and nourishing—rich and flavory—as good as it tastes. Buy a package today from your grocer and learn why Cream of Rice is the favorite breakfast cereal everywhere.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

URGES FARMERS TO GROW EARLY APPLES

Farmers and land owners should give much more thought to the possibility of growing more summer and early fall apples. One county horticultural agent, from studies and observations and talks with farmers during the last two or three years, believes that this is a neglected opportunity. More farm products of the county are being sold direct to the consumer at the farms or farm roadside stands each year and again more is passed on to the consumer each year with only one handling from the produce, namely, that of the retail store.

Roadside stand sales and farm sales in quantity are possible only during the period of mild weather, when auto travel is a pleasure, so, for this roadside selling especially, the farmer will do well to study to have his fruit as well as vegetables ready and in condition for sale at the time of the year when the stands can be run profitably.

Early apples are more perishable than winter varieties and for this reason they must be grown nearby and pass through as little handling as possible to reach the consumer in the best condition. In the case of early apples, while there is more or less competition from outside sections, notably from New Jersey and Delaware, there is not the same possibility of competition from outside districts as is the case with winter apples. Locally grown winter varieties of apples must and do enter into competition with apples from all nearby states, from the Pacific Northwest and even from British Columbia and Nova Scotia.

A point in favor of early apples is that these varieties carry less risk from the elements of weather, notably wind and hail. The early apple crop is grown, picked and sold and the owner will have his money in his pocket when the winter varieties must still remain on the trees eight or 10 weeks longer before they are mature. Other notable advantages in the culture of early apples are that the trees as a rule are smaller, hence are more easily taken care of in spraying and pruning, and picking costs less a bushel on account of the trees not being so tall.

The varieties yellow transparent and duchess, two of the best early varieties, bear a few apples in the second or third year after being set out. The variety wealthy, usually begins bearing in the fourth year, red astrakhan in five or six years. These are the four varieties which experience in the county seems to show it pays best to plant and grow.

Early summer apples such as the above varieties come at a time when people naturally are hungry for good clean apples for pies, sauce and for eating fresh. In nearly all cases which have come under the horticultural agent's attention early apples proved as profitable as, or more profitable than other later varieties in orchards near Springfield and other cities of the county. In a few cases where early apples have not been profitable, the trouble has been that while the above varieties are easily grown, they need a little special soil treatment, some spraying, although not as much as later varieties, but especially do they need thinning to insure fruit of good size. These common essential orchard practises have not been given to them or have been given in part only.

Farmers living near large consuming sections should produce those crops which must be produced locally to reach the consumer at their very best.

LIME APPLICATION GOOD FOR ACID SOIL

What is the best thing to do when a piece of land which you have selected for a vegetable garden refuses to grow good crops. This was the question which the County Horticultural Agent, William H. Wolff, was called upon to answer in the case of some factory employes' vegetable gardens this past week. The conditions found were a light sandy soil which the litmus paper test showed to be very strongly acid. Examination of the character of the soil also showed it to have very little organic matter or vegetable fiber incorporated in it. In other words, it was almost a pure sand with a slight mixture of clay. Residues of vegetable crops and even weed growth were small and stunted.

The person who has had charge of these vegetable gardens says that each year employes have seemed to take less and less interest in gardening and he attributes this to two reasons, poor soil and automobiles. He is right. There is no doubt but that the very poor soil condition has discouraged garden work and so has indirectly favored the autos.

The soil in this particular set of gardens and in hundreds of other gardens in this part of the country can be made many times more productive with a comparatively simple treatment. The first thing to do is to reduce the soil acids which are of more consequence and decidedly more harmful in sandy soils than in soils of heavier type. These toxic or poisonous soil acids are due mostly to the presence of mineral acids, and these can be rendered largely insoluble and so harmless to the plant by applications of lime or acid phosphate. The best plan in the case of vegetable gardens is to use some of each, since most vegetable plants are benefited by lime. As safe amounts to use, we have suggested for the gardens in question 15 pounds of agricultural lime and 5 to 8 pounds of acid phosphate for each square rod of surface, the same applied in the the entire garden area and raked in or harrowed in thoroughly next spring.

With the soil acids reduced, the next point will be to build up the organic material, or vegetable fibre in the soil. For this purpose, we have suggested that only one-half of the entire area be planted to vegetable crops next spring. If there is plenty of manure to be had, manure the whole field; but, if there is a scarcity, put manure only on the half which is to be planted to vegetables. The other one-half of the field we suggest sowing down next season to a soil improvement crop of grass and clover. A good mixture for each square rod is the following:

One-half ounce of Alsike Clover.

Rake this mixture of grass and clover seed in lightly very early in the spring and allow it to grow throughout the summer. Plow this grass and clover sod in the late fall. In the spring of 1925, use for the vegetable garden the land which grew grass and clover, and sow down the other half to grass and clover. After this, follow the practise of sowing down 1-3d of the garden land each spring to a soil improvement crop of grass and clover and use 2-3ds of the area each season for vegetables.

The additional food requirements of the vegetable plans can be met economically through the use of moderate applications of high grade mixed fertilizer with occasional small amounts of nitrate of soda. In this way, the general fertility of the soil will be quickly built up and easily maintained, and its ability to produce luxuriant crops of high quality vegetables will be assured.

VALUE OF OATS FOR POULTRY

Good oats rank next to wheat as a poultry food, the only objection to them being the hulls or husks which are indigestible.

Light weight oats swell and clog in the crop and much energy is expended by the fowl in digesting them. For this reason hulled oats are preferable for feeding poultry. If these are not obtainable, heavy weight oats should be used. Ground oats is also a good poultry feed.

In weight and in other indications of value, whole oats vary greatly. Hence, it is extremely difficult to determine their value by their appearance.

Some oats are two-fifths husks, which are of no value as food. The weight of oats varies from 25 to 50 pounds per bushel. Light weight oats with full, plump kernels are one of the best poultry feeds.

Some of the by-products of the manufacture of oat cereals are used for poultry feeds. Oat hulls is one of the principal by-products, but should not be used as a poultry feed, as they are worth little more than sawdust. Ground oat hulls are liberally used as an adulterant in some poultry feeds to lessen the cost of the mixture. The presence of these adulterants may lessen the value of the feed so as to make it almost useless.

Oat middlings and hulled oats are two of the best preparations made from oats for the use of fowls. Oat middlings is particularly good for young fowls or chicks.—Seth W. Shoemaker.

SUCCESSFUL YEAR FOR BOY AND GIRL POTATO GROWERS

The Junior Potato Growers' Association of Garland County, Ark., is composed of 90 farm boys and 8 farm girls, ranging in age from 14 to 18 years. They are all members of boys' and girls' potato clubs in which, under the guidance of the county agricultural extension agent, they are learning to practice the best-known methods of growing potatoes and preparing them for market.

These young farmers organized their own growers' association, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, elected officers, appointed committees, including a buying and a marketing committee, and selected one variety of potato which all members agreed to grow.

They have finished harvesting their 1923 crop and on October 16 rendered a business like account of their year's accomplishments to the Hot Springs Lions' club, which has given the association support.

The members grew, the report states, 786 bushels of No. 1 grade potatoes and over 500 bushels of No. 2's producing altogether 1,300 bush-

ANNOUNCEMENTS

KARA CALLS HALT ON QUESTIONS BY LETTER

Kara, the mystery man of Indoo, who has been answering questions through The Bulletin, has called a halt on the letter writing. On Thursday he received close to a hundred letters and now has so many that he will not be able to answer any more if written to him. He is devoting almost all his time off the stage to answering the questions of Bulletin subscribers and is swamped. He will try to answer as many as possible while he is in town. The answers to a number of questions follow:

Mrs. S. M.: While I cannot promise that the osteopath will cure you, as long as the other doctors say they cannot cure you. As you feel that the osteopath will help you, I imagine it would be advisable to try it a reasonable length of time, anyway. I know of cases that have been helped a great deal. They should improve you some. My dear woman, there is one thing that you are doing that is staying in the way of help. You must appreciate life whether deaf or whether otherwise. The proper thinking and prayer will help you, and and while you will not p[illegible] be normal, it would not stand in the way of your success in life, you must not dread it so much.

Mrs. N. S.: I am quite positive that your son is not in any danger, his silence proves that. Had he met with foul play, you would have heard through the authorities. I feel that the reason he does not write is that he is ashamed of what he has done, and is trying to do something big so that when he comes back, it will offset the wrong he has done.

F. T.: I am sorry to say I do not feel that you have met your future husband, and wont do this until this summer when you take your vacation. It seems now that you will go north from here and out of the state.

H. M. B.: Your good judgment should tell you that if J. really cared he would not make his visits so far apart. I see no other reason.

H. E.: While I do not say you will be normal, I am sure with the proper attention your condition will improve and the spells will become further and further apart. I would suggest electric treatment, osteopathy, or anything that will help to bring back the right circulation of blood. You are using exceedingly good judgment in trying to get the knitting machine or anything that you can operate and not depend altogether on yourself.

Miss A. B.: My best advice to you is to return home for a while. I feel that which was not satisfactory then has improved a great deal during your absence. You may then leave and when you come back you will be more satisfied knowing that things at home are improved and in time it will all be settled satisfactory to all concerned.

L. McC: You have no reason to doubt his sincerity, and the only reason you do is because of your bitter experience with others, not exactly through your own folly, but from misjudgment. He is all that he can be under present existing conditions.

Mrs. M. D. B.: I do not feel that your husband is intimate with any other women, although I feel that someone in the past has tried to throw herself at him. Since he has not accepted the offer, I am sure he never will.

Mrs. L. A. R.: Due to the fact that you have had children that proves you are productive, and will have more. You are not compelled to live with your husband if you do not care for him, but I should think if you feel that way about it that you would let this be known to him before anyone else, and perhaps after he finds out that you feel that way about him, he would not want you regardless of how he felt about things, and may release you. By all means be fair with him if you expect to be happy and successful.

M. A. Q.: I do not see that you will leave in the near future, that is, with your parents' consent, and you should not think of leaving without it. Be careful of any offer of marriage that is made to you. Persons knowing that you are desirous of leaving home may tempt you by making an offer and you would accept same just to be free to do as you please. That kind of a happiness is not real and does not always last.

Mrs. J. D.: I am sure the death of the canary was a natural one and nothing could have been done to save the bird. I feel that sled will be recovered.

Miss H. H.: I do not feel that anyone took the ring. It is misplaced for the time, and if you had not given up looking for same it would have found by now.

Mrs. M. R.: I feel that if your daughter was going to recover the pearls and umbrella, she would have done it by now. They are gone for good.

Mrs. L. M. E.: I feel that you have showed good judgment in buying the house. While you did not get it for a song it is worth all you paid, and will increase in value, if you will make a few improvements. I feel the man you speak of is sincere, but if you are not yet sure, I suggest that you give yourself more time. At the same time put him through whatever test you think fair to him and you. You will be better off to do this than to marry before.

U. A. P., Taftville, Conn: I do not advise you to change your line of work but I do advise a change of location. Since you are dissatisfied I am sure it is not with your work, it is the environment. The teaching of psychology tells one we must change when we are dissatisfied. Being dissatisfied and in the state of mind you are at the present time and have been for a long time, you could not hope to be healthy, happy or successful is the reason I say change location.

Mrs. J. B.: There is no question in my mind that your daughter has all the natural faculties and qualities to be successful in her work. One thing she must learn to do is to overcome lack of confidence. This will give her an opportunity much sooner than her real success will come to her by leaps and bounds.

Mrs. K. A. W.: I do not feel that the money was stolen as you surmise. I feel that you paid some bills or spent it and did not recall doing same. I feel that you had value received for same. Your husband will improve if you will help him, and have courage. To always condemn him for his drinking will only make matters worse. He is trying to, one that will speed things for him if he will change his associates. Make your home attractive and pleasant and he will not want to leave to drink, is another thing to be done to help him.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

At the Breed.

Dustin Farnum heads the bill at the Breed theatre today and Saturday in his latest photoplay, Bucking the Barrier. This production comes with the praise of leading critics everywhere and brings to the screen a succession of dramatic incidents that make the picture one of the most thrilling ever filmed. The story is woven around life in the north wilderness and is fast moving. For its interpretation on the screen the Fox corporation has assembled a brilliant cast of players.

Edna Murphy will also be seen in Her Dangerous Path and the Pathe News and a Sunshine comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Continuous show Saturday from 1.30 to 10.15.

At the Broadway.

The programme opened with Harry Berry and Miss in a vaudeville encyclopedia, featuring Miss Theo Keith, America's sweetest cornet virtuoso.

Kelsey & Antrim offered a pleasing comedy act.

The Three Rubes, Bowers, Walters and Croker, closed the bill with a fine act.

The photoplay is The Little Red Schoolhouse.

At the Strand.

Trifling With Honor, the Universal-Jewel photo-drama which was shown for the first time locally at the Strand theatre, Thursday, has a distinct appeal to the average motion picture fan in that it is so thoroughly human.

It is the story of a man who looked upon life with friendless eyes, but who was heralded as a hero in the world of baseball and held the esteem of thousands of fans. The subtle effect of this esteem had tangibility in the form of a boyish hero worship in the extreme which literally forced the man to warm up to his world's applause and live up to the dreams of his fondest admirers.

When it came to a showdown between "making a killing" by double-crossing his own team and remaining true to the ideals believed of him by his boyish hero worshippers, Ed Shugrue "went to bat" with himself—and won a moral victory.

The story was written for Collier's Weekly by William Slavens McNutt and was directed at Universal City by Harry Pollard. The cast includes Rockcliffe Fellowes, Fritzi Ridgeway, Buddy Messinger, Hayden Stevenson and other popular players.

A comedy and news completed the short subjects.

At Broadway Sunday.

A real, live-wire, honest, up-to-date American schoolboy hobnobbing with the sultan of Turkey, defeating Turkish plotters against the throne and finally winning the praise of the sultan himself will be shown in Stephen Steps Out, a new Paramount picture starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., which will be displayed at the Broadway theatre Sunday. Young Fairbanks makes his screen debut in this absorbing photoplay.

Douglas, as Stephen Harlow Jr., is sent to Turkey by his wealthy father and instead of studying Turkish history as decreed, succeeds in making history on his own account.

Elaborate sets showing hotel lobbies in Constantinople, Turkish palaces, the palace of the sultan and many quaint corners of the famous near-east city form suitable backgrounds for the picture. The plot is in keeping with the lavish settings.

At the Lyceum, New London.

Can you imagine anybody turning down a job as president of a bank or refusing to accept a million dollars? Of course not. Yet, Regina Wallace, who plays one of the leading roles in George Kelly's latest play, The Show-Off, which comes to the Lyceum theatre, New London, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee, has rejected an offer which, in theatrical circles, almost equals the refusal of a bank president's job and the million dollar offer.

Perhaps you have never heard of the ambition of most actresses to play Shakespeare's immortal Juliet, but if you have, you must know what it means when an actress refuses to accept this very part in a Broadway production. Miss Wallace probably stands in a class my herself by her refusal to aspire to play Juliet.

"The closest I came to playing Juliet was at college when the English teacher picked me out for the role. A cold that suddenly and fortunately came upon me robbed me of this one golden opportunity and since then, as a professional actress, I have had many opportunities to go into Shakespearian productions, but never grasped the matter and was happy when the producers didn't press me to go into these plays.

Miss Wallace in The Show-Off essays the role of Amy Fisher, a modern American girl who thinks she knows all there is to know of life and all that life holds for her. Even when her mother counsels her against a certain young man who wants to marry her and shows him up as nothing but a show-off and braggard who will be unable to support her, she takes the matter into her own hands and marries him. How her mother's predictions come true, how her husband proves himself the show-off and braggart makes this one of the most interesting, hilariously funny, and dramatic offerings the stage has seen in many months.

The opening demand on Thursday morning for the services of the police was to come and get Eugene Carpenter from a store where he was making a nuisance of himself. He was drunk and refused to go away. When first told that an officer would be called unless he departed he was sitting on the steps at the store entrance. At this he said he would not stay out there and freeze to death while awaiting arrest, so went inside. He seemed honored when two officer came for him, whereas it appeared he only expected one. Later in the day he was given 30 days in jail. He claims Woonsocket as his home and said he is an ex-service man.

As a matter of courtesy, and one might say decency in dealing with the public, business concerns that circularize the homes of the borough might at least forbid their distributing agents ringing door bells and taking busy people away from their work to find nothing more important awaiting them than advertising matter. It has been remarked time and again that this clumsy method of doing business is an apt to irritate people into hostility against an advertised proposition as it is to attract business—and probably more so. It is unfair and uncalled for treatment of the public. Attention can be called to any legitimate business proposition without committing a disturbance—and no less a nuisance—at every door in town. It is a little matter that well might claim the attention of the Chamber Commerce, which strives to do many worthy things and which could check in a large way by the co-operation of its membership the reprehensible practice mentioned.

PUTNAM

It was stated Thursday afternoon that the date for the sale of the properties of the Manhasset company, as authorized by the superior court, has not been set. Announcement of the sale date may be looked for at any time now, and the prospect is that the sale will not be delayed beyond the coming month.

Receivers and their counsel and doing their utmost to forward the matter, that the big plant may not be idle, or nearly so, any longer than may be necessary. Final disposition of the Manhasset properties in this city is of vital interest to Putnam, for the concern is one of the ... greatest industrial assets, and having it idle or running with only a skeleton force digs deep into the community's industrial prosperity.

What may happen when the properties of the company here are offered at public sale, as is to be done, can remain only a matter of conjecture for the being. There are many stories circulating as to this or that big concern desiring to take over the property, but there is nothing definite or final in these stories and cannot be by vey reason of he fact that the sale is to be a public one and that the property will go to the highest bidder, which is in the interest of the stockholders.

One concern that might be interested at a certain price might lose all enthusiasm if the bids for the property run too high and the competition to acquire is too keen. There is the compensating consideration, however, that the Manhasset property is a modern one in every respect, finely equipped and very desirable for manufacturing textiles on a large scale. This fact will not be overlooked by many competent interest. Putnam is a splendid shipping center and there are many other consideration that will count in attracting numbers of bidders for the big plant and other property when the sale day comes.

At present, only a few workers are at the plant engaged in running out the stock.

Workmen engaged Thursday in tearing down the board fencing that has shut the new Putnam Savings bank building in Main street off from the sidewalk traffic since construction was undertaken last fall.

Here is an evidence that the outside work, except for some decorative parts that go over the main entrance and over the windows, is complete save for washing down the walls of the structure, which has risen rapidly and is one of the finest of the new buildings in the city.

The masons who have been employed on the structure have completed their work and turned to other fields of activity. For the remainder of the winter work to be done will concern completion of the interior. Present indications are that the building will be ready for occupancy in the early spring period.

Sportsmen here are now making a study of an exhibit of mounted game birds—of the species protected under the game laws of the state—sent to Putnam by the state fish and game commission. The exhibit, loaned by the Audobon society at Fairfield, is shown in the window of a store in Union square.

With the display of birds is a head full of information about what kind of birds are protected by the game laws of Connecticut. A hunter who desires to obey the law and aid in the propagation of game should not miss this exhibit, which has been brought here through the activity of County Game Warden Charles M. Letters of this city.

Hunters will learn, for instance, that various families of owls are protected and should not be killed. And they will learn various other things that many of them will want to know, if they have the best interests of hunting in Connecticut at heart.

One hears people say that war can never cease, so why have a league of naiton? One might as well say death comes to all so why build hospitals? If the hospitals save only a percentage of their patients, does not that justify their being? If the league prevents but a few wars is not that a blessed accomplishment?

A week from this (Friday) morning the members of the board of relief of the town of Putnam will begin their sessions for the hearing of claims for abatements or reductions from assessments fixed by the assessors of the town. This particular year has brought so many changes of ownership in properties in the have been given extra amount of work town of Putnam that the assessors in preparing the grand list. Up to Thursday it had not been received as completed at the office of the town clerk, where it will be on file, however, prior to the first of the month.

Before leaving here Mr. Pepin said that he had been notified by the man from whom he purchased the car that the man who stole the machine in Shirley, Mass., had been apprehended.

Fearing to take further chances that this unusually mild winter will furnish ice heavier than 9 inches, a firm that sells its ice crop to consumers in this city engaged Thursday in harvesting from the Prentice pond. This is rather light ice, as cuttings usually go hereabouts, but such ice has proved satisfactory and profitable to handle in other years and is regarded as offering the sam opportunities in 1924.

At a meeting of the Ashford Baptist Association held in Eastford this week the following officers were elected for the year: President, John C. Stoddard, Putnam; secretary and treasurer, Rev. Norman H. Bloore North Ashford; chairman, program committee, Rev. S. S. Foshay, Willimantic.

January has been an exceedingly quiet month as to activities of the Putnam city court. If this first month of the year is to be taken as an indication of the tranquility that may be anticipated during 1924, the record of collections in fines collected during 1923 will not be approached by thousands of dollars. Maybe the fear of being called a scofflaw has induced those who are tempted to be good. Maybe New Year's resolutions are ironclad this year.

The Junior class of Putnam High school has announced that the annual junio pomenade will be held at the asembly hall in the high school, Washington's birthday.

Mansfield Depot residents are hoping that before another winter the state road will be finished as it is wearing and tearing both on automobiles and nerves, to get either out of or into the village as both roads are almost impassable. Deep ruts, criss-cross and every other way make automobile riding equal to broncho bucking exercise.

F. McCollum and Fenelon McCollum Jr., were in Willimantic Thursday on business.

els. They marketed their crop cooperatively, receiving $1,644 for it. The cost of production was $658; the net profit $986, about 74 cents per bushel. The member making the highest yield harvested 37.5 bushels from a one-eighth acre plot. VALUE OF EARLY HATCHING IS CLEARLY SHOWN

Early spring hatching pays. Note the Boston wholesale market, now offering 70 to 80 cents for a dozen of fresh eastern heavery eggs. And it is the February and March chicks that best supply this demand. Western raisers cannot place the strictly fresh product on Massachusetts' fancy market.

To date, the average egg production in Massachusetts is about 80 per hen per year; most of these come in the spring months when eggs are cheap. Records for twelve years, compiled and digested by the Connecticut Agricultural College, predict a well-bred, well-sheltered and well-fed bird can lay 160 eggs a year. The following is the natural monthly rate:

Month, 1923	Production	Price
October	7	62c to 67c
November	5	85c to 90c
December	7	70c to 78c
January	9	52c to 54c
February	13	46c to 48c
March	15	42c to 45c
April	19	29c to 32c
May	20	26c to 32c
June	13	30c to 36c
July	17	34c to 42c
August	15	45c to 52c
September	13	52c to 56c

ICE SUPPLY NECESSARY FOR GOOD MILK

In the production and marketing of high quality milk and cream a supply of ice on the farm is almost a necessity, says the United States department of agriculture. Proper cooling and cold storage is said to be the greatest single factor influencing the bacterial content of milk from the time it leaves the cow until it reaches the consumer.

The department says that farmers should, if possible, put up at least 1 1-2 tons of ice in the north and 2 tons in the South for every cow in the milking herd. This will provide for cooling the milk, allow for melting, and provide a little surplus for household use. In late fall and early winter, when work is not pressing on the farm, a little time spent in anticipation of the ice harvest will pay good returns. During this season old ice houses may be repaired and all the necessary equipment for harvesting ice provided.

APPLE BLIGHT GROWS

The European apple red mite is rapidly increasing and spreading in the apple orchards. Last season it caused considerable damage in many orchards by injuring the leaves, causing them to assume a bronze color and the fruit to ripen prematurely. This in turn caused the fruit to drop badly in early fall, and without doubt, also prevent its full development in size.

European apple mite in summer works on the underside of the leaves and can be seen with a hand lense. It very much resembles a minute spider. At this time of the year its presence can be detected by patches containing hundreds of thousands of minute bright red eggs clustered around the base of fruit spurs or in the forks of the smaller branches.

For killing these eggs and getting rid of red mites, next season, nothing is quite so effective as a good oil spray applied before the buds start.

ROADS

Give me a trail on the mountain-side
Where the spruce and the aspen grow,
With a single comrade, staunch and tried
And the world spread out below:
I look aloft to the glistening peak;
I press the flower-gemmed sod;
And I hear the voice of the mountains speak
Of beauty and strength and God.

Give me a road through the country-side
Where the fields are broad and fair,
And the maples spread their branches wide;
For the homes of men are there;
It may be far from city and town,
Or it may be little worth;
But every road leads up and down
To the farthest end of earth.

Nay!—give me a street on either side
Where the throngs of people are;
Where beat the waves of the human tide
To the din of wagon and car;
In shops and flats and shining lights,
I find my soul again;
For what is a world of wondrous sights
Apart from the world of men?

ANNOUNCEMENTS

At the Palace.

Kara, the mystery man of India, continues his baffling exhibition of supernatural and psychic powers, at the Palace theatre for three more days, completing his stay in Norwich on Saturday evening. Hundreds are daily asking him questions of the past, present and future and as yet no one has been answered incorrectly regarding the past or present and as for the future, time alone will tell. Not only is Kara's fame known locally but he is receiving hundreds of letters from surrounding towns and even some from New York state and towns in Massachusetts. Local skeptics have tried all manner of means to catch him but he treats all with the same unerring judgment and reveals to them the thoughts of their innermost mind, thoughts that they themselves can bring forth from the subconscious being.

Allen's Lung Healer Saves Boy's Life

Seventeen-Year-Old Boy Restored to Health After Being Given Up

The king of remedies is constantly adding many to its army of saved. The story of Mrs. Greenlaw's is only one of many that have come to our notice the last few years. Read what she says:

"My 17-year-old son was taken last March with a bad cold and cough and got so sick that he had to give up his job in the store of Eastman Bros. & Bancroft. He coughed so that he could not eat nor sleep and looked like death. After trying everything friends told me about, he continued to get worse and I finally gave up all hope of his recovery. Finally a friend gave him a bottle of Allen's Lung Healer and by the time it was half used his hoarseness disappeared. He kept on taking it and in two months his cough was gone and he began to get fat.

He worked out through the summer and went back to work in the store in September, a well boy, all of which is due to Allen's Lung Healer. It is a wonderful medicine, worth a great deal of praise. It saved this boy's life and I cannot recommend it too highly for bad coughs and ... It is also good for building up the body."

Augusta Lady Gives Details of Recovery

Mrs. Eva Arbour, highly esteemed resident of 7 Bond St., Augusta, Me., is another to whom the Tanlac treatment has, to use her own words, "restored the joys of good health."

In giving the facts of her experience Mrs. Arbour said: "After six years suffering from indigestion I did not have strength and energy left to do my shopping. I scarcely ate enough to keep soul and body together and was pale as a ghost. When I began taking Tanlac I was so rundown, weak and nervous I could hardly walk to the store across the street. "It was two years ago that I took Tanlac and I have not had a sick day since. I gained seventeen pounds and it made my cheeks like roses. My husband says I look better than I ever did, and I don't believe a person could feel any better than I do since taking Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

NO DEALS ON WARSHIPS.

Thus early our respect for the naval agreement is being put to a test. It might be possible for this government to take the position that there is no possible violation of the agreement in the negotiations which have been started for the sale by private interests of former warships to the Mexican government, to be used against the rebel forces. It can be said that the government had sold these vessels before any naval agreement was made or contemplated, and that they were sold without restriction. It could be maintained that inasmuch as the government had given title to them it had nothing to do with their resale for any purpose that the new purchasers might desire. It could wash its hands of the whole affair and not be held responsible. It might even take the position that it did not object because they were going to be used for the support of a constitutional government.

However favorable the opportunity might be for justifying no interference with the contemplated disposal of old warships, this government has recognized the importance of refraining from any conduct that would permit of a suspicion that we were in any way defeating the purpose of the naval agreement. If we are standing up so straight on the matter that we seem to fall over backward, that is to our credit. It is a time when it is vital that we should set a generous example in our respect for the understanding reached at Washington with other governments, and there is no better way of doing it than by living up to the letter of the treaty and actually making them mean something.

The old warships that Mexico wants we would not be able to allow to go to any nation had they been sold since the naval agreement was reached. If we are so impressed with the importance of that agreement that we are unwilling to sanction the sale for war purposes of those that happened to be sold just previous to the agreement it establishes a precedent which cannot fail to have its good effect among the other nations. We stand firmly by the purpose of the treaty and not solely by the letter of it. We are not anxious to start any quibbling.

TAXING FIREARMS.

Suggestions for the checking of gun carrying have been made. In New York there is a law forbidding the possession of firearms without a permit, and carrying a stiff penalty, and yet it is constantly being disclosed that householders keep such things hidden for their own protection.

One great benefit of such a law at the present time is to make conditions safer for the crooks. As long as the law forbids those upon whom they would prey from having firearms they feel safer in going out after loot, in staging holdups and in committing crime of various kinds. They do not respect the law anyway and there is nothing about the law which makes it impossible for them to get the prohibited firearms, and as long as they can get them they are certain to use them when occasion requires.

And yet in spite of the operation of this law it is now being advocated that a tax of $100 be placed upon every revolver and a tax of one dollar on every cartridge. Here again the crooks are going to regard this as a highly desirable piece of legislation. They are not going to overlook the fact that every bit of protection that they can get is all the better for their health. They recognize that the fewer homes and individuals who have firearms, the easier it will be for them to carry on their trade. It is one thing which they can be expected to strongly advocate, for they are strong for anything that plays into their hands. They want the possibility removed of being brought face to face with a gun in the hand of a waiting householder.

There is nothing about gun toting that can be encouraged. It is something that ought to be abolished. There are those cases where the individual is justified in protecting himself but when it comes to regulating the possession of revolvers and ammunition to the point where it gives an advantage to the crooks and places an increased handicap upon the householder it cannot command very much support, and it cannot be expected that it would receive a great amount of respect.

THE NEXT RUSSIAN PREMIER.

Several names have already been mentioned as Lenine's successor as premier of soviet Russia. There appears to be no certainty that anyone has an inside course. Several are available, who have had experience in one direction or another in connection with the government under Lenine, and it is to be presumed that the responsibility will fall upon one of them.

It seems to be generally conceded that there will be no radical upheaval either in Russia or in the soviet government. There may be some departures from the Lenine policies, either toward or away from the more tolerant attitude which Lenine took in the past two years toward capitalism. It must be evident to those who are regarded as possible premiers, that it is through this more tolerant view, following the harsher experiences, that progress is to be made, and a more favorable attitude created among other nations.

Russia is anxious for the recognition of its government for its own advantages. It is in a position to do much to encourage such recognition by removing the remaining objections and standing out before the world in a manner that would eliminate suspicion. It knows of course what is expected of it before there will be recognition by the United States. Whether it is ready to meet the requirements may be disclosed by the premier chosen or by the manner in which the new premier takes up the reins of government. There is a chance for the removal of objectionable features at this time. It has seen the importance of adopting those reforms that were put into effect during Lenine's regime, and it may now visualize the future in such a manner as to make the most of the coming change in control. But for the fact that those upon whom the premiership is likely to fall have been so steeped in Lenine's policies, there might be more hope for action that would give new impetus to a quickened development of the economic situation in that country, and to the replacement of the theoretical with the practical.

LEWIS' ADVICE.

Developments at the conference of miners were bound to get much public attention, and we doubt not that much satisfaction was felt over the fact that it was so conclusively shown that the radicals are not in control and there is no indication that they can get there.

When President Lewis set forth to the delegates that the time had arrived when consideration must be given to a coal-weary public, it was evident that he had properly sensed the situation. It was an indication that he was going to urge moderation in the formulating of demands. It was one of the times when some consideration seems to have been given to the fact that the public needed to be thought of. His advice was that it was no time to reach out for an increase in wages, that it would be desirable to hold tight on the peak wages that are at present being obtained and endeavor to make the most of them by seeking an agreement which would insure maintenance over a period of four years. That would mean that so far as the wages to miners are concerned in the bituminous fields there could be no expectations of any relief from the present prices of coal, whatever the conditions might be.

While laying stress upon the public attitude President Lewis advised against suspensions and strikes, being convinced possibly that the reaction from such upon the public is detrimental and that other methods are preferable, though that is the first evidence of any such change of heart.

What the outcome of the meeting with the operators will be, at which the full demands of the miners will be presented next month, is problematical. Some satisfaction develops from the fact, however, that the demands as indicated are not running toward the radical.

TOO MANY AUTO FATALITIES.

In connection with the putting forth of figures concerning automobile fatalities it is too often the case that the number of persons killed by motor cars in 1923 exceeded by quite a number those killed in 1922. At the same time attention is drawn to the fact that the increase in the auto death list does not begin to approach the increase in the number of machines, and that the percentage of deaths to the total of machines even shows a decrease during the year when the most people were killed.

Look at that however you may and it is impossible to get away from the fact that more people are being killed each year by autos and that the safety in the highway is constantly decreasing.

It is gratifying to know that for the number of new cars each year there are not as many deaths as there were in previous years for the same number of cars, but it cannot be ignored that there are too many deaths from the operation of cars and the failure of individuals to properly protect themselves where it is known that the danger from highway traffic exists and is increasing with the steady addition of more motor vehicles.

Even though it is possible to show a smaller number of deaths for every thousand cars, the proper degree of safety in the highway will not be obtained until there is a reduction in the automobile fatalities even though the number of machines is greater each succeeding year. Figures must not be allowed to cloud the fact that there are too many deaths from such a cause.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The only thing that creates any more talk than a cold wave is a hot one.

The man on the corner says: No one ever broke a shoestring at just the right time.

In one way and another our navy grows smaller more rapidly than the Washington agreement calls for.

The Central Labor Union of Boston has endorsed daylight saving. That of course puts them in the class with the golf players.

So many things have happened to Trotsky that aren't so that little confidence is placed in any of the reports concerning him.

The one great trouble with Jack Frost's endeavor to put an end to this ice is that he lets up after he gets his job well underway.

It is said that France plans to begin payments on its debt to the United States soon, and thus far France isn't a country that goes back on its promises.

Wouldn't it be great if as much effort was put forward to stop the big increases in costs, including taxes, as is put forward against five-sixths of a cent increase in trolley fares?

Though the federal attorney of New York says that the whiskey seized now is so poor that it is unsafe to sell it to hospitals, he would have no difficulty in getting good prices for it at his back door.

INTERMITTENT REFORM

"SAY!" cried the man who had been quite sick, "where've you put my cigar jar? and the cigarettes are gone! Was it lemon pie I smelt baking a while ago?"

"Artemus," began the determined wife, laying aside her work and taking a long breath, "the moment arrived for me to say a few things and you might as well sit down and listen! On several occasions you have groaned upon a bed of pain and looked upon the doctor as the only spot of light in a darkened world, interspersing your moans with remarks to the effect that it was time you began to use sense and take care of your self and that smoking was a pernicious habit from than on you were to lead a better life.

"Why, you would ask fretfully, did I persist in preparing such rich food? Didn't I know about calories and things like that and here we were middle aged and ought to cut down our food intake by half at least! Leave off desserts, quit those heavy mayonnaise salads, woman! A simple chop and lettuce leaf, followed by a ripe pear and a bit of cheese, was enough for any one! Be sensible, for heaven's sake! The doctor was quite right also in his remarks about cigars. It was frightful the habit a man got into of smoking one bunch of poison right after the other!

"Somehow your taste for cigars was changing and you didn't think you should want even the two he allowed you as a fair average. One after breakfast was nonsense, and it would be perfectly easy to forget the after-dinner smoke if you made up your mind to do it. You had, in fact, long thought you'd just stop short, and this was a good time to do it. Please take away the broth. Food did not appeal to you. You didn't thing you ever should care to eat again, especially.

"And when you got up for several days a perfect stream of delivery men lined up at our doorstep. There would be a man with the case of bottled water you had decided you ought to drink always, and another with a new punching bag and still one more with a dozen cans of Pumble's Purple Prune-Wheat which was so good for the digestion. Yes, you wanted it every morning.

"You would wave aside the suggestion of your one smoke after dinner. Didn't I comprehend that you had quit, were through, finished ended with tobacco? I didn't seem to take in all the things you said to me reiatly!

"About six days later you shoved aside your breakfast dish of Pumble's Purple Prune-Wheat and in a loud strong voice said you wished I'd quit feeding you this sanatorium mush and would give you the nice crisp flakes you liked with plenty of cream and sugar! Utter nonsense that a little sugar on your breakfast food was bad for you! And real coffee instead of the substitute. Wasn't that bottled water nearly gone? Well, set it aside or give it away or maybe somebody's come visiting who liked it, but, as for you good old Lake Michigan without and salt or chemicals in it was good enough for you, and anyhow what was the sense of spending all that money?

"Wouldn't a large steak smothered in onions be an idea for dinner, and say, it had been a long time since I had made a cream meringue pie! Stuffed tomatoes were healthy. Where were the cigars? Oh, no, you weren't intending to smoke all that bunch I caught you putting in your pocket—just the one the doctor said you could have—but a man feels so foolish if he meets any one at lunch and has no cigar to offer him.

"I really thought this time you were a trifle serious, but I recognize old symptons. You have been a sick man and I put the cigars away and you can't have pie for din——"

"Say," cried the man who had been quite ill, "I guess I have sense enough to know how I feel! Those other times I may have been foolish, but this was merely a most ordinary indisposition and I'm perfectly all right and a smoke won't hurt me! What kind of pie was it she made if it wasn't lemon?"

"You can't beat it?" said the determined wife as she got out the cigars. "I don't see how there are any men left on earth at all!"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Work of a Son of Liberty

Mr. Editor: A writer to the Social Corner has given an inscription which was in place over the door of the house where she was born. She probably gave it from memory and has forgotten the first line. A copy that was made many years ago reads as follows:

Liberty and Property Restored again
In George ye IIIrds most Gracious reign
Now Liberty & Property & No Excise
God Bless our Kings & Keep them wise.

Without the first line it looks like a sentiment from a tory of the Revolution. This stone was probably cut and set up about 1767 by a Son of Liberty. It stood by the side of the main road of that day between the centers of the old towns of Norwich and Windham. It was also on the main road from Lebanon to Windham. In Lebanon, Norwich and Windham there were several men at that time who had ships out on the ocean and were active in commerce. Goods were hauled to and from the landing place by oxen. (The location, Franklin square, for many years before and after, was known as "The Landing.") There was much passing and many looked up at the inscription.

George III. and those under his influence had laid taxes which the colonists did not have anything to say about and were not for their benefit. The town records of Windham of that time show that a resolution or vote on the report of a committee was passed against the buying or the importation of any taxed goods. "In a very full meeting the inhabitants of the town, Nemine contra discente."

By concerted movements the same was done all over New England and the excise or tax was repealed. The Sons of Liberty rejoiced greatly. The prayer expressed in the last line did not prevail. George III. was so much short of wise that he was kept in restraint for many years and England was governed without the wisdom of a king greatly to the benefit of untaxed commerce. A grandson of the man who made the inscription tried to obtain the stone, also, some wished to have it placed in the library of the Connecticut Historical Society. Where is it now?

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS

While the word "depreciation" is not used in the revenue act, it provides that in computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions "a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property used in trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence."

In claiming depreciation, the following fundamental principles must be observed: Only such depreciation as results from the exhaustion, wear and tear of property, resulting from its use in business, trade, profession, or vocation is allowed. Depreciation in the value of the taxpayers home or property, such as an automobile used for pleasure or convenience, can not be claimed. Reduction of value due to changes in the social or business condition of a neighborhood, or change in street grade, or fluctuations of market value can not be claimed. Depreciation in the value of land, whether improved or unimproved, can not be claimed.

Depreciation may be claimed on all business property, which includes not only buildings, but machinery of a permanent character, automobiles, farm tractors, mine and mill equipment, office furniture, and books.

The value to be carried for by depreciation is the cost of the property. However, in the case of property acquired prior to March 1, 1913, the deduction shall be computed upon the basis of its fair market or value as of that date.

Deduction for depreciation must be made as a separate item of the taxpayer's return and must be explained by showing separately each class of property, its cost at the date of purchase (fair market price or value as of March 1, 1913, if purchased prior to that date), estimated life, depreciation charged off for the taxable year, and total depreciation charged off for all previous years.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Leopold Guy Francis Maynard, Lord Brooke, who has become sixth Earl of Warwick through succession to the title of his father, is said to have inherited many of the qualities that have served to make his brilliant mother one of the most widely known women in England. While a schoolboy at Eton, Lord Brooke attracted attention by running away, selling his personal belongings and buying a ticket for South Africa, with the object of taking part in the Boer war. He was forgiven by his parents, and received on arriving in Durban, a commission that attached him to the staff of one of the commanding officers. In the Great war he had further military experience as an aide-de-camp to the British commander-in-chief. While serving at the front he was seriously wounded and holds decorations from the British, French, Belgian, Russian and Japanese governments

Stories That Recall Others

Letting the Bridge Go By

After a jolly party a new automobile owner started out to drive his roadster home. On the way he lost control of the machine, drove over an embankment into a ditch and an instant later found himself under the overturned car. A passing motorist who went to his rescue called him how the accident happened.

"Well, you see it was this way," he explained. "As I was driving along I saw a bridge comin' and I just pulled out on the way to let it go by."

He Was Well Informed

They were discussing the latest edition of phonograph records. As usual the "mixer" was present, ready to engage in conversation.

"Yes, they are pretty fair this month," said one of the group, "but I don't believe they will ever produce anything better than that theory I heard by Fritz Kriesler and John McCormack."

"Oh, yes," offered the "good fellow," "think I remember it. An instrumental number wasn't it?"

Eagle Sometimes Ill-Omened.

The eagle is found on the royal arms of a great many civilized nations. Curiously enough, the eagle has often proved a bird of ill omen for nations who adopted him as their device; for in many cases they have risen to great power only to sustain terrible reverses. Rome conquered the world under the eagle-standards of her legions, and then crumbled into dust. Napoleon's eagles made him the terror of the world, till he fell more rapidly than he had risen. In the World war the eagles of Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, and Russia were brought low.

NORWICH MAN SUES FOR $1,000 FOR DAMAGES TO AUTOMOBILE

Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court here Thursday heard the evidence in the suit of Robert Boisson of this city against Santo Sammataro of New London for $1,000 because of the damage the Boisson automobile sustained in a collision with a car driven by Sammataro in New London on June 4, 1923. After the evidence was all in, Attorney Hibbard R. Norman made the argument for the plaintiff and Attorney Clayton B. Smith for the defendant, after which Judge Brown took the papers and reserved decision.

The cars collided at the corner of Ocean avenue and Willetts avenue when the Boisson machine, a Buick, driven by Charles C. Townsell, colored, as chauffeur, was proceeding along Ocean avenue towards the beach and the other car was driving westerly on Willetts avenue. Sammataro was driving this machine, an Essex, and one that he had hired for the day. He had his wife with him and was on his way to take her to see a doctor. Mrs. Boisson, who was riding in her husband's car, with the chauffeur driving, was the first witness called and the chauffeur, Townsell, followed her on the stand.

Through their testimony it was brought out that they saw the Sammataro car coming along Willetts avenue toward the corner of Ocean avenue at a fast rate of speed. They said they were driving at a moderate rate and they believed the Sammataro car was to turn either north or south on Willetts avenue. They had the right of way as the other car was approaching on their left. Townsell testified that he put on his brakes hard, but the other car struck his on the side, caromed off and went into a wall, and then swung around so that its rear end hit the Boisson car a second blow.

Wilbur S. Williams of this city testified to the cost of repairs to the Boisson car, amounting to $538.82. The damage claim in the suit also includes $200 for depreciation because of the damages.

Robert Boisson testified to the loss of the use of the automobile because of the accident and two New London girls, Marion and Marcia Keeney, who saw the accident as they were on a porch on Ocean avenue, testified to the rate at which the cars were traveling.

For the defendant, Officer William T. Babcock of the New London police force who went to the scene of the accident to make an investigation testified to what the persons concerned had told him at the time. It was brought out that Sammataro did not have an operator's license with him at the time of the accident.

Santo Sammataro, the defendant, testified that he was driving slowly at the time of approaching the street corner because his wife was not feeling well and they were on their way to a doctor. He was sure the other machine had not sounded its horn or given any signal when approaching the corner. Mrs. Sammataro corroborated the testimony of her husband to a large extent.

MOTORISTS FORFEITING BOND WILL LOSE THEIR LICENSES

Local violators of the motor vehicle laws who are haled into court and are later admitted to bonds of a small denomination with no intention to appear next morning to answer their charge are 'out of luck' from now on. It just can't be done. Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel of the motor vehicle department has established a precedent in dealing with these cases, the first victims to suffer residing in Meriden.

Quite recently three prominent residents of Meriden were haled into court for a violation of the headlight laws. Admitted to $10 bonds for their appearance in court next morning they failed to appear when their names were called. The bond was, of course, forfeited. But instead of the case finishing there, the usual procedure, they all received letters advising them that their operator's licenses had been revoked.

Inquiring as to the reason they were politely told that the forfeiture of their bond was the underlying cause and that from then on it simply could not be done. Police officials were puzzled. None had the idea that the forfeiture of a bond for such a minor offense would be the cause for such drastic action on the part of the commissioner.

Commenting upon the revocation of the licenses, Commissioner Stoeckel said, "This step is being taken to get all violators of the motor vehicle laws into court." This action is in accord with his desire to affect closer cooperation between the court and the highway department. The principle behind the ruling is that many persons with large purses may commit an offense and go their way unmolested, merely by putting up a bond.

In the present regulation a table of offenses which will result in the suspension of licenses is given, but headlight violations do not come under this table. The regulations do contain, however, a ruling that the commissioner may make, alter or repeal regulations governing the administration of all statutes regarding to vehicles, his power thus being very broad. "In the future the courts will have to send to Hartford the total sum taken in forfeiture cases and also in cases nolled," said Stockel.

This ruling will most likely work two ways. In the first place it will induce persons arrested for violations of the motor vehicle laws to appear when their cases are called in court through fear of losing their right to operate. It will also place the police on their guard to see that such persons do get to court, for in not doing so it will not benefit the court of that city or town in the least, monstarily.

The drastic action was taken after Commissioner Stoeckel had been advised that the number of persons who had forfeited their bonds was becoming unusually large. The residents of Norwich will be interested in this ruling for it affects the entire state. It will be rigidly enforced, according to orders issued from the commissioner's office.

COURT IMPOSES FINE FOR EVADING RESPONSIBILITY

A fine of $50 and costs was imposed on Hadlai Potter of Montville by Judge Arthur F. Libby in city court Thursday morning, on a charge of evading responsibility, after he had struck a hound, owned by William L. Lathrop of East Great Plain, leaving the injured animal lying in the road.

Mr. Potter took an appeal and provided a bond.

Mr. Potter was driving men in his employ to a sawmill in Leffingwell on January 14th and when at East Great Plain struck the dog owned by Mr. Lathrop. Two witnesses appeared in court to say that without stopping to see if the animal was injured he continued on his way. The dog was injured in the back and was partially paralyzed.

The statute under which Mr. Potter was presented is as follows:

Every person operating a motor vehicle who shall knowingly cause injury, shall at once stop and ascertain the extent of the injury and render such assistance as may be needed; and upon request, give his name, address and operator's license and registration number to the person injured, or to any officer or witness of the injury. Penalty not less than $50 or more than $100, or imprisonment not more than one year or both for first offense.

Mr. Potter admitted hitting the dog and failure to stop at the time and investigate whether or not the animal was injured. Judge Libby then imposed the minimum fine under the statute and the appeal was taken.

The arrest was made by Sheriff George Stanton.

A man brought before the court for failure to pay his personal tax paid $5 for his overnight and a woman of the same name had her case nolled.

One man charged with intoxication paid $13.50 and this closed the work of the court for the day.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE FOR SILK MILL SUPERINTENDENT

Called back to the Schwarzenbach-Huber company silk mill on Mechanic street Thursday evening, supposedly because of some trouble that had developed since the mill closed for the day, Morris L. Bergstresser, superintendent of the plant was given a complete surprise, arranged in honor of his fiftieth birthday.

Superintendent Bergstresser entered the plant where he was met by Charles H. Moore and conducted to the recreation room at the plant. It was not until he had entered the darkened room that the surprise was sprung and lights flashed on and over 100 of the 150 employes of the mill greeted their superintendent.

Called to the front of the hall by John Rush, Mr. Bergstresser was presented a fireside chair and lamp, gifts of the employes, in appreciation of his kindness to them in past years. Mr. Bergstresser although completely taken by surprise thanked the operatives of the mill for their thoughtful act in honor of his birthday.

During the evening music was furnished for dancing by the Harmony Quintet after which refreshments of ice cream, soda and cake were served.

The committee in charge of arranging for the surprise consisted of Louis Rush, Charles H. Moore, John Rush, Miss Jennie Miller, Mrs. Morris L. Bergstresser and Miss Miriam Bergstresser.

Mr. Bergstresser came to Norwich to take charge of the old Givernaud Bros., plant on February 22, 1907, this in 1911 becoming the Rogers-Thompson-Givernaud Company through consolidation. Wolf, squirrel and raccoon were the offerings calling forth the most spirited bidding on the third day of the raw fur auction in New York which was concluded Thursday at the Hotel McAlpin. The collections brought prices between 5 per cent. and 15 per cent. above prevailing market quotations.

Raccoon, of the poorer sections especially, for coat stock, was strongly competed for. Good Centrals, for extra large and large, brought up to $5.50. Southwesterns, extra large, averaged around $4.50. The highest price realized in the sale was $17.75, for a collection of twenty dark pelts.

Australian fox was in great demand, 1s and 2s, extra large and large, bringing up to $5, and average goods between $3.50 and $4.50.

The collection of badger was very poor, outside of one lot of thirty-three Northwesterns, 1s and 2s, which brought $10.50.

Jap mink sold well, extra large and large bringing $1.80 and medtume $1.30. Jap Coon, a small collection, brought $6.25 for pelts of good color, the average bringing between $4.30 and $4.70.

The finest grades of kolinsky went well, though the poorer grades were somewhat neglected. The highest price was $3.80. White hares brought from 5 to 29 cents.

The collection of wolf was exceptionally fine and the competition was strong. Extra large and large Canadians sold up to $19, Northwesterns up to $15 and Northwesterns and Westerns up to $12. Russians brought up to $18 and Southwesterns up to $6.50.

DAYLIGHT SAVING APPEARS BEFORE STATE DAIRYMEN

When the State Dairymen's association held its 43rd annual meeting in Hartford Thursday with a big attendance in Unity hall, a resolution was passed to the effect that as the dairymen were earnest subscribers to a faithful support of law they would look upon any attempt of school officials or other public officials to impose the use of daylight saving time as an act of defective leadership and profoundly unworthy of respect and following.

G. Warren Davis of this city was an attendant at the meeting and was one of the speakers at the banquet Wednesday evening. The convention hall was finely decorated by the Norwich-New London Poster company.

PREMATURE OLD AGE OF WOMEN

It is no secret that so many women suffer from ailments peculiar to their sex. Dark circles appear under the eyes, a pale, drawn, haggard expression to the countenance, and the weakness which accompanies such ailments is evidenced by the lagging step, headaches, backache and nervous conditions. Every woman who is afflicted in this way should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which for half a century has been overcoming some of the most stubborn ailments of women.

NEW YORK OPERA GUILD HAS NORWICH REHEARSAL

The members of the New York Opera Guild arrived in this city on Thursday evening and conducted a rehearsal at the Community house for the concert they are to give here. The rehearsal was under direction of Armando Agnini, stage manager of the Metropolitan Opera house, and Ora McCord Wheatcroft, a prominent coach of New York city.

Local interest in the appearance of the guild will be enhanced because one of its members is Miss Mildred Pearson, soprano, a former Norwich girl, who has already been heard here with much favor. The members of the guild are all American girls who have received their vocal education in this country. Its membership includes Miss Mildred Seeba of Jacksonville, Fla., Miss Helen Denny of Pennsylvania, Miss Margaret Solley of New York city, Miss Eunice Forrester of Missouri and Miss Mary Lathrop of Detroit.

M'TIGUE RECEIVES OFFER OF $100,000 TO FIGHT STRIBLING AND CARPENTIER

New York, Jan. 24—An offer of $100,000 for matches with Young Stribling, Georgia schoolboy boxer, Georges Carpentier, of France, was made today to Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, by the National Sportsmen's club of Newark, N. J.

McTigue countered with a demand for $150,000 for the two bouts at a conference with Harry Blaufuss, representing the Newark club, and it was indicated an attempt to reach an agreement would be made within a few days.

The Newark promoters propose to stage a McTigue-Stribling match at the First Regiment armory in March and book the light heavyweight champion, if he conquers the Georgian, for a fight with Carpentier in an outdoor arena in June.

Stribling, who fought McTigue to a draw in a riotous bout at Columbus, Ga., last October, already has agreed to the match, according to Blaufuss, while terms have been cabled Carpentier.

The boom in bidding for McTigue's services followed the formal appearance of relations between the boxer and his manager, Joe Jacobs. Differences between the pair have widened since the Stribling bout in Georgia, when they split over financial matters, and resulted in blocking several matches. Today, however, McTigue settled obligations with Jacobs by payment of $6,500 to the latter, who in turn tore up a managerial contract which did not expire until next August.

Tex Rickard played a part in ending the McTigue-Jacobs controversy and now plans to seek a title match between the Irish-American and Gene Tunney, holder of the American 175-pound title. This match originally was scheduled for December at Madison Square Garden but was cancelled because of Mike's tilt with Jacobs.

Recently, McTigue announced he would return to Ireland, where he won his title from Battling Siki nearly a year ago, but now has indefinitely abandoned this plan inasmuch as he is free to manage his own fistic affairs.

OLYMPIC CROSS-COUNTRY COURSE A SECRET

New York, Jan. 24. — The cross-country course over which the Olympic cross country championship will be decided next July, will be kept a secret until the day of the race. This information came to the American Olympic committee yesterday from the French Olympic committee, and was in response to a request made by Secretary Frederick W. Rubien for information as to the nature of the Olympic cross-country course.

Allan H. Muhr, international secretary for the French Olympic committee, gives assurances, however, that the course will not be very hilly, that there will be practically no road running and that very short spikes may be used to advantage.

The American cross-country runners will be selected after the final tryout, which is scheduled for Van Cortlandt park, New York, probably early in June. In view of the information received from Paris, it is probable that the six-mile course over which last year's intercollegiate championship was held, will be selected.

AMERICA PLANNING DEFENSE OF HER POLO TITLE

New York, Jan. 24.—(By The A. P.) —America is shaping her plans for the defense against Great Britain next September of the Hurlingham cup, historic international polo trophy, in the expectation that the British challenge will be one of the most formidable in the history of their rivalry. This was revealed today by Devereux Milburn, premier player and chairman of the team selection committee of the United States Polo association.

At the start America faces a problem in finding a No. 1 to replace Louis E. Stoddard, veteran star who announced his retirement last week. This may be met, observers believe, by moving J. Watson Webb, No. 3 on the present "big four" of the Meadow Brook club, into Stoddard's place and installing Malcolm Stevenson in Webb's position.

Tommy Hitchcock at No. 2 and Milburn at back are fixtures on the American team, barring accidents, so that the chief interest will be confined to determination of the other players.

While Webb and Stevenson appear as likely choices now, the competition will be open to candidates from any part of the country, it is emphasized. Robert E. Strawbridge, Jr., Raymond and Morgan Belmont and Major A. H. Wilson are other outstanding candidates.

Present plans call for play in May and June at the Meadow Brook club, during which time an opportunity will be given to any players desirous of showing their calibre as international team prospects. By the first week in July, the selection committee will pick eight or ten mallet wielders for the final tests. The cup team will be picked from this group after intensive preparation up until the time of the play with the Britons, who probably will arrive in this country in July to accustom themselves to playing conditions here.

LANDIS MAY BE CALLED TO SETTLE BALDWIN DISPUTE

New York, Jan. 24.—Commissioner Landis may be called into the controversy between the New York Giants and the Newark Internationals to determine the status of Pitcher Howard Baldwin. Exercising his right to pass on all player transfers between a major and a minor league club, the commissioner, observers believed tonight, would have to settle the dispute unless an amicable agreement could be reached between the Newark and New York interests.

The Giants asserted they obtained Baldwin from former owners of the Newark club at a reported price of $25,000, but Michael McTighe, head of the syndicate now in control of the Newark club, denied the former owners were within their rights and insisted that Baldwin, according to established baseball law, was now the property of the Newark club, with which he has signed for 1924.

Mr. McTighe today denied the existence of a stipulation in the club's bill of sale which entitled the former owners, William Ashton and Bernard Moan of Baltimore, to sell Baldwin. He asserted the new owners were expressly given the right to determine whether Baldwin should be sold or remain the property of the club and that the latter choice was made.

A scheduled conference over the matter between John Conway Toole, president of the International league, and Mr. McTighe, was postponed, it was learned late today, but it was understood Newark owners, at a meeting, determined to press their claims to Baldwin's services.

BRITISH RACQUET TEAM TO TOUR AMERICA

Boston, Jan. 24.—A letter received today by Walter I. Badger, Jr., secretary of the United States Squash Racquets association, from a representative of the British team of squash racquets players which is coming to this country, outlines their plans. Their first appearances will be in the Kappam cup match at Philadelphia on February 9.

They will go next to Hamilton, Ont., to compete in the Canadian championships. From Hamilton they will come to Boston to take part in the national championships on the Boston A. A. courts starting on February 21.

Secretary Badger said that ten teams were entered for the national championships. In addition to the British and Canadian teams they will represent Philadelphia, Detroit, Baltimore, New York, Washington, Buffalo Providence and Boston. The individual championship entries will be limited, as usual.

OLSON IS SIGNED AS COACH FOR DODGERS

New York, Jan. 24.—Ivan Olson, veteran Brooklyn National league infielder, will serve as coach of the Dodgers during the 1924 season, the club announced today. Olson will succeed Charlie Schmidt, who was given his unconditional release to manage a minor league club.

In addition to acting as manager Wilbert Robinson's assistant, Olson will be available to the Dodgers as a pinch hitter and as an extra infielder. Olson began his big league career with Cleveland in 1911, going from there to Cincinnati and arriving at Brooklyn in 1915 where he has played ever since.

MACKENZIE WINS FIRST CANADIAN RACQUET VICTORY

Montreal, Jan. 24.—Phil Mackenzie, Montreal, gained the first Canadian victory in the Canadian amateur racquets championships today when he defeated L. Dupont Irving, New York, three games to one. The scores were 15-9, 14-17, 15-7, 15-3.

It took Clarence C. Pell, New York, Canadian champion in 1921-1922, just 20 minutes to dispose of H. C. Clark of Boston in straight sets, 15-3, 15-3, 15-4.

Stanley Mortimer, New York, eliminated G. D. Turpin, Montreal, 15-4, 9-15, 15-4, 15-1.

Campbell is Recovering.

Boston, Jan. 24.—"Alec Ajax" Campbell, Boston Athletic association hockey team defense star, whose injury in last night's game with the Maple A. A. made necessary an operation and 22 stitches in his thigh today, will regain the use of his muscles and tendons but may not be able to return to the game this season, physicians said after the operation.

AMERICAN SKATERS WANT ANOTHER TRAINER ADMITTED

Chamonix, France, Jan. 24 (By the A. P.)—Serious differences have arisen in the Olympic skating competitions, involving the Americans who, as the situation appeared tonight, may not take part in the speed events on Saturday. There is a dispute over the granting of an extra trainer's badge for use by Clarence Carman, American professional bicycle rider, whom William Taylor, the American manager, insists shall be permitted to act as a trainer during the games. The French Olympic committee has refused such permission.

If the deadlock continues between Mr. Taylor and the French Olympic committee, the participation of the American speed skaters is considered extremely doubtful unless some eleventh-hour formula is found to reconcile the opposing positions.

The members of the American team are unanimous in upholding Taylor. They say his word is law to them and that they will not take the ice if he maintains his present order.

Allen H. Muhr, in behalf of the French Olympic committee, expressed deep regret at the unfortunate incident, saying: "I am sorry, but we cannot allow the Americans privileges not granted to other teams. If we permit three American trainers, the French will want six."

Despite the strained situation Manager Taylor sent his boys over the usual ten miles jaunt this morning, with gymnasium work in the afternoon, the condition of the skating rink not yet permitting ice practice, and Manager Taylor being desirous to keep his charges up to the best possible form, so that they will not be caught napping should the differences be settled.

The American hockey players also did road work. The probabilities are that the weather will turn colder. The temperature is now about freezing and it is expected that the ice will be fit for training tomorrow.

The Finns are the only team to get any ice skating practice in the past two days. Two American correspondents, having been informed that Thunberg, the European champion, Skutnabb and Vallenius had been abroad on a mysterious outing Wednesday morning, kept early vigil outside the modest boarding house sheltering the Baltic athletes, and at 7 o'clock this morning saw them emerge and proceed to a mountain just above Chamonix. In a little gulch at an altitude 400 or 500 feet higher than the Olympic rink, they found a pond frozen hard. The three skaters representing Finland donned their skates and raced one another for a solid hour. Thunberg is a whirlwind, and will be hard to beat.

With the arrival of the British and Swedish athletes today all the nations entered in the winter sports have their full teams on the ground. The organizers are praying for cold weather, so that the skating competitions may be started on schedule time. The bob-sleigh chute and ski jumps, although sticky and sloggy, can be used now owing to the snow brought down from the higher slopes of Mont Blanc. The Norwegian and Swedish skiers in practice this afternoon cleared between forty and fifty metres.

NORWICH TRAP-SHOOTERS LOSE FIRST MATCH TO DANIELSON GUN CLUB

The Norwich Golf club trap-shooting team lost the first leg of the trap-shooting match with the Danielson Rod and Gun club Thursday afternoon at the local traps by a score of 459 to 428. The day was ideal for the sport and some good scores were made by the Danielson team.

Moore of the Danielson club had high gun with 97 out of a possible 100. Berriman, also of the Danielson squad was second high. The last leg of the match will be held at the Danielson club's traps in two weeks. This match is for a silver cup which has been put up as the prize. The Norwich shooters will have to pick up 36 points to secure an even break and then will have to break a few more pigeons to win the cup.

The members of the Danielson team were the guests of the Norwich team at luncheon at the Wauregan hotel before the match. This is the first step made by the local club to revive the inter-city trap-shooting matches that were so popular here a few years ago. Chairman J. C. Worth is trying to arrange other matches with teams from other gun clubs in the eastern part of the state.

HOPPE WANTS MATCH WITH HOREMANS POSTPONED

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Willie Hoppe, world's champion 18.2 balkline billiard player, is seeking a postponement of his title match against Edouard Horemans, the Belgian challenger, which under the rules must be played within 60 days.

Hoppe said tonight he would demand that the match be postponed until April, and that he wanted to meet the Belgian star either in New York or Philadelphia.

"I have defended my title three times in thirty days and it is asking too much to expect me to play Horemans within 60 days," Hoppe said.

Horemans, who finished fourth in the international tournament at New York, has posted his forfeit.

STORRS HENS GAIN IN EGG LAYING

In the twelfth week of the Storrs egg laying contest the leading pens of all four breeds retained the relative positions which they gained last week. There was a general increase in egg production in all breeds over last week. The total number of eggs laid during the week being 5302 or a yield of 47.8 per cent. This represents a gain of 183 eggs over last week's record and a gain of 1129 eggs over the eight year average for the same week when no lights were used. The Leghorns as a group continued to lead in number of eggs laid to date although the heavy breeds, especially the Reds, are now beginning to overtake the Leghorns. The leading pen for the week was Fernside Farm's Rhode Island Reds from Attleboro, Massachusetts, which laid 55 eggs. Witmer's White Wyandottes from Joplin, Missouri, were a close second with 53 eggs followed by three pens of Leghorns which laid 50, 50 and 48 eggs respectively, and owned by M. Johnson, Waldoboro, Maine, W. E. Atkinson, Wallingford, and Mountain Meadow Farm at West Rutland, Vermont.

Some idea of the effects of electric lights on the average egg production and relative standing of the breeds at this time of year may be gained from the accompanying table which compares the average December production by breeds of all fowls in the nine contests from 1911 to 1919 when no lights were used, with the average production for the last month

Plymouth Rocks	4.7	11.9
Wyandottes	5.2	12.5
Rhode Island Reds	7.4	11.6
Leghorns	9.4	16.1

The two striking differences between the earlier years and this year are the general increase of 1924 over previous years and the change in the standing of the breeds. Before lights were used the Wyandottes led during December, while under lights the Leghorns have by far the highest December production. Electric lights have tended to make the Leghorns equal or surpass the heavy breeds as winter producers.

LIONS ARE SOON TO CELEBRATE CHARTER NIGHT

At the meeting of the Norwich Lions club held Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel, President George A. Finn gave a stirring talk to the members, urging them on to make a great success of the benefit concert to be given by Grace Sage and the Philharmonic orchestra. He stressed the fact that all money made through the concert was to go to the Newington Home for Crippled Children.

The meeting was in charge of President Finn, and Rudolph Henschell was song leader, a number of popular numbers being enjoyed. David Kerr, a new member of the club, received the right hand of fellowship from President Finn, and the guests for the day were Josiah Greenstein of Norwich and E. H. Barnes of New London.

Plans were discussed for the purchase of permanent badges to be worn by members at each meeting, and it was announced that a banner would be ready when the club celebrated Charter Night, in the near future. A committee was appointed to work for this event, and another committee was named to cooperate with the Boy Scout budget work.

At the close of the meeting the members pledged themselves to make the Grace Sage benefit entertainment a success, after which the Star Spangled Banner was sung and the meeting closed with the salute to the flag.

Officers were reelected as follows: Leader, Miss Margaret Lane; vice leader Miss Jessie Wilbur; secretary, Miss Clara F. Griswold; treasurer, Miss Hattie Carter.

It is easier to teach babies to talk than it is to teach some men not to.

THE PREVAILING SPIRIT OF GRASPING GREED.

(Written Specially For The Bulletin.)

"What do I get out of this?" "What is there in it for me?" Those, in more or less similar forms, seem to be the mottoes of "Business America."

"How many dollars a day can I demand?" "How few hours work a day can I get by with?" Those seem to be the mottoes of "Industrial America."

There are probably exceptions in both camps. But, taking things by and large, as the saying goes, these expressions appear to be the fairest average one can get of the governing sentiment. Certainly, they are the most frequently heard wherever men of either class are gathered together. And it may be taken for granted, I think, that no man ever deliberately puts his worst foot first. If the foot he puts on exhibition is a chill-blained and bunioned and swollen deformity, we may safely assume that the other one is as bad—if not worse.

"I'm not in business for my health," coolly says a small retailer of my acquaintance, as his only defense and explanation for charging forty cents a pound for the cheese which costs him a little over twenty cents, and which another dealer, seven miles away, is selling for thirty. He "figgers" on the assumption that people won't spend twenty cents' worth of gasoline, oil, etc., driving seven miles and back to save ten cents on a pound of cheese. And they say he is "getting away with it."

"No, I can't afford to cut wood for you: my time is worth 50 cents an hour." That is the answer of another neighbor, a laboring man, dependent on his daily earnings for his livelihood. He isn't working half the time, for the excellent reason that no farmer can pay such wages, except at occasional employment under the drive of pressing emergency. But no won't occupy the idle half in productive labor, cutting my winter's wood, unless I pay him as much, per hour, as Neighbor Sherman paid him, two days last week, when Sherman had to bale and deliver twenty tons of hay at twenty-four hours' notice.

Across the swamp from me, on the opposite hill, a professional woodcutter is putting up cord-wood for another neighbor. He is getting $3.75 a day. I have known him for many years. He can and regularly used to cut, split and cord up from two to three cords a day, when he was paid by the job—$1 a cord. Now, he is cutting and piling from three-quarters of a cord to a cord a day. And he won't cut by the cord, any more.

So it goes and so it is, in all branches of business and industry. The question asked by the workers is no longer, "How much can I produce in a given time?" but "How little can I produce in the fewest possible hours and get by with it?"

The question asked by dealers, country-storekeepers, etc., doesn't seem to be "How can I most efficiently serve this community at reasonable profit to myself?" but "How much can I gouge out of this helpless herd without driving them to revolt?"

Of course, as I have already said, there are exceptions to this. I know one—just one—wage-earner who is busy all the time, at whatever work he can get. Of course, the man who can offer him $3.25 a day gets first choice. But when that job's done and no other at equal wages offers, he takes the next best available, even if it doesn't come to $3 a day. And I have heard of one small retailer who had on hand a lot of cotton goods bought before the recent rise in cotton prices. He paid a certain sum for them. They were marked to sell at prices which gave him twenty per cent. profit. And he sold them, to the last, at those prices, though the market advance in cottons would have permitted him—and did permit others—to advance their price-marks till they netted profits of fifty and sixty per cent.

But both these cases are exceptional. There are white blackbirds and there are dealers like this one. They're both sufficiently uncommon to be regarded almost as museum specimens. Similarly, there are laborers who still consider the capable doing of the day's work of more importance than the hours spent at it or the wages received. They, too, go in the white blackbird class.

Not long ago, a very interesting item was going the rounds about a certain Bostonian. This man, now well on in years, has never earned more than $12 a week. On this small wage he and his hard-working, thrifty wife have brought up and educated nine healthy children. It is pleasant to know that neither he nor his wife have to work any more, for all the nine children are now grown up and all employed. Their total weekly income aggregates $360, and they're "taking care of father and mother," first of all. Which, while of course no more than right, is yet something which isn't always done.

Meantime, I'm wondering. You see, if those nine children earn, all together, $360 a week, that's an average of $40 a week each. Probably some earn more and some less, but that's the average. What I'm wondering about is how many of them will raise and educate nine more children? How many, at $40 a week, will feel themselves able to afford such families as father and mother brought up on $12 a week?

Now don't think I'm trying that nonsensical old-man's foolery about the "good old times." I can remember some sixty years with fair accuracy. And I can't remember a time when there weren't skinflints and scatterbrains and scalawags in plenty—enough to go 'round and some to spare. There simply never were any extraordinary "good old times." Anyway, whatever they were, they've passed, and our interest in them is purely historical. What we are and properly ought to be interested in is the present time.

This present time and the people who live in and make it ought to be wiser and saner and better than those of any past time. They must be if the world is to move forward and upward in its course with the ages. Instead of which the men who produce and the men who distribute seem almost all to have turned their backs squarely on all the lessons which the past taught.

They have chosen for their models, not the wise and prudent and foresighted and public-serving men of the past, but the skinflints and scalawags of that past. They have substituted selfishness for service, and rapacity for thrift.

The past had in it both Benjamin Franklins and Aaron Burrs. It is our fault, and not the past's, if we imitate the latter rather than the former. "The state? I am the state," fatuously ranted the French king, over whose doomed line the shadow of the guillotine was even then lowering. "Business? I am the business," say too many industrial leaders today, forgetting that, as kings are ordained only to serve the state, so business is honorable only in so far as serves the public.

I don't know when I've sniggered any more comfortably over a bit of satire than over a recent comment by Col. Bailey of the Houston, Texas, Post on the prevalent attitude of the great American public as he sees it. He says this is about the burden of our daily prayer:

"O Government, give us this day our daily pap, clothe us, doctor us, wipe our noses, wash our duds, plant the congressional seed for us, hoe our gardens, put the bait on our hooks, reform us, nurse our babies and rub the bacon rind on our chiggers."

While this is aimed at the political blocs which are trying to cajole or coerce the government into starting special nurseries for specially favored classes, it applies, in a broader way, to the whole trend of business and labor.

While the political bosses are trying to divert to their own or their friends' benefit that which belongs to the whole people, "labor" is grasping greedily after wages it hasn't earned, and the distributors of labor's products are gobbling down profits they haven't given any return for.

In the meantime, everything is "going up," from taxes to toothpicks. We can't live as we want to unless we get more money from somewhere. We can't even die without imposing a steadily rising expense on our heirs or our friends. Talk about it's costing so much to live! It's getting so one can hardly afford to be born or to die!

And the whole wretched muss is due almost solely to the prevailing spirit of grasping greed which makes both leaders and led, both servants and served, both earners and spenders try to "hog" to themselves what should be shared with all.

No, I'm no socialist. Nor am I denouncing selfishness. That quality is as universal as the common air, and flows through every vein in which human blood circulates. It is really the main spring of all human endeavor and is found at the base of nearly all human virtues.

But there is a wide difference between the innate and on-spurring selfishness which leads one to strive for all that honorably he may win, and the rapacious greed which not only grabs everything within its reach but also stretches out after the fruits which hang on other folks' apple-trees. It is that latter which seems to mark the manners and morals of the crowd, today. And its unrestricted exercise means not only present discomfort, but future misery. Not only to those who exercise it but quite as certainly to those who are its victims.

For the sake of the future, fellow farmers, let us keep out of that game. Even if we find ourselves in a minority, despised and denounced, let's keep out of it! Even if we are driven to living like hermits, each on the frugal yields of his self-cultivated fields let's keep out of it! Even if we have to go without many things we want and some things we really need, let's keep out of it!

There are worse things than being in a minority. Said Wendell Phillips: "One on God's side is a majority." The slavocracy sneered when he said that. But they had stopped sneering when the morning of Appomattox dawned.

There are worse things than being poor. Getting rich with what justly belongs to other men is one thing that is worse.

There are worse things than going without what we want. The dishonorable taking of what the other fellow owns and needs is worse.

There are worse things than being hungry. Being a hog, for one.

"This, too, will pass." Sometimes men, suffering what seemed almost unbearable pain, have found strength and courage to endure it for the time by repeating that phrase: "This, too, will pass."

But, in the name of common sense, don't do anything, meanwhile, to add poignancy to the suffering!

THE FARMER.

LEDYARD

The sudden passing from this life of Frederick B. Clark of Groton which occurred in the hospital at New London Sunday has cast gloom over this town where he and his wife were born and lived until they were married and moved away. Mr. Clark was the son of the late Alfred J. and Mary Cooley Clark. Mrs. Clark was the daughter of James N. and the late Phebe Finnegan Holdridge. Mr. Clark leaves his wife and seven children, Fred Jr., Edith May, Helen Holdridge, Edester, Pauline Stella, Robert James and Ruth Lillian, a sister, Mrs. Everett Thompson of Ledyard, two brothers, Joseph A. Clark of Ledyard and Albert Clark of New Hampshire.

Mr. Clark had three fingers amputated by a buzz saw while sawing wood. He was rushed to the Lawrence hospital where an operation was performed. Later a change for the worse occurred and death quickly followed.

Mr. Clark was a kind father and a husband and all speak in highest terms of him.

The funeral services were held at Noank Baptist church Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Charles A. Merrill, pastor of the church, officiated, and spoke comforting words to the relatives. There were beautiful flowers and the church was nearly filled with relatives and friends. The bearers were Elmer Hewitt, Carl Frazier, Harry Holdridge, Charles Rowland, Maurice Holdridge and Joseph A. Clark. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery, Mystic.

LEONARD BRIDGE

Edward W. Jones attended the annual meeting of the Connecticut Farm Bureau association in Hartford on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. David Walsh, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Otto A. Nettleton and Miss Grace E. Nettleton, of Lebanon, were in Willimantic on Saturday evening. Mrs. Walsh and her cousin, John G. Kneeland of Lebanon were in Willimantic and Columbia on business Saturday.

Frank Barbee Jr., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Alderson of Kansas City, Missouri, is the grandson of William B. and the late Mrs. Hattie Kneeland Loomis, former residents of this place.

Monday morning the mercury was at 8 degrees above zero and Tuesday morning it was zero. Some change from the warm days and muddy roads!

The William H. Kneeland farm on Pine street, Columbia, which had belonged to Mr. Kneeland for over forty years, recently changed hands. Mr. Jake Berkowitz, the present owner, having the house shingled by Charles Carpenter of this place. Mr. Kneeland has made his home with his daughters in Hartford for the past two years.

FOR THE COUGH THAT STICKS

Cheap and Best

For any kind of a cough, but especially for the stubborn one that persists and keeps you awake nights this home made cough mixture will quickly loosen the phlegm, allay the inflammation and stop the cough.

You can make it yourself at home in two minutes by following these instructions:

Get from any druggist one ounce of Parmint (double strength) — to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one half pint —that's all there is to it, and children like it.

Like a soothing, healing poultice one costly substance in this home made mixture spreads itself completely over the membrane of the throat. This causes the most stubborn hang-on cough to cease almost instantly. No ordinary slow-acting cough syrup contains this expensive ingredient.

It's a mighty fine remedy for chest colds and acute nasal catarrh, and remember that any remedy that overcomes catarrh, partially or wholly, is bound to be of benefit to those who are troubled with head noises and catarrhal deafness.

New Head U. S. Emergency Fleet Corporation

Rear Admiral Leigh C. Palmer, U. S. N., just made President of the U. S. Emergency Fleet Corporation. At the same time the control and operation of government-owned tonnage was divorced from the U. S. Shipping Board and placed with the Corporation, the new plan virtually relegating the Shipping Board to the role of a regulatory and advisory agency—the Administration's first step in the formation of a definite merchant marine policy. The post of member and Chairman of the Shipping Board, for which Admiral Palmer was originally slated, remains unfilled at the moment. It is expected that one of the present members of the Board will be made Chairman.

WESTERLY

At 1.15 Thursday noon, the fire whistle of the Pawcatuck fire department was blown from Box 51, corner of Lincoln avenue and West Broad street, for a fire on the south slope of the roof of the Holdrege garage on Chase street, occupied on the lower floor by the machine shop of John Thavenet. The fire was discovered by C. A. Freeman as he came from the office of the wet wash laundry in company with others and he immediately sounded the alarm from the fire alarm box. Extinguishers of Mr. Thavenet were carried to the roof and until the arrival of the P. S. Barber Hose company, their contents prevented the spread of the flames which had probably been caused by locomotive sparks or paper from a nearby chimney. A hose line was quickly laid from the hydrant on West Broad street and the stream of water made short work of the flames. Three holes were burned through the shingle roof which let some of the chemical and water down on several automobiles stored on the second floor. Some of the water found its way to the first floor, wetting the machinery and tools in the Thavenet shop. The total fire and water damage was not great.

Rev. Dwight C. Stone, of Stonington, conducted the services at the funeral of Edward L. Mawson, at his home, 138 High street. The services were largely attended. The bearers were Walter H. Davis, Millard Clarke, Steven Cusick and J. Bell. Burial was in the First Hopkinton cemetery.

William Tufiach of Vase Bros., was called to his home in Beverly, Mass., Thursday morning by the serious illness of his mother.

W. W. Tapley of Springfield, Mass., who occupies Casa Loma, at Watch Hill every summer, was a Westerly visitor Wednesday.

Henry H. Leonard of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrived in Westerly Wednesday noon for a visit.

Mrs. H. H. Doty of Stonington borough was a Westerly visitor Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Tingley Wall of Providence, summer visitors at Watch Hill, left Providence Thursday for New York, and will sail on Saturday for South America and later in the season for Europe.

Frank L. Burns of the West Side was in Providence Thursday.

V. Harold Kenyon returned Wednesday from a visit to Hartford.

S. Irving Maxson, Jr., was an automobile business visitor in Norwich Wednesday.

Charles J. Greene, of Kenyon, the town treasurer of the town of Richmond, was a business caller in Westerly and Pawcatuck Thursday.

William I. Gummerson of Longmeadow, R. I., visited in Westerly Wednesday.

B. J. Cristy has entered the employ of the Mohican market, Westerly.

A special meeting of the Westerly town council is to be held Thursday evening next.

Miss H. Louise Ayers, of Westerly has purchased from William H. Sawyers a lot of land with buildings and improvements at Weekapaug.

On Wednesday, Representative Samuel H. Davis, of Westerly, declared himself as opposed to the creation of budget commissions in cities and towns, as proposed in the Pelkey bill which was defeated that day in the senate. Thursday afternoon at a public hearing before the house special legislation committee, he advocated the abolishing of property qualification.

The annual inspection of Westerly lodge, No. 678, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, took place in the lodge rooms on High street Wednesday. The official inspection was made by District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler James G. Connelly of Pawtucket, who was accompanied by Grand Esquire Dr. Frank Clarke, also of Pawtucket and suite of 20 grand officers.

The officers of Westerly lodge are: Exalted ruler, Harold F. Doyle; esteemed leading knight, Harold Barber; esteemed loyal knight, James W. McCormick; lecturing knight, William Donovan; secretary, M. Walter Flynn; treasurer, R. J. Butler, Jr.; esquire, Al J. Twomey; chaplain, Richard F. Lenihan; inner guard, John Schiller; tyler, Thomas H. Donovan.

Following the inspection work of the evening the district deputy and suite were entertained at a turkey dinner at the inn. Some 250 members and guests were present at the inspection.

Allotted from current river and harbor funds by the United States army engineer on Wednesday was $25,000 for the improvement of the Pawcatuck river channel. Just how this allotment for improvement is to be used has not been stated. Advantage has been taken of the open weather and dredging both in middle Narragansett bay and Pawcatuck river has proceeded during the fall and winter months under previous appropriations, until operations were suspended a few weeks ago.

MANSFIELD CENTER

The annual meeting of the First Congregational church was held Friday evening with an attendance of about 80 members and friends. PLAINFIELD

One of the worst pieces of road in the entire town is a short stretch of roadway on Babcock street not far from the post office. There is here such a system of deep ruts that it looks like a garden ploughed for the spring sowing and it stirs up the ire of all who pass over it. This bit of road has often been repaired but evidently has not received the right treatment for the peculiar condition which exists at this point.

A banking system similar to that recently introduced into the grammar schools of the town is this week being introduced into the high school. The book keeping classes under the supervision of Mr. Nelson have charge of the deposits made by members of the school. It is hoped the students will learn the lesson of thrift. This idea at the same time will give practical work to the book keeping classes. Schools in other states have done well in carrying out this scheme and it is expected Plainfield will compare favorably with other schools in this regard.

A good-sized appreciative audience at the Community house Tuesday evening enjoyed a fine entertainment put on by the Community association. The program consisted of a reading by Miss Elizabeth Garrett Whitney of Boston, an artist of wide reputation. Tuesday evening, Miss Whitney gave "The Man From Home" by Booth Tarkington, arranging her presentation in four acts. The audience showed deep interest in her vivid interpretation of the varied characters of the book and easily followed her to the splendid climaxes at the close of each act. Miss Whitney has wonderful talent revealed in her stage presence, musical voice and charm of manner, as she interprets the most difficult character with ease.

Between the acts the audience was entertained by musical numbers. The Plainfield male quartet, Ray W. Greene, James Royle, Sidney Matheweon and Christopher Krauss with Alfred Royle accompanist, gave several selections and were well received. There were banjo selections by Arthur Crisfield, accompanied by William Stanton at the piano.

By DAVID CORY

Doing As He Is Told

Now, let's put our heads together and see if we can remember where we left off in the last story. Oh, yes, I know, Little Jack Rabbit was making the Flower of Youth, and he and Dapple Gray had just reached the great stone cross in the forest.

Well, by and by, not so very long, the little star sheep right down into the pool of water near to the stone cross. All of a sudden, a little fish, his scales shining like silver and his eyes glowing like red rubies lifted his head out of the water.

"Listen, bunny boy, I know you are making the Flower of Youth. But be who seeks may not find" and twinkling his ruby red eyes, the little fish gave his tail a flicker, sending the water flying in sparkling drops over the grass.

Still the bunny boy made no reply, knowing this to be no ordinary fish. Perhaps he might be a magician in disguise, or maybe a prince. Well, anyway, in a few minutes the fish spoke again:

"Follow the moon's path down the glen,
Till you come to an old dead tree, and then
Inside of its hollow trunk you'll see,
Tied to a silken cord, a key."

The next instant, the fish disappeared and although the little rabbit peeped into the pool, he could find no trace of him.

"Hop on my back, little master," said Dapple Gray. "Let us wait no longer but follow the instructions of the fish."

With a hop, skip and jump the bunny boy reached the saddle and away trotted the pony, down the moon's path that lay like a silver strip upon the ground. By and by, they reached a dead tree. Pushing his paw into the hollow opening, Little Jack Rabbit found the key, sure enough. Just as the fish had promised.

"But what am I to do with it?" he asked out loud.

"Follow the brook till you come to a door
In the side of a rocky wall.
Have a care that your steed in wading the brook
Does not slip on its pebbly floor" answered a big owl from a limb above.

"Never fear," replied Dapple Gray, trotting out of the wood to follow the brook through the meadow where the fairies and elves were dancing in the moonlight. But on seeing the bunny boy on his little pony they hid themselves. They didn't know he was a friend of their queen, you see.

Well, by and by, the land grew rough and stony. Great, high mountains rose on either side, and the little brook foamed and splashed as it fell over the rocks. All of a sudden, as they turned to the right, they came face to face with a high stone wall. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

WEST KINGSTON

The meetings held in the church last week, under the supervision of the Brotherhood of Calvary Baptist church, Providence, were well attended. The house was crowded every evening, excepting Wednesday, the night of the storm. People from Perryville, Point Judith, Providence, Kingston, Wakefield and Usquepaugh were in attendance.

Rev. C. H. Palmer and mother of Usquepaugh attended church Thursday evening. When they got home, about 10 p. m., they found their home had been entered and ransacked high and low, $115 in money taken, a gold watch and chain belonging to Mrs. Palmer, also rings and other valuables. The thieves were apparently frightened away for they had selected the silverware, put it in a satchel, but left it. The front door was left open. They opened the back door with a false key, it is thought. Mr. Palmer's place was only one the since J. S. Murdock's, Isaac Prosser, Mrs. Caroline Palmer's and the Barley houses, were entered. These houses are used in summer but closed during the winter. Little of value was taken at these houses, but about one and a half miles from Usquepaugh the house of Steven Brown was entered. Money and valuables were taken. The family was away from 5.30 to 7.30 that evening. During the absence their house was entered. At Mr. Brown's house the thieves took a pair of his shoes which were possibly not even worn.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Watson entertained Mrs. C. T. Cottrell, J. J. Cottrell, Jr., and Everett E. Kenyon on Sunday.

S. C. Webster Jr., of Westerly spent Sunday with relatives here.

E. K. Wilcox and E. C. Kenyon were at Hope Valley Sunday.

W. K. Crandall and family of Kingston were callers on E. H. Brinton and family Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Annie K. Webster and Miss Mildred were callers at Wakeman's Saturday.

John L. Brisse was at Slocum on Tuesday.

Mrs. Grant of Providence spent Sunday with Miss Katherine Mackintosh.

Mrs. Mary McElroy spent Monday in Providence.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Jan. 24. — Believing that the fire that gutted the confectionery store conducted by Nathan Zweibel at 138 Willetts avenue Tuesday night, was of incendiary origin, the New London police are investigating. Today Sergeant Nelson Smith was engaged obtaining information tending to show that the fire was the work of an incendiary. The officer ascertained that the blaze started in the front part of the store and away from a stove. He also learned that Zweibel also increased his insurance recently to an amount greatly in excess of the value of his stock and fixtures at the time of the blaze.

James H. Clarkin, of Hartford, who purchased Plant field, the former home of the New London Baseball club when this city was represented in the Eastern league, and who has since caused the tract to be cut up into streets and building lots, some of the tracts with residences erected upon them, today sold to David B. and Ethel S. Clark a house and lot, corner of Montauk avenue and Plant street.

A youth of 17, who declared that he resided in New York, was taken into custody this morning, charged with evading railroad fare. He was locked up pending a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning when he will probably be delivered to the custody of Probation Officer Richard Mansfield who will see to it that the youth is provided transportation.

The youth was penniless in Providence this forenoon and was trying to get back home and in order to do so he boarded the New Haven railroad train due to arrive here at 11.08 o'clock. Being without a ticket or funds when the conductor approached him for his fare, the boy was turned over to Special Agent Louis Green of the railroad police upon the arrival of the train at the union station. When searched at the police station the youth cried pitifully, his only desire being to get where he started from a couple of weeks ago.

The fire department was called out this morning in response to an alarm rung in from Box 18, corner of Williams street and Mohegan avenue for a blaze that threatened to destroy the automobile service station owned by J. B. Getchell of Williams street. The fire was discovered when the roof of the structure was observed burning briskly and fanned by a high wind the roof was quickly enveloped in flames. An alarm was sent in and Getchell fought the fire with a hand extinguisher until the firemen arrived, his action holding the blaze somewhat in check. With the arrival of the department the fire was attacked with chemicals and was quickly subdued. It is believed the fire originated through sparks from a chimney falling upon the roof.

Traffic Patrolman William Corcoran, who was responding to the alarm was painfully injured being thrown from the police automobile. When the machine left for the fire, Corcoran was standing on the running board. In rounding the corner at Williams and Main street Corcoran was thrown from the machine, the wheels of the car passing over the officer's left ankle. Corcoran was so painfully bruised that he was removed to his home on Jefferson avenue.

Mrs. Everett Davenport of Bank street, Mrs. Albion Holmes of Oakdale and Mrs. George Thayer and infant son, of Franklin street, were patients discharged at Lawrence hospital today.

The funeral of Miss Mary McGuire of 32 Hempstead street, New London visiting nurse, who dropped dead of heart disease several days ago, was held this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large number of mourners. The high mass of requiem was sung by Rev. Alexander Wolfschlaeger. The bearers were James Callahan, Timothy O'Neill, John Callahan, James Dwyer, Daniel Callahan and Edward McEnaney. Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

Russel Nye, 15, a student at Bulkeley High school, died this morning at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Erskine of Station 20, Waterford. The young man had been an invalid because of heart trouble for many weeks.

The funeral of Mrs. Grace Mahler, wife of William F. Mahler of Gales Ferry, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home and was attended by many mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. Myron E. Genter, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of New London. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the operators' licenses of three New London auto owners to be returned to them. They are A. Sterrett Matthews of 115 Broad street, Peter Alband of 91 Truman street and Clifford J. Shields of 13 Town Hill court. The licenses were suspended recently for alleged violations of the automobile laws.

Four automobiles were stolen in New Haven last night and today a fifth machine was taken from there by thieves. Anticipating that the thieves might attempt to escape by driving through New London, the New Haven authorities have requested the New London police to be on the lookout for the crooks.

Mrs. Charles A. Pinney, wife of Captain of Police Pinney, has returned to her home on Howard street, having spent several days with her sister, Mrs. H. C. Coggswell of Hartford.

Patrolman Timothy T. Sullivan, who has long been ill with asthma at his home on Montauk avenue, is improving steadily, but the improvement is slow. It will be several weeks before the officer is able to resume patrol duty.

The condition of Andrew J. Maher, who has been critically ill at his home on Broad street several months from a complication of diseases, is gradually becoming more serious. The patient is extremely weak and at times is irrational.

The annual banquet of the T. L. Allen Hook and Ladder company took place this evening at the company's clubhouse at Richards' Grove and was enjoyed by a representative number of members and many guests, including members of the city council. Councilor Thomas F. Gregan, who is also foreman of the company was toastmaster. At the conclusion of the speech making several hours of sociability were enjoyed.

Mrs. John A. Hislop has returned to her home on Nathan Hale street after having spent several weeks with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hamilton of Dover, N. J.

Leon Murray of Buffalo, N. Trolley service on the Groton road was at a standstill for nearly an hour this morning, as a result of a broken feed wire. As a result commuters to New London were held a lengthy period, during which time some of them were passengers on trolley cars that became stalled at different points along the line. The stalling of the cars also caused great annoyance and inconvenience to passengers who were waiting in the cold for the arrival of the cars.

Beck. The place was raided following a watch being maintained of it several nights and caught in the police net were both blacks and whites. The women found in the place have followed the instructions of the court to leave the city, but the male whites found in the place are still about town, having legitimate employment here.

The state pier late today presented the most lonesome and barren appearance that has been the case since the world war, for three ships, one of them moored there three years, were taken in tow by tugs and the trip through the sound was started. The steamers were the Hopatchung, Manham and Potomac. The first named craft which was constructed at the Groton Iron works, had been at the pier since November 1920, the Potomac since May 1922 and the Manham since June 1921. The steamers are to be towed to New York, where they will be hauled out and refitted for foreign service. The craft are under the supervision and control of the United States Shipping board.

PARTISAN DEBATE ON TAXES IN THE HOUSE

Washington, Jan. 24.—The first partisan debate on taxes on the floor of the house today provoked a move by republican members of the ways and means committee to write their own income tax rates, which some predicted would place a bill before the house on substantially the lines suggested by Secretary Mellon.

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, a republican member of the committee, made the proposal after Representative Garner, of Texas, ranking democrat on the committee, had declared in the course of the debate that the Mellon bill would not pass in the house "even if left to a vote of the republicans alone," and that President Coolidge would not veto a tax bill carrying the higher surtax rates of the democratic plan.

The committee continued discussions of the new excise rates and tentatively agreed to repeal the taxes on telegraph and telephone messages, leased wires and candy. This would result in a loss of $44,000,000 in revenue, it was estimated. Final changes in these rates will be determined tomorrow, with proposals to repeal the taxes on automobile trucks and parts, theatre admissions and various other articles before the committee. The committee agreed to limit changes in these rates so that the loss in revenue would be held to $120,000,000.

While the debate proceeded in the house, upon being opened by a prepared speech of Representative Mills, republican, New York, defending the Mellon bill, Senator Jones, democrat, New Mexico, brought the democratic plan for tax revision before the senate and criticized Secretary Mellon's description of it as "insincere and political." Senator Johnson, of California, a candidate for the presidential republican nomination, also assailed the Mellon bill in a statement.

MARKET WAS STRONG

New York, Jan. 24—Buying orders were well distributed in today's stock market and the general list moved upwards without much difficulty until just before the close when a partial reaction set in on the latest disclosures in the senate investigation of naval oil leases. Resumption of pool operations in various sections of the list, based on a series of favorable trade advices, brought about extensive short covering, net gains in a number of the active issues ranging from 1 to nearly 4 1-2 points.

Steel shares were buoyant on reports that orders were now exceeding shipments and that the trend of metal prices was again upward. U. S. Steel common touched 101 1-2 and closed slightly below that figure for a net gain of more than 1 point. Republic moved up 1 3-4 and Bethlehem, Crucible and Gulf States improved fractionally. Total net earnings of the Bethlehem corporation, made public after the market closed, were $37,873,228 last year as against $19,793,712 the year before.

American Can was the leader of the so-called "big four", touching a record high at 110 3-4. Baldwin touched 126 3-4 on reports of a large order but it slipped back later to 124 5-8, where it was up 1 3-4 on the day. Studebaker crossed 103 and then eased to 102 2-8 up 5-8.

High priced specialties again attracted interest. Corn Products jumped five points to 179 1-2, another new record high. National Lead crossed 150, also a record price, and then slid back to 148 up 3 1-4 and United Fruit advanced 3 points to 191 on publication of the 1923 annual report showing earnings of $23.09 a share on the common as against $18.85 in 1922.

Pan-American issues spurted upward in the early dealings on the announcement of President Wylie of Mexican Petroleum that the company had resumed production in districts where the rebel activities had forced a suspension. Pan-American A. touched 53 1-4 and the B. 51 3-4, but upon publication of the testimony of President Doheny that he loaned former Secretary of the Interior Fall $100,000, they broke to 50 3-8 and 49 1-8 respectively, closing slightly above those figures for small net gains on the day. Maracaibo touched a record top at 36 1-4.

Special buying took place in Phillip Morris o nreports that the company had closed negotiations for the handling of another well known brand of cigarette. Prospects of higher sugar prices and increased earnings accounted for the strength of the sugar stocks, South Porto Rican closing 3 1-2 higher, Manati gaining 3 and Cuba Cane preferred 2 3-8.

Rails again lagged behind the industrials. Buying of Frisco preferred was said to be based on speculative expectation of benefits likely to accrue from the discovery of oil on that road's land grants.

Call money ruled unchanged at four per cent. Time money rates softened slightly, nor funds being available at 4 1-2 per cent. for the shorter maturities.

Demand sterling rallied more than a cent to $4.22, other foreign exchanges holding fairly steady. The Japanese rate, which has been heavy lately, showed moderate improvement.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 24—Buying of liberty bonds, stimulated by an abundance of cheap money and prospects that the Mellon tax reduction plan will be accepted today sent the third 4 1-4s to par for the first time since 1922. Other U. S. government and treasury issues also were strong.

An advance of convertible copper and sugar bonds, influenced by favorable trade conditions, also featured today's trading. Activity centered in the Anaconda, Magma Copper and Cerro De Pasco issues. The convertible 8s of the latter company recording a 4 point gain. With prospects of a big sugar crop this season, Punta Alegre, Manati and Eastern Cuba Sugar bonds all moved to higher ground.

Gains of these issues, however, constituted about the only strong spots in the industrial list and were offset by losses in Virginia-Carolina Chemical liens, based on reports of smaller earnings and reduced prices, and by weakness in Sinclair Consolper 8s and U. S. Steel 5s. Bethlehem dated Oil 7s, American Writing Pa. Steel 5 1-2s, however, made a substantial gain.

An improved demand was manifest for the railroad issues, St. Paul bonds displaying renewed strength after the recent wave of profit taking. Activity in Serbian 8s, which advanced 2 points, provided the only interest in the foreign group.

Prospects of new financing were limited to a $6,000,000 issue of Continental Paper & Bag Mills 20-year bonds and $4,000,000 of United Railways & Electric Co. obligations.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—All deliveries of corn and oats went to a new high price record for the season today and helped to strengthen wheat. The upturn appeared to be based largely on belief that government action in the northwest would put an end to fear of forced liquidation of grain. Corn closed strong, 3-4@1 5-8 net higher; May 80 5-8@3-4 to 80 3-4@78; oats 3-4 to 1 1-4@1 1-4 cent up with wheat firm at 1-4 to 5-8 cent gain; May $1.09 3-8@1-2 to 1.09 1-2 and July 1.07 5-8 to 1.07 5-8@3-4.

Provisions were virtually unchanged.

Right from the outset and much more so in the late dealings an upward tendency in prices was evident throughout the entire list of cereals. As usual of late, the corn pit was the chief center of activity, but oats buying was also of an important character, and for the first time in weeks the oats market showed independent strength. The corn market was specially stimulated by reports that there was but little prospect of any near future, that feeders were paying more than terminal markets and that snowfalls had made country roads almost impassable.

Corn closed at the top for the day as well as for the season. Heavy profit-taking sales took place on the various bulges in price but such selling failed to offset persistent buying on the part of commission houses. Bulls laid particular stress on the fact that weather conditions were unfavorable and that low temperatures predicted would tend to increase the demand for feeding.

Among wheat traders apprehension was expressed that crop damage might result from severe cold following rains. Besides receipts at many points continued meager.

Provisions held steady guided by the course of hog values.

CURB MARKET

New York, Jan. 24—Stock prices pointed upward in today's moderately active session of the curb market. Most of the active oils improved fractionally in response to reports of another reduction in crude output and new commodity prices. Speculative interest in this group was divided among mutual and continental, negotiations for the merger of which are reported to be under way, and in Pan-American "rights," which dropped as low as 65 cents after having sold last year at 2, but rallied to 82 cents before the close.

Further accumulation took place in Glen Alden, which established a record high at 86 1-2, on speculative expectation of any increase in the dividend. New Mexico Land touched a new high at 7 1-8, recent strength and activity of this stock being associated with reports of oil prospecting on its property, which is controlled by the Frisco railroad. Special strength also developed in some of the public utilities, American Gas & Electric selling 5 points above its previous close. Ward Baking and Brooklyn City Railroad issues were firm but yielded towards the close on profit-taking. Bridgeport machinery touched a new high for the year at 12 on publication of a report showing profits of $250,000 last year, despite the unsettlement of the oil industry. Earnings for the four previous years averaged nearly $320,000 annually. New Jersey Zinc and Todd Shipyards made moderate gains.

JEWETT CITY

Mrs. Henry E. Olsen, regent of Anne Brewster Fanning chapter, D. A. R., attended a state regents' and treasurers' meeting Wednesday, held in the state library, Hartford.

It is of interest to local people to learn that Postmaster D. F. Finn has received notification that the postoffices at Centerville, Crompton, Phoenix and River Point, R. I., have been discontinued, the supply station for all of them now being Arctic.

Twenty five years ago this spring the Quinebaug Gun club, was organized. For two years its members enjoyed clay pigeon shooting on the flats across the Aspinook reservoir. The late Arthur C. Ladd was its first president, and was succeeded by the late Patrick B. Driscoll. The final vote but one recorded upon the books over 20 years ago, is to the effect that the committee on a clambake procure clams, lobsters and bluefish for same. The last vote was that the treasurers be empowered to pay for same at such time as he was able to get hold of money enough.

Late Thursday night local weather men predicted that Friday the storekeepers would have opportunity to move some of their stock of rubber footwear.

George J. Moeller, Eli G. Lague and Lloyd G. Buckingham, the Board of Electrical Commissioners, have presented their report for the borough records. Together with the creditable balances which indicate a net gain of $3,522.77, is the fact that every minute that light and power has been available from the contracting supply, it has been furnished to the borough patrons. With the proposed changes, upon which the commissioners are insisting, the local service will be efficient as well as continuous.

In accordance with their policy to furnish educational amusement as one of the means of maintaining an efficient organization, the Ashland Cotton Co., and the Ashland Club entertained Thursday evening.

Thirsty Cotton and From Bale to Cloth, two of the leading textile moving pictures, five reels in all proved of much interest. The first is sent by the Parks-Kramer Co., of Fitchburg. The other by the Saco-Lowell Shops, with one of their engineers, Mr. Francis, who explained in detail as the operating machine on the screen told the story of the manufacture of cotton cloth beginning at the raw material, right from the gin to the finished product on the loom. A funny reel the "Champeen" delighted the guests. Overseers from the other mills of the town were among the guests which included representatives from Ponemah Mills of Taftville, Aldrich Bros. mills of Moosup, Versailles Sanitary fibre mills and the Lawton mills Plainfield.

The firemen's annual ball is a social event eagerly anticipated in town each year. Even if one does not care to dance, the music is always of the best and the ever-changing spectacle on the floor is colorful and interesting. Above all, there is no organization in the borough that is so worthy of patronage as the volunteer fire company, the members of which make it their business to protect the community from disaster.

NORWICH PYTHIAN SISTERS TO GIVE INSTRUCTION

Clover Temple, Pythian Sisters, started the new year by placing its new officers in their chairs. The installation was done by Grand Senior Lena Gates as deputy grand chief. She was assisted by two past grand chiefs, Sisters Eva Adams as grand senior and Lottie Gillman as grand manager, all of Willimantic. The new installation work was done, which was far superior to the old way of installing.

The following officers were installed: M. E. C. Elizabeth Mackey; Ex-Sr. E. G. Fowler; ex-jr., Anna Henschel; manager, Hattie Fowler; M. of R. and C., Charlotte Fowler; M. of F., Marion Fowler; proct. of temple, Bella Kaplan; guard of temple, Bessie Salomon; past chief, Alice La Turner; representative to grand, Hattie Fowler. The auditing committee was Lillian Rogers P. C., Grace Fowler P. C., and Elizabeth Mackey. The report showed an increase in the membership and finances. It is the wish of the district deputy grand chief, Eva Adams, that the annual convention of this district comprising Willimantic, New London, Norwich, Mystic and Colchester convene with Clover Temple for the benefit of instruction in degree work, opening and closing temple and all other business that each member of a temple would like to be instructed in. This school of instruction is a great help to every temple. A committee will meet soon to decide where it is to be held and the date of this district convention.

120 GALLON STILL ON LISBON FARM

On Thursday evening State Policemen Frederick Caron and Leon A. Shoffen of the Groton Barracks raided the farm of Stanley Lickwoka in Lisbon situated on the old wood road which branches off the state road opposite the Lisbon cemetery and leads to Versailles. The two energetic officers found a 20 gallon copper still, 15 gallons of moonshine which tested 95 per cent. a 20 foot coil and 100 pint bottles. This is undoubtedly one of the largest and most complete still that has been discovered in this vicinity. Later in the evening the prisoner was find $150 and costs when presented before Justice Walter Drew. Grand Juror George Helmbolt prosecuted the case and officers Caron and Shogen gave their testimony.

5 Operations—15 years suffering with constipation—Kellogg's Bran restores health

Mr. Landing's case is typical of thousands of others. He found permanent relief from constipation in Kellogg's Bran because it is ALL bran. Nothing but ALL bran can be 100 per cent effective. Read what he says:

Dear Sir:

I have been afflicted with constipation for the past 15 years, and during that time I have been in four different hospitals and submitted to five different operations that were the result of constipation. I was getting so bad that every meal I ate soured on my stomach. Two months ago I was advised to eat your Kellogg's Krumbled Bran. I tried it, as I was trying everything I could hear of. From that day on I have never taken a physic. My stomach does not sour any more and my bowels move regularly morning and evening. Yours sincerely,

Frank Landing,
1200 Jefrin Ave., Marion, Ind.

For permanent relief, eat Kellogg's Bran regularly. Two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. It is guaranteed to bring results, or your grocer will return your money.

You will like the delicious nut-like flavor of Kellogg's Bran—so different from ordinary brans, which are unpalatable. Eat Kellogg's Bran with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over other cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. Try it in the recipes given on the package.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is served by leading hotels and clubs in individual packages. Made in Battle Creek. Sold by all grocers.

The Gulbransen Is a Host in Itself

It's always time-to-go before you know it—when a Gulbransen Registering Piano furnishes the music!

Friends will class yours as a home they like to visit—where dull hours are unknown.

Your skill in playing the Gulbransen will win comment—and rightly so. From early evening 'til late you'll play songs, dances, classics—registering your own personal touch and expression through the amazingly responsive pedals of the Gulbransen.

Easy to play? Yes—just try it! Easy to play well? Yes—exclusive Instruction Rolls quickly show how. A superior instrument? Yes—in every way—construction, tone, finish and known value for every dollar invested.

The Gulbransen is indisputably unique and distinctive. Its development has been to give as direct control of music, through the pedals, as when playing by hand. Try a Gulbransen, and pass your own judgment.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE FOR DEATH OF LITTLE GIRL IN COLCHESTER

On a bench warrant issued by Judge C. L. Avery of the superior court here Wednesday, Harold R. Webster of Colchester was presented before the court here Thursday morning, when Judge Allyn L. Brown sat for Judge Avery. Webster was charged with manslaughter in having caused the death on Dec. 23 of Shirley Gimple, a nine year old girl, when it is alleged she was struck by Webster's automobile at Colchester.

The accused man was brought into court by Deputy Sheriff Manuel Martin. He pleaded not guilty and the bond was placed at $5,000, which was provided for Webster by Frederick A. Brown and Arthur F. Chapman of Colchester.

The bench warrant was issued after Coroner J. J. Desmond had reported on his finding in the case to Acting Prosecuting Attorney Warren Burrows and Judge Avery.

I, the undersigned, J. J. Desmond, Coroner of New London County, Conn., having notice of the death of Shirley Gimpe, a white female, nine years old, late of the town of Colchester in said county, who on the 30th day of December, 1923, came to a violent death in the town of Norwich, in said county, and having made immediate inquiry concerning her death, do hereby certify:

That said Shirley Gimple died in said town of Norwich on the 30th day of December, 1923, from injuries sustained by her when she was struck in said town of Colchester on December 23rd, 1923, by an automobile operated by Harold R. Webster, of said town of Colchester.

In the evening of December 23rd, 1923, said Webster was operating his Buick automobile on the public road in Colchester; Charles Perkins and Edward Driscoll, both of said Colchester, were in the car with Webster, Webster and Driscoll on the forward seat and Perkins on the rear seat; at about 7.30 p. m., Webster was driving his car on his right hand side of the road at a speed of from 20 to 30 miles an hour, and when passing the Cutler grain store his automobile struck the little girl, inflicting upon her fatal injuries; she was picked up immediately after she was struck and taken to Dr. Edward J. Howland's office, in Colchester, where Dr. Howland examined her, and administered to her first aid and treatment; she was taken to the Wm. W. Backus hospital in said Norwich where she died on said 30th day of December, 1923, from the injuries she received when struck by the automobile as above set forth.

The evening of December 23rd, 1923, was misty and foggy; Webster's windshield was closed and the moisture upon it made it very difficult for him to observe objects in front of his car; at the place where the accident happened the buildings are less than one hundred feet apart; the weather conditions were such as to call for the exercise of special caution and vigilance in operating an automobile on this road at the place where the decedent was struck; Webster had been driving hte greater part of the afternoon and evening; he had stopped at various places and had consumed some intoxicating liquors; when his car hit the child, he felt the jar caused by the impact of the machine against the little girl, but continued on for 50 yards, or more, when Driscoll made a remark to the effect that they had struck something; then Webster stopped his car and walked back to the place of the acident, where he was told he had struck the child and that she was then in Dr. Howland's office, he proceeded to Dr. Howland's office, but did not go in; he waited outside until the injured girl was brought out to be taken to the hospital and then he drove his car to Chapman's garage, in Colchester, and thence he went to his home.

Immediately after the child had been struck by Webster's car, Ike Cohen, of Colchester, driving his automobile, came towards the spot where she lay on the road, a distance of the point at which she had been hit by the Webster car, and noticed the prostrated form he at one stopped his car and walked to the object he saw lying in the road, discovered it was the Gimple girl, and picked her up and carried her into Dr. Howland's office; others in an automobile operated by Lawrence Rogers, of Colchester, also saw the child laying on the road, very soon after she had been struck.

The evidence appears to indicate that Webster, at the time his car struck the decedent, was somewhat under the influence of intoxicants; that he was driving along the road at a great, and unlawful rate of speed; and that he was operating his car recklessly, under the conditions and the circumstances surrounding him, whilst driving through a thickly settled community on a road over which he should have known that pedestrians, including children, would be likely to be passing on the Sunday evening when this lamentable tragedy occurred.

I am satisfied, and find that the death of said Shirley Gimple was caused by the criminal recklessness of said Harold R. Webster.

Dated at Norwich, Conn., this 23rd day of January, 1924.

MOTOR VEHICLE CONFERENCE WILL MAKE RECOMMENDATIONS

The State Motor Vehicle Department has been notified that the regular January meeting of the Eastern Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators will be held in Room C, at the Commodore Hotel, New York beginning at 9.30 o'clock Friday morning. Official notification was received from Motor Vehicle Commissioner E. Austin Baughman of Maryland, secretary of the conference.

Representatives of the motor vehicle departments of ten states will be in attendance. The sessions of the conference itself will not be public, but opportunity for people interested in motor vehicle regulation to bring worthy suggestions to the attention of the conference was presented at a public hearing held Thursday at the New York City office of the New York state Commission by a subcommittee consisting of Motor Vehicles Commissioner Robbins E. Stoeckel of Connecticut and Director Robert J. Howard of the Motor Vehicle bureau of the New York State tax commission. The sub-committee will make a report to the conference, embodying suggestions which, in its judgment, merit the consideration of the conference.

While Thursday's public hearing declined, as previously announced, to examine car accessories and mechanical signals, owing to the lack of time to go into that subject adequately, manufacturers and others desiring to bring certain accessories to the attention of the conference will be given opportunity to be heard by a sub-committee at a later date. The conference includes in its membership the motor vehicle administrators of the New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, and all members have been besieged by manufacturers of accessories since the conference was organized two years ago. Recommendations of the conference have an important bearing on legislation in the member states as the demand increases for uniform motor vehicle regulations in adjoining states.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting and operations fail?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal?

That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal tablet remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, now sold by Lee & Osgood and druggists generally, that is guaranteed?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the internal cause, by freeing blood circulation in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation. There is no reason why it should not do the same for you.

EX-GOVERNOR WALLER DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

The death of Thomas M. Waller, a former governor of Connecticut, occurred at one o'clock this (Friday) morning at Castle cottage, his home at Ocean Beach, New London. The end came peacefully following an illness of more than two months.

Thomas McDonald Waller, lovingly referred to by his closest friends as the "Grand Old Man" and by others, who knew him as simply "Tom Waller," one of the dominating figures in democratic politics during his many years of activity in that party, was born in New York State in 1840, the son of Thomas C. and Mary Armstrong. His parents died before the son had reached his ninth year and in after years his recollections of them were faint. As an orphan he was adopted by Robert K. Waller, of New London, and in that city he lived his life except the few years he was in governmental service abroad.

It was said of Mr. Waller that from humble origin he rose to a place of great distinction and the people of the state bestowed upon him the highest gift—that of governorship—while in his own community he held positions of trust and responsibility such as in number have been accorded to but few, and in all of which he served with credit to himself and with great value to the institutions. In civic affairs New London knew him as a leader and many things he did requiring foresight have proven of great value to that community.

Mr. Waller received his education in the public schools and after graduating from Bartlett High school in New London studied law. He was admitted to the New London County Bar in 1861. Shortly after he enlisted in Company E, Second Connecticut Volunteers but a serious affection of the eyes brought an honorable discharge and sent him back to law practice in which his progress was marked. In 1875 he was appointed state's attorney for his home county which position he held until 1883. Meantime he had served his town and the state in legislative and administrative ways, being a representative in 1867-68, and 1872-3 and was speaker in the latter term; secretary of state 1870-71, an office which instructed him in state matters and paved the way to his service as governor in 1883-85. In 1885 he was re-elected governor by popular vote but did not receive the constitutional majority and the legislature being republican chose Henry B. Harrison, the republican nominee.

President Cleveland appointed Mr. Waller to be consul-general at London, England, and he served there until 1889. Being home again he was elected to the constitutional convention of 1902 and was one of the two vice presidents of that body. In all the years from his first service in the House and through the constitutional convention Mr. Waller's friendship with men of Connecticut an dof the country had grown until their number was legion and its warmth was such as to make him one of the most beloved men in the state. That love and affection continued and while the number of intimate friends of the stirring days of his political career became less in number as death called them the younger men looked up to him with fatherly affection and his appearance at a gathering was almost invariably accompanied by a demonstration which testified to the continuing esteem in which he was held.

While Mr. Waller was a state figure for many years he was no less an impelling personality at home. He was mayor of New London from 1872 to 1879 when that community took a long stride from conditions of a town to one of a city. He brought about civic improvements which abolished swinging wooden signs on stores along the streets, an dthe century old curb and hitching posts, and many other obstructions which in earlier days had played their part as accommodations for those who came into the city by wagon and desired to leave their vehicles handy to the places of business. Many of the swinging signs were of fanciful design, to advertise the goods within the store. Their abolition was through an ordinance and from this start the city began its development as a city. Mr. Waller induced the city to take his view of future prospects and buy Ocean Beach as a place through which the public might reach the Sound. Its benefits are now realised. Mr. Waller was one of the incorporators of the first street railway in New London, and later on he was identified with public service corporations in the West. He was active in real estate development and had a part in opening for homes several large sections then remote from the business section but now a part of the residential districts. He also was active in banking and was an incorporator and later an officer of the Mariners Savings Bank.

After his return from London Mr. Waller formed a law firm with New York offices and while he retired from active connection with it after some years the firm name remained for a long period Waller and Wagner.

Mr. Waller was gifted of tongue and as a public speaker was always in demand. In his political addresses he was called in later years "the little giant". As a debater he was forceful and of great vigor, and quick at repartee and retort. Some of his most notable speeches were made in the legislature and in political gatherings. In state conventions he always commanded instant attention. In 1896 his voice was heard in the Democratic Nationals Convention when as a delegate, he fought William J. Bryan on the 16 to 1 issue. In that campaign he headed the Palmer and Buckner democrats in the state, having walked out of the national convention as the head of the state delegation in protest against the silver wing of the party. Except in the 1896 campaign Mr. Waller never deviated from party regularity. In a state convention in Hartford, in the fall of the same year Mr. Waller clashed with the late Alexander Troup who as national committeemen was a supporter of Mr. Bryan. Mr. Waller did not take so active a part in party affairs and conventions after 1900 although he frequently spoke and as years went on he left the platform almost entirely. He was constantly invited and occasionally did attend party gatherings but he seldom spoke at any length.

As a lawyer Mr. Waller was counsel in many notable cases, being regarded as especially able in summing up in criminal cases before a jury. He was called in to assist in the Jennie Cramer case tried in New Haven county. One of his important cases was that of the state vs. Kate Cobb of Norwich, in which the woman had been accused of murdering her husband and another was in the case of the state vs. Rev. Herbert H. Hayden charged with the murder of Mary Stannard. Mrs. Cobb was convicted of murder in the second degree.

Mr. Waller married Charlotte Bishop of New London, and there are five sons and one daughter, Tracy, Charles B., both of New London, Robert K. and John of Yonkers, N. Y., Martin of Kansas City, Kas., and Mrs. Elizabeth Appleby of Minneapolis.

Mr. Waller's personality was such an dhis friendships so many that anecdotes of him are of almost endless number and variety. Those closest to him and who, as members of his personal staff as governor shared his confidences, were never to a loss to tell of his flow of wit and his delightful comradeship. The little that is known of him before he was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waller, he had elated himself, how he had sold newspapers in New York, and had been a cabin boy and cook's mate on fishing vessels and how he was in New London to ship on a vessel which was to sail for California during the gold excitement of '49. It was then that the lad found a friend in Robert Waller and was adopted. As a youngster Mr. Waller gave promise of the brilliancy which later marked his political and legal career, having won school prises and high stand.

Not only did Mr. Waller figure largely in the development of Ocean Beach, but as a pioneer in Neptune Park, where his commanding residence, "The Castle" stands. He foresaw, also the possibilities of Glenwood Park and was active in its development.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE CLOSELY SCANNING DISCLOSURES IN SENATE OIL INQUIRY

Chief Executive Is Preparing to Protect the Public Interest—Is Ready to Institute Whatever Civil or Criminal Proceedings That May be Necessary—The President Feels That the Evidence Already Adduced in the Senate Oil Inquiry Requires an Explanation and Investigation—Evidence Has Been Received of Loans to Former Secretary Fall by Sinclair and Doheny.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Simultaneously with the disclosure today in the senate oil inquiry of another unsaid loan to Former Interior Secretary Fall, the White House made known that President Coolidge is preparing to take every action to protect the public interest and to punish those guilty of any wrongdoing.

Before the same committee which E. L. Doheny, California oil magnate, told yesterday he had loaned Mr. Fall $100,000 on his personal note, while he was secretary of the interior, J. W. Zevely, personal counsel to Harry F. Sinclair, testified today that Mr. Sinclair had loaned Mr. Fall $233,000 in Liberty bonds on a personal note three months after he retired from the cabinet.

As the testimony now stands, the Doheny loan was made more than a year before the Doheny interests obtained the lease of the Elk Hills, California, naval reserve, while the Sinclair loan was made more than a year after the Sinclair interests received the lease of the Teapot Dome, Wyoming, reserve.

Developments in the senate inquiry were discussed today by the cabinet. Afterwards the president was represented officially as regarding some of the testimony to point to criminal action. The executive is reluctant to believe that anyone has been guilty of any criminal intent, but he feels that the evidence already adduced requires explanation and investigation.

In the president's view two questions already are indicated. One, and the more important, is to bring to justice anyone who has dealt with he situation in any way that is in violation of the criminal laws. The other is to see whether the government has suffered any injuries by reason of the oil reserve leases. If the leases do not seem proper, action looking to their annullment will be taken.

With respect to possible criminal phases of the matters it was made clear that there was no disposition to jump to conclusion that investigations must be made by the proper authorities to see where any criminal action will lie. It was pointed out that criminal action could not be started on rumors; that substantial evidence which can later be presented to a grand jury and at a trial would be required.

Having received evidence of two loans to Fall, the senate committee will turn its attention next to a further effort to clear up testimony regarding cancelled checks of the Hyva corporation—a Sinclair concern; for $68,000 and alleged to have been drawn in favor of Thomas Johnson, foreman of Mr. Fall's New Mexico ranch. Archie Roosevelt and G. D. Wahlberg, Sinclair's secretary, will be recalled tomorrow in this phase of the inquiry.

But the committee will be diverted only temporarily from the $100,000 and $25,000 loans. Mr. Fall will be asked next Monday to explain these and other of his financial transactions, while Mr. Zevely was telling of the $25,000 loan in June, 1923, the former secretary was secluded in the Zevely home here under the care of a physician. He declined to make any statement; and declared he had made none regarding the Doheny testimony.

Mr. Zevely testified that the Sinclair loan to Mr. Fall was made just before the former secretary went to Russia to inquire into concessions in the lower Sakhalin peninsula which Mr. Sinclair had negotiated with the Chita government. The money was to be used, he said, in purchasing further additions to the Fall ranch property, but he was unable to say whether it had been so used.

The loan was negotiated through Mr. Zevely, who said Wahlberg had been directed to ship the bonds to a bank in El Paso, designated by Mr. Fall, where they were entered to Mr. Fall's account in accordance with instructions which Zevely had sent to the bank. After the former secretary returned from Russia, he gave the witness his personal note for the amount which, Mr. Zevely said, he still has. He agreed to produce it later.

Responding to extensive questioning by committee men, Mr. Zevely said he went to New Orleans some time ago at the telegraphic request of Mr. Fall who wanted to discuss with him developments in the inquiry. It was the understanding of the witness that Mr. Fall also had arranged to meet Mr. Doheny there for a similar purpose.

The witness, who returned here from the south with Mr. Fall last night, was unable to recall clearly details of the conversations with the former secretary, although he was pressed for them several times by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana. He denied previous testimony that he had sought to attend the conference between Fall and Doheny.

As Mr. Zevely was unfolding his story to the committee, another move for cancellation of the Teapot Dome lease similar to that in the senate was made in the house. Representative Morehead, democrat, Nebraska, introduced a resolution to this end, the measure setting forth that it appeared the "lease was corruptly obtained."

A further move for cancellation of the leases will be made Monday in the senate, but whether the original Caraway resolution will be pressed or a substitute offered by Senator Walsh, remains to be determined.

RESOLUTION TO PRODE LEAD MINING LEASE

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 25.—A resolution was introduced into the upper house of the Oklahoma legislature today by Senator Courtland M. Ferguay of Chandler, asking that the United States senate committee investigating the Teapot Dome oil lease, take testimony also in regard to a lead and zinc mining lease granted by A. B. Fall, while secretary of the interior, in the Eagle Picher Mining company in the restricted Quapaw Indian lands in Northeastern Oklahoma.

The resolution also requests an investigation into the alleged transfer of $35,000 in Liberty bonds which Harry F. Sinclair, was declared by W. G. Wahlberg, his secretary to have given Colonel William Bevely in 1923. The resolution seeks to determine whether there was a connection between this alleged payment to Bevely and rumor current during a 1922 gubernatorial campaign in Oklahoma to the effect that Sinclair had helped finance the campaign of J. C. Walton.

THIRTY PHILADELPHIA POLICEMEN SUSPENDED

Philadelphia, Jan. 25.—Director of Public Safety Smedley D. Butler's official axe cut a wide swath today, when, at the dawn of the third forty-eight hour cleanup of this city, he suspended thirty policemen, including three sergeants, and abolished the entire district detective force. Three sergeants were promoted to lieutenancies, and told to "clean up or take the consequences."

Branding them as "agents of political trickery," and "collectors" the director ordered every one of the 100 plainclothesmen comprising the force, put out on patrol duty in uniform.

"Lieutenants can hereafter select their own temporary detectives as the emergency demands," he said. "There is no limit to the number they may pick, but all must go back into uniform at the end of thirty days."

All men detailed to special duty, or loaned to banks and theatres, were recalled to active duty by the director. Suspension of the thirty policemen was because of "negligence and lack of cooperation" in the cleanup campaign, it was announced.

Launching of a campaign against "influential clubs and other places" which are said to be encouraging bootlegging and gambling was also announced by General Butler.

"In this way, it will be difficult for the gambler, the bootlegger, the parasite and like panderers, of vice, to familiarize themselves with the appearance and personnel of the members of this department, engaged in this special and important service. With this highly concentrated and intensively operated organization, better results are assured."

The special division will consist of a deputy chief inspector, one deputy inspector, four captains, ten lieutenants, 29 sergeants and 250 patrolmen.

FRENCH DEPUTIES DISCUSS NEW REVENUE MEASURES

Paris, Jan. 5 (By the A. P.)—The chamber of deputies began today its discussion of measures to raise six and a quarter billion francs yearly in new revenue, in an atmosphere that reflected the almost tragic position in which parliament has been placed. The members will be obliged to commit political suicide by adding twenty per cent to the present burden of taxes, or turn down the measures providing for the taxes at the risk of invoking financial calamity.

In the lobbies the talk shows even greater opposition to Premier Poincare's plans for stabilising the franc than was expected. The speeches from the floor of the chamber, which were published in the official journal and circulated among the voters, are more moderate in tone, though they do not conceal the gravity of the situation.

Deputy Bokanowski, secretary of the chamber's budget committee, who drew up the report on the new taxes, taunted deputies who hesitated to help France do what he said Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and Italy already had done to stabilize their exchange.

"France," he cried, "narrowly escaped being submerged in a flood of mistrust. It is a grave emergency requiring grave measures." Determined to hurry the debate, the premier asked the chamber to sit every day and twice a day. There were many outcries against this, but the deputies deferred reluctantly to his request.

REJECTED SUITOR KILLED WIDOW AND HIMSELF

Philadelphia, Jan. 25—Infuriated by rejection of a proposal of marriage, according to the police, David Tyson, 42, a carpenter, today shot and killed Mrs. Lillian Bowles, a widow; wounded her daughter, Gladys, 15; fatally wounded a pet dog that attempted to defend them, and then committed suicide.

Tyson, Gladys told police, had been a frequent caller at the Bowles home. Today, she said, she heard him quarrelling with her mother, then the sounds of shots, followed by her mother's screams. She ran into the room, she said, and Tyson fired at her, the bullet piercing her leg, throwing her to the floor. At that moment the dog entered the room and sprang at Tyson, who fired point-blank.

Gladys managed to reach the street and summon help. As neighbors ran in, Tyson killed himself.

FOR CONTROL OF COTTON INDUSTRY IN ENGLAND

Manchester, England, Jan. 25—At a meeting today of employers engaged in the spinning and manufacturing of American cotton, comprising two thirds of the entire trade, approval was given to a plan for the appointment of a board of control for the cotton industry.

The plan includes regulation of production and the imposition of levies on mills which are working, payable both by employers and workers. The amount secured through the levies will be applied to the payment of workers made idle through stagnant trade.

Foreign Policy of Premier MacDonald

Great Britain Will Have No Secrecy in Dealings With Foreign Countries

London, Jan. 25.—(By the A. P.)—Secret diplomacy will have no place in the dealings of Great Britain's new premier, Ramsay MacDonald, with foreign countries.

Mr. MacDonald intends that the public shall be informed of foreign negotiations whenever the circumstances warrant. He also has decided that the discussions within the cabinet shall not be kept "drum-tight," as it is claimed in some quarters was the case in the Baldwin-Curzon administration, but that the newspapers shall be given a communique after each session, summarizing the subjects discussed as decisions taken.

In conversation with the newspapermen today, Mr. MacDonald said he always would be glad to receive them when public interests demanded or time permitted. The premier's policy of acquainting the public with what the government was doing was apparent today at the press bureau of the foreign office, where it was indicated that Mr. Mr. MacDonald might arrange to receive the newspaper men periodically. In this respect Mr. MacDonald would revive the war time practice of David Lloyd George.

The premier is represented as being anxious at the commencement of his administration to have the support and good will of the newspapers, as well as of the public. The old press bureau staff in the foreign office will be retained because of the experience of the personnel and its knowledge of pending government matters; but Mr. MacDonald probably will add to it one or two men from the ranks of labor on account of their special familiarity with the party's policy.

MATTERS BEFORE MINE WORKERS' CONVENTION

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 25—(By the A. P.)—Miners of Nova Scotia were heard in defense of their deposed secretary-treasurer, James McLachlan, in the United Mine Workers Convention this afternoon and will continue their attempt to vindicate him when their deposed vice president, Alex S. McIntire, takes the rostrum tomorrow morning, to answer charges made today by former international president John P. White.

Strategy of the insurgent element failed them. It was planned in their caucuses to force consideration of the Alexander Howatt case today, and immediately afterward demand rehearing of the Nova Scotia case.

Forestalling this plan, vice president Philip Murray announced there was a misunderstanding concerning the Nova Scotia ruling of yesterday, and that it would be reconsidered. A motion was made that Alex McIntyre deposed vice president, be given privilege to speak, and according to Mr. Murray called him to the platform.

Instead of making his speech, McIntyre said, he had not his proofs with him to clear McLachlan, but would have them tomorrow morning. He asked that the matter be deferred till then and something else considered. Mr. Murray advised the assembly that McIntyre's papers were somewhere in town, and that he should go get them, while other Nova Scotia miners and administration supporters continued the debate.

ENGINEMEN REMAIN ON STRIKE IN ENGLAND

London, Jan. 25—(By the A. P.)—Tonight there was not the slightest sign of any cessation of the strike of the members of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen. J. Bromley, secretary of the associated society, has asserted from the commencement of the strike that it would last a fortnight, and at the present moment it looks as though his predictions might be fulfilled.

Although there have been no big accessions to the ranks of the strikers, the resumption of work by a few of the enginemen has been balanced by fresh walkouts on the parts of others, so that while the railway walkouts on the parts of others, so that while the railway managers gradually are evolving better regulated skeleton train services, they have been unable appreciably to increase traveling and freight handling facilities.

The government appears to consider that the time has not yet arrived when it can usefully intervene, and it is declared that the reports that some move on he part of the labor ministry was anticipated were premature. Premier Macdonald himself was engaged all day in the business of the foreign office. He had a visit from the king's secretary, Lord Stamfordham, and devoted all the time he was able to spare from other duties to completing his ministry and to routine matters.

The premier will remain in London over the week end, however, so as to be on hand if any special emergency arises. Neither side to the dispute has yet sought government aid.

To Remove Theatre Taxes up to 50 Cents

Among Agreements Reached by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Washington, Jan. 25—Tax reductions amounting to $103,000,000 annually and affecting more than twenty industries were agreed upon today by the house ways and means committee in its first major decisions on the revenue rates.

The rate changes, repealing some of the miscellaneous or nuisance taxes instituted during the war, were effected by non-partisan votes in committee and included some suggestions of both the Mellon and Democratic plans.

Taxes on theatre admissions of fifty cents or under and levies on beverages were repealed and the levies on jewelry and produce exchanges sales were cut in half. Previous arrangements to repeal the taxes on telegrams, telephone messages, leased wires and candy were confirmed.

With committee consideration of the income rates thus brought nearer, President Coolidge appealed today for non-partisan support of the Mellon bill. He let it be known that he considered the prospect for a substantial agreement on its provisions as brighter and that he believed credit for the bill, if enacted, should go to whoever votes for it, regardless of political affiliations.

The democrats, however, continued their attitude of indifference to the republican proposal for a compromise agreement in committee on the income rates, Representative Garner of Texas, ranking democrat on the ways and means committee, reiterating that his party has united for the democratic plan.

SIXTY MINERS ENTOMBED BY MYSTERIOUS EXPLOSION

Johnson City, Ill., Jan. 25—Sixty of 450 miners at work in the McClintock coal mine of the Crerar Clinch Coal Company of this city were entombed today when a mysterious explosion occurred on the main working level, 250 feet below the surface.

Tonight five men had been rescued. All were suffering from severe burns.

Later twenty of the miners were reported as "coming up to the surface." They were uninjured, according to telephonic communication which had been established between the mine's office and the working level where the miners were trapped.

At the time of the explosion 390 miners were working in a section of the level which was not affected by the explosion.

The thirty-five men who still were trapped in the level at the time the twenty were making their way to the surface, telephoned that none had suffered any injuries.

One dead man was brought to the surface by the miners' rescue teams the miner's face and head being so badly burned it was impossible to identify him. Three injured men taken from the mine earlier in the day, were taken to the Johnston City hospital and will recover, it is thought. Fire is known to be raging in the entries where the thirty men are entombed. Throngs of frenzied men women and children, are gathered about the entrance to the mine.

EXPERTS STUDYING STATUS OF GERMAN RAILWAY SYSTEMS

Paris, Jan. 25—(By the A. P.)—The first committee of experts which is examining into Germany's economic and financial condition, held two long sessions today at which they listened to William M. Acworth, Great Britain and M. Lefevre, France, both experts on railways they were questioned with regard to the present status of the German railway systems. The hearing will continue tomorrow morning.

Although no communication was issued by the committee tonight, it is understood that today's discussions revolved around the problem of wiping out the deficit of the German railway administration, the committee proceeding on the premise that the entire economic resuscitation of Germany hinges largely on paying railroads, from which large amounts of the public funds are drawn.

The discussion here of the railway situation is a prelude to a further hearing in Berlin of the testimony of a number of German traffic experts. From their added testimony it is hoped that definite recommendations can be drawn up.

FORMER BROKER SENTENCED TO STATE PENITENTIARY

New York, Jan. 25.—Jules C. Rabiner, head of a brokerage concern bearing his name which failed last September with $800,000 liabilities, was sentenced by General Sessions Judge McIntyre today to the state penitentiary for six months to three years.

Judge McIntyre's pronouncement of sentence was accompanied by a strong denunciation of the practices of certain New York brokers.

LOST IN THE WOODS.

Experienced woodsmen say that when a man gets lost in the forest he usually travels round in a circle.

That's just the way some folks shop. They hit the buying trail, stray from it a bit, and before they are aware of the fact, they are lost—wandering in a maze of counters—gradually growing wearier and wearier—and finally get back home mentally and physically tuckered out without having accomplished much.

Up to date shoppers make up their minds what they are going to buy before they leave the house. They know exactly what they want, how much they want to pay and just where they will find the right goods at the right prices. To them shopping is a pleasure.

These modern shoppers read the advertisements carefully and regularly. They find that the advertisements save them steps, bother, trouble and time.

Let The Bulletin's advertisements be your guide. That's their job.

ANOTHER STRANGER FIGURES IN THE W. H. ANDERSON CASE

Anti-Saloon League Head Not Only Received $24,700 From a Comparative Stranger, But Also Gave to a Mysterious Strangers For "Publicity Purposes"—Mr. Anderson Admitted That He Had Neither Paid Nor Declared Income Taxes on Money He Had Received From Phillips—President of the League Had Never Heard of King or Mann.

New York, Jan. 25. — William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, today continued his narration of the $25,000 he obtained from a comparative stranger in 1922 and 1923, and added to his recital the name of another comparative stranger, to whom he entrusted the expenditure of the gift.

Every ratification of the remarkable story was given in detail by Anderson, who was on the witness stand for the second day in defense of the forgery charge being heard against him in supreme court. Most of the story was drawn by the cross examination of Assistant District Attorney Pecora, the prosecutor, who talked himself into hoarseness and fatigue in his three and a half hour arraignment of the witness.

Anderson admitted after a series of cutting questions that he had not paid or declared income tax to the federal or state government on the money he had received from O. Bertsall Phillips under their contract to "split" the fund collector's commissions.

The court, apparently thinking Anderson may have misunderstood the question repeated it, saying:

"Did you declare to either the federal or state governments the money paid you by Phillips as half of his commissions in excess of $10,000 in 1920?"

"No, I did not," was the answer."

"That's enough," he said. "Any explanations you may have to make may be brought on by your attorney through questioning."

A person named by Anderson as "Henry Mann," as mysterious as the stranger, "John T. King," who, according to the league head's testimony yesterday, made him the $25,000 gift, was the added member of the story's cast. It was he, Anderson testified, who spent the $24,700 the league head said he advanced to the league in 1913-14 for "publicity purposes." And he spent it, the witness declared, without giving in return a receipt or a voucher, and without making an accounting of any kind to the league superintendent.

Interest throughout the day was riveted on the continued cross examination of Mr. Anderson, the crowded court room paying little attention to the testimony of two character witnesses called by he defense. Today's crowd was the largest of the hearing, and the audience included a large sprinkling of men in ministerial garb and a dozen deaconesses of the Methodist-Episcopal church, who sat on a front bench.

The day opened with Anderson on the stand and Mr. Pecora, thumbs in waistcoat, shoulders squared, standing before him with a list of questions ready. Pecora, apparently dissatisfied with the witness' statements of yesterday anent his knowledge of the mysterious "King," continued on this subject for the first half hour.

Anderson declared the last time he had seen "King" was in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel shortly after he assumed the office of league superintendent. They had dinner together, he said, and King passed over an envelope which Anderson later found to contain $2,000 in currency.

"Did he say what the money was for?" Mr. Pecora asked.

"He didn't have to—that was understood," was the reply.

They were alone, he testified. This was in the morning. In the afternoon, still under cross examination, he told Mr. Pecora he believed he had been introduced to Mrs. King—"I think, I am not sure, that she was present at the dinner."

The name "Mann" was brought into the record under conditions similar to those under which that of King was made public. Pecora asked Anderson the name of the publicity man King had introduced to him.

"I protest that to name him would be a violation of confidence," Anderson said, turning to Justice Tompkins.

"You must answer," the court directed.

"He said his name was Mann, Henry Mann."

He did not know his residence or office address, he explained, nor had he ever seen Mann except in the league offices or by appointment at the Pennsylvania terminal. On all these occasions, he said, he gave Mann money. Mann, he added, was employed in the "publicity work" of the league for twenty-two months, doing his last work in 1915, when he received the final payment of the $24,700. In all, he declared, he had met him but once, a casual street meeting, since the work had been completed, he said, although he had sought him since the district attorney began the investigations which culminated in his indictment.

Pecora questioned Anderson at length as to the nature of Mann's duties. The witness replied that they included general publicity—"anything to promote the work of the Anti-Saloon league." This included a state-wide press service, the sending of prepared matter to newspapers, and the circulation of Anderson's biography and an electrotype of the superintendent's photograph.

Asked why he had not told the league's directors, at the time he put in a claim for reimbursement of the $24,700 in 1918, of "Mann's" connections with the publicity, he replied that he did not dare because he believed that if the identity of the publicity man become public, his life would be in danger.

"Anything might have happened to him," he explained.

He had given a detailed list of the expenditures to Mann to the directors, he added. The loose sheets of paper on which he had noted these payments from time to time, he explained, he had destroyed.

Mr. Pecora, producing a letter from Anderson to the directors in which he declared the money he had advanced the league had been raised by him through a mortgage of his home and the hypothecation of three life insurance policies, asked the witness why he had not told the true source of the money, and Anderson replied that he had "been mixed in his dates." He declared that as a result of his loans to the league he had had to obtain the mortgage for his personal expenses, and that the procedure had caused confusion in his mind.

"What amount did you first ask the board in reimbursement when you first told the directors that you had spent this money in the league's interests?" Pecora asked.

"I asked $29,700. That included compensation."

"Compensation to whom?"

"To me, for my work in connection with the publicity work. I did not press the claim, however, and it was not paid."

He admitted that the league since 1919 had repaid him more than $10,000 on his claim, in addition to the $4,000 he had taken from the commissions of O. Bertsall Phillips, league solicitor, who charged that Anderson compelled him to "split" collection commissions. Part of this sum, he added, representd six per cent. interest he charged the league.

Justice Tompkins interrupted at this point to seek more information concerning King. He met his benefactor, he said, after King became interested in him through hearing him speak on prohibition in Baltimore, in 1913. Anderson was state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league of Maryland at that time.

"He knew I was going to New York and that I needed funds to place the league on its feet there," Anderson explained. "He was very much interested in the prohibition cause."

"Did you not think it strange, then," the court asked, "that a man so interested in your work for the league should offer you $10,000 a year to go into the real estate business with him?" (Anderson had testified to this offer by King yesterday.)

"I don't know as it was," he replied. "It was merely an opportunity he offered. But I refused it. I told him I would not leave the prohibition field."

Pecora resumed his cross examination at the afternoon session, again turning his inquiries to "Mann" and his activities for the league. Anderson, told him he had been assured by Mann that none of the $24,700 would be spent in a corrupt manner. "I didn't want that," he added.

Two other defense witnesses, both clergymen, had brief stays on the witness stand. The Rev. Dr. Robert Eagnell, president of the league from 1909 to 1914, told of Anderson's engagement and the superintendent's announcement that a publicity campaign would have to be carried on. The league had no money, Dr. Bagnell said, and Anderson was told that if such a campaign were carried on it would have to be financed by him. He added that he had implicit trust and faith in Anderson's honesty.

Under cross examination, he denied ever having heard of King or Mann as did the Rev. James V. Chalmers a Protestant-Episcopal minister, who also testified for the defense.

The trial was put over until Monday.

KING HAS DISSOLVED ITALIAN PARLIAMENT

Rome, Jan. 25.—An address to the king outlining the government policy accompanied the decree dissolving the Italian parliament. The address declares that the end of the World war found Italy a prey of parliamentary groups but that the country was freed of its embarrassments and inspired with confidence through the fascisti movement.

The fascisti government was a minority government, but it was accorded parliamentary suport. In the enthusiasm prevailing at that time, elections might have been held, but the government preferred to wait for the calm and conscious judgment of the nation. In the new elections, which will take place on April 6, the country will be able to pass judgment on the work accomplished and on the fascisti program, the address said.

WILLIMANTIC

Driving and walking had to be done rather cautiously, Friday morning, as the streets and sidewalks were covered with a slippery mixture of snow and water. The first real snow storm of 1924 started about 11 o'clock and was followed early Friday morning by driving rain, making a most unpleasant combination. People on their way to work between 7 and 8 o'clock in the morning were emphatic in their expressions of criticism of the street department for not clearing crosswalks. The gutters were clogged with slush more than ankle deep and water ran over the cross walks as deep as six inches. Boots were the only footwear which could be used to advantage.

Consideration was due, however to the fact that this was Superintendent George M. Flint's first real important task. Foreman Roderick Lussier was watching the snow storm about 2 o'clock Friday morning and there were no indications that it would turn to rain. As the snow was then only two or three inches deep he did not think that it would be necessary for the men to turn out before the regular time, 7 o'clock. Mr. Flint believed that the heavy rain would soon wash away the think covering of snow, consequently did not order out the snow plows. Early Friday morning he had his men placed in various sections of the city and they did fast work in clearing out the gutters and allowing the streets and sidewalks to drain off. By noon, traveling conditions were greatly improved.

At first, the men started to make use of the snow plows but discovered that they were only pushing more snow into the gutters and they stopped this operation and devoted the remainder of their time to bringing the curbstones

Acting physical director A. F. Brown, who has been connected with the local Y. M. C. A. for the past three years announced Friday morning that he has concluded his engagement with the local association He has been granted a leave of absence by the board of directors, but his resignation dates back to take effect immediately following the last meeting of the board, held this week. Since the resignation of Secretary F. R. Custard, about a year ago, Mr. Brown has acted as both physical director and general secretary with a great deal of ability. By virtue of his methods and personality he has formed a large and active business men's class and has been responsible for other advances in the "Y" work. It was said that he would be advanced his salary up to March 1, next. His friends here view his departure with regret and as a great loss to the "Y" and the community. Since he has been physical instructor the various gymnasium classes have increased in a marked degree.

Residents of Mansfield Depot find themselves very much in the same predicament as the fellow who was driving through deep ruts and whose machine split neatly into halves as the ruts parted to follow different roads. The little village of Mansfield Depot is but a short walk from the main highway but on account of the condition of the two roads leading to it, it is as safe from visitors as the rattlesnake in its lair. The residents are hoping that before another winter comes the roads will be improved.

The annual entertainment given by the American Thread Athletic association of the Willimantic mills Friday evening, had the largest attendance of any indoor event in this city in recent years. Three thousand people, including members of the association and their friends crowded the drill shed of the armory. Artistic decorations in patriotic colors were festooned from the ceiling and the star, the emblem of the association, was displayed about the walls. A few days ago it was found necessary to stop the sale of tickets which were in demand long before they had been printed.

An excellent program was carried out in the early part of the evening followed by dancing and music by a Hartford orchestra. The concert was from 7 to 7.30. The festivities were formally opened by the singing of a popular song by the community led by John McQuillan, secretary of the committee in charge. CREAM of RICE

RICH IN FLAVOR

WHEN YOU BUY bulk rice you almost invariably get "polished" rice. When rice is polished practically all of the valuable mineral salts and health-giving vitamins are lost. So it's important that you buy rice by name. That's the only way to be certain of getting rice that has not been robbed of all food value and flavor.

To get rice at its best, always ask for Cream of Rice. Cream of Rice is rice with only the outer, indigestible husk removed. It is then granulated and combined with pure milk powder. So Cream of Rice is healthful and nourishing—rich and flavory—as good as it tastes. Buy a package today from your grocer and learn why Cream of Rice is the favorite breakfast cereal everywhere.

Last Installment of Answers by Kara

Kara stated last evening that he regretted very much that time and strength did not permit him to answer all the questions he received, and if your question has not been answered it is for that reason and no other. Kara stated also that he was surprised at the amount of questions that he received here, hundreds coming in with every mail from all parts of the state. He says he has never seen a better advertising medium than the Norwich Bulletin and recieved more questions here through this medium than in other places twice the size of Norwich.

M. E. McC. The pin being put back in your daughter's china closet after being lost for several months is a proof of the things I have been able to solve since coming here. I will not give the name as much as I would like to and as well as I know, as I am not allowed by law. That class of people would be glad to sue me for damages. I say your suspicion is correct. The party realising that I knew who was guilty, after consulting me, decided to place it where it would be found by the owner, fearing that I would tell who was responsible.

E. M. W. For the present I do not see where a change of position for your husband will benefit him, but in time I feel he will return to his former position in New York. That which was unpleasant will adjust itself during his absence. He will go first and on the lay of the land or on the ground floor, then you and yours will follow.

Miss S. S. You know as well as I do what you will not get the coat, as it was stolen at the dance a few weeks ago in New London. Due to the fact that a professional thief took same, you stand no chance to recover, unless a confession should be made at their death bed.

Mrs. C. R. I feel you are both partly at fault, although your sister in law is more responsible since she drank the liquor, and you was trying to help her. Being under the influence of liquor, she is not responsible for everything, but you must be patient. That class of people can not be driven.

Mrs. S. L. C. Not being a doctor, physician or eye specialist, I would say that your husband will be normal very soon, but I do feel that if the treatment and attention are not neglected he will improve and the spells will become less severe and further apart. I feel this will check the cause.

Mrs. C. D. G. I feel that if this party was dead you would have heard one way or the other, as there would be property and this would be advertised, or she is dead and the settlement has not been made. I advise you to write at once to the authorities at Memphis, Tenn., and state your case. I am sure you will get the information you need.

Mrs. A. M. R.—A. L. D. realises that you are, like him, a victim of circumstances, and is afraid if he writes, that the letters will fall into the hands of others. He will write and when you hear it will be good news. It is good news but travels slow.

Mrs. G. E. H. You can either stop your husband from the drinking habit or at least reduce it, or you can make him drink more. He is a victim of circumstances and needs help. To condemn him will only make matters worse. You have to encourage him with good treatment that will in time stop his desire.

A. L. L., Moosup, Conn. I see no reason why you should be suspicious of your wife. Perhaps it is because you know some one has tried to attract her, and throw themselves at her. That may be so, but that is no proof of anything intimate with her. If I thought she had been unfaithful I would tell you. Don't spoil your happiness with evil thoughts.

Mrs. B. M. Baltic. Do not take that upon yourself. In time he will marry and the marriage will adjust all that is unpleasant to all concerned. Hold no bad thoughts.

M. N., Jewett City. Your best way to locate the party you speak of is to write to the railroad company in Hartford, and they will tell you how to locate this party. He is still working for the railroad but his run has been changed.

Mrs. L. M. C. I do not feel that the locket has been lost. It is misplaced. A good search, I am sure will locate it.

M. E. R. While I see a change, it is not real soon. The change comes with a marriage, which will improve conditions. You need a general change.

Mrs. A. S. I can not tell you that you will have work right away, but surely you will get enough to do, to keep the wolf away from the door. Your mother will get extra work, to give her the necessities of life. She does not need the luxuries.

A. P. A. I feel that the pin has been lost and not been found. You stand little or no chance to find same.

Miss E. M. While I do not see that this bracelet has been taken with the intention to keep same, I do feel that some one has it in their possession, and yet I do not understand why the party should not have returned same by now. Perhaps knowing you value it so very much, it is done to make you more careful in the future. I feel that it will be recovered, even if it was stolen.

AT THE PALACE

A double feature program is offered at the Palace Theatre Sunday evening. One in which that ever popular star Jack Hoxie is shown will be The Crow's Nest a vivid picture of the great outdoors. It is claimed for this picture that Hoxie is seen at his best, doing some wonderful riding and other great feats for which he is noted. Flames of Passion is the added feature and deals with the problems of the day. Many wonderful scenes are despicted and the cast includes some of the most notable of the screen stars. The Sing Em Again series are also on the program, and are really a feature in themselves. This series have become popular at the Palace as they have a tender significance for the theatregoers of yesterday. It is hoped that you all will be in fine voice for Sunday night, as we are going to show some really fine old timers. The usual Fables also a comedy will be shown. A special matinee is to be given this morning at ten o'clock when the first of a series of Chronicles of America will be shown, in which Columbus is selected to begin this wonderful series. These pictures are the product of and sponsored by Yale University, and it is expected that a capacity crowd will be in attendance. While this is in the nature of a children's matinee particularly the school children, adults are invited to take this opportunity of seeing this great reel. Popular prices will prevail as the children will be admitted for ten cents, adults twenty five cents. Other subjects complete this program.

BROADWAY THEATRE

An Arabian Nights adventure up-to-date which includes the rescue of the heir to the Turkish throne by a young American boy, an escape from a Turkish prison and the winning of a famous Turkish decoration may be seen in "Stephen Steps Out," a Paramount picture starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., which will be on view at the Broadway theatre Sunday and at the Strand, Mon., Tuesday, Wed.

The picture was directed by Joseph Henabery, and was adapted by Edfrid Bingham form the Richard Harding Davis story, "The Grand Cross of the Crescent." Heading the supporting cast, in the role of the head of a great ham-packing firm, is Theodore Roberts.

Young Fairbanks makes his debut in this picture, which is among the first to be produced by Paramount under the new policy of 52 "bigger and better" pictures a year. The sets are lavish with Oriental splendor. Scenes are shown of the throne room with the Sultan and his advisors in session, a huge hotel of Oriental architecture in Constantinople and many quaint corners of the Near-East city, where Turkish rebels are supposed to be plotting to overthrow the government.

The story concerns Stephen Harlow Jr., son of the head of the Harlow Packing company, who is attending a school founded by his father. Stephen fails in his examination in Turkish history and his angry father sends him to Turkey with a tutor to study the history of the country on the spot.

In attempting to intercept a telegram sent by Stephen to his father, the tutor accidently acquires a message between plotters who plan to kidnap the Sultan's son. Both boy and his teacher are captured by the rebels and thrown into prison. Here Stephen finds the son of the Sultan in the next cell to his own. Young Harlow makes his escape, rushes into the throne room and throws himself at the Sultan's feet. The rebels are taken prisoners and the heir to the throne is offered "The Grand Cross of the Crescent." This he accepts on the understanding that it is to be given to his old professor, Dr. Gilman. Stephen and his tutor return to America and arrive at the school just as Dr. Gilman is about to be decorated by Turkish envoys. Harlow, Sr., also arrives on the scene, and realising the tremendous publicity that will be given the school because of Dr. Gilman's decoration at the hands of the Turkish government, is greatly pleased.

He senses that his son has had some hand in the affair and wrings the story from young Stephen. He is so pleased with his son's achievements that he forgives him for "flunking" his examinations and the two stroll off arm in arm.

BENEFIT RECITAL FOR THE NEWINGTON HOME

Under the auspices of the Lions club of Norwich a play recital by Grace Sage, celebrated artist, will be given at Slater Hall on Thursday evening, Jan. 31st, for the benefit of the crippled children of the Newington Home. All the proceeds of the recital will be given to the home for the care of children who are destined to go through life burdened with misshapened bodies unless something is done for them. This worthy object of the Lions club has the hearty support of all the community.

Miss Sage will be assisted by The Philharmonic Male quartette of Springfield, Mass., a quartette that is well known through New England for its splendid concerts and everywhere this quartette has sung there has always been very favorable comment by the critics.

Grace Sage's art is generous and deep—gracious, amiable and finished. She is so purposeful so observant and true in characterization and so firm in her touch in handling a scene that no play of hers fails to be of compelling interest.

Her characters are real people—you know their appearance—their walk—the flavor of their conversation and the secrets of their thoughts; and you see them at a crisis in their lives contributing to situations powerful and poignant.

After several years of sincere, persistent effort and study Miss Sage has reached a place where her art occupies a field quite singular and alone among the interpreters of the modern drama. She has shown to hundreds of audiences that back of a charming personality is intelligence and unusual breadth of vision.

Tickets for the recital may be secured from any member of the Lions club or at Bankers Trust Co. Schwartz Bros. Furniture Co., Cranston Corp., Ethier's Stationery Store, Englar's Pharmacy, Talking Machine Shop, Norwich, Conn.

WILLYS OVERLAND

Able merchandisers of motor cars in practically every community have been obtained to sell Willys-Overland products and in practically every instance the success of the factory in Toledo during the past months upward. This threefold relationship can be attributed to the remarkable co-operation extended by Willys-Overland merchants.

One more spot of pleasant memory that the past year holds is the production of the millionth Willys-Overland car, an event properly and fittingly celebrated not only by the factory organization at Toledo, but by the entire dealer body.

Sales classes held by hundreds of Willys-Overland merchants in an effort to train new selling talent have been supplemented by a remarkable series of "service clinics," which have been conducted at central points during the past months. These courses have been in charge of specialty-trained factory men who have been entrusted with the task of teaching and training dealers' mechanics and service men in the latest and most efficient methods of taking care of Overland and Willys-Knight motor cars. Willys-Overland feels that it possesses the leading dollar-for-dollar value in automobiles; it is our persistent aim to back this product with the best obtainable service.

Sales records for the past year indicate that, even in a year of careful buying, Willys-Overland has been solidly appreciated and men who have paid more for a motor car in the past have been attracted to Willys-Overland because they have appreciated the Company's efforts to build sound values.

With this series of achievements now a matter of history Willys-Overland factory in Toledo expects to beat every month of 1923 during 1924. It is estimated that the production requirements will exceed 300,000 cars.

AT THE BREED

"No Mother to Guide Her," the William Fox production, with Genevieve Tobin as the leading player, is booked at the Breed theatre for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Miss Tobin, among other things, has been cast prominently in the Broadway successes, "Palmy Days," "Little Old New York," and "Polly Preferred." Her first appearance on the screen was in the Fox picture, "Valley of the Missing," when she was a child since then Miss Tobin had traveled abroad and studied, developing her dramatic talent to its highest point. Miss Tobin is one of the most charming and entertaining actresses on the stage or screen.

Another prominent actress in the photodrama is Dolores Rousse, who was with the Follies previous to her first screen appearance in "No Mother to Guide Her." Her work in this picture gained her a contract and a leading part in other Fox productions. Miss Lolita Robertson, noted for her work in the stage plays, "Mary Jane's Pa," "Fine Feathers," and "The Love Child," also is in the cast.

The actors of worth who appear in the photoplay include J. D. Walsh who began his stage career with Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle" John Webb Dillion, who was with James O'Neil in "Monte Cristo," and Jack McLean, who played in "Watch Your Step" and "Mary's Ankle."

For those who like drama of the human sort, "No Mother to Guide Her" should furnish excellent entertainment, for it has a story that grips with suspense, tinged with rare bits of comedy. People who saw the stage play will find added pleasure in the swift action of the screen version.

AT THE LYCEUM NEW LONDON

The engagement of Sir Harry Lauder, the noted Scottish singing comedian, at the Lyceum, New London, Thursday evening, Feb. 7, will be a most interesting event. Sir Harry comes from a long and successful season in Australia, and after his present tour of the United States and Canada, he will inaugurate a world-wide tour covering many months.

A feature of Sir Harry's visits is the fact that each tour brings with it a new program of characteristic Lauder songs—songs and melodies that are as distinctly Lauderesque as a Sousa composition is characteristic of the great March King. This year two of his newer offerings have been attracting especial attention. One is a song with a wee bit o' Scotland in it. It is entitled "Bella, the Belle o' Duncon." The other, entitled, "Singing is the Thing to Make You Cheery," has a universal appeal. Sir Harry, it is announced, will be locally assisted by a company of exceptionally clever entertainers.

DANIELSON

Danielson clerks have launched a campaign for a weekly half-holiday throughout the year excepting during the Christmas holiday period. What the fate of it will be was uncertain up to Friday afternoon. A considerable number of business men in various lines of trade have agreed to the proposals and have signed an agreement to close. Representatives of other concerns have already declined to sign such an agreement or will decline when asked.

A representative of one of the borough's important mercantile establishments has decline to sign and has frankly stated to the representative of the clerks that he does not believe it is good business policy for Danielson to make a practice of closing the stores to observe a weekly half-holiday practically throughout the entire year. In support of this contention he points out that the competition that Danielson business men are facing is not from Danielson competitors alone, but from competitors in cities within an hour or two run for an automobile.

On the other hand, clerks point out that their hours are longer and their occupations more arduous in many instances than the work of factory employes and men in many trades—and their pay, in the great majority of cases, less than that of thousands of workers in the territory who get Saturday afternoons off every week in the year.

Their were indications Friday that the clerks will gain some concessions as to working hours if they do not succeed in their drive for the weekly half-holiday practically throughout the year. It has been suggested from one opposed to the half-holiday plan as a twelve months' proposition that closing Monday evenings would be more to his liking. It also has been suggested that every clerk might be given a half-holiday each week with out closing the stores excepting Thursday afternoons during the summer months, a practice in vogue here for years. There is general recognition of the justice of the claim of the clerks for a half-holiday, but all do not agree on just how the granting of it should be arranged.

It is likely that the matter will receive due consideration in the very near future and some agreement more or less satisfactory to all concerned arrived at.

The annual meeting of The Danielson Development Association, held in the office of Frank T. Preston, town clerk Thursday evening, was attended by representative business men of Danielson.

The Danielson Development Association is a voluntary association and was formed in 1920 for the upbuilding of the industries in the town of Killingly, more particularly Danielson. No member was asked or required ote pue in more than $1,000, to establish a fund with which to build a modern textile plant for the Paco Manufacturing Company. The plant was built and was sold to the Paco Manufacturing Company on a time mortgage basis, the interest on the mortgage being at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, and the principal being paid off in ten annual installments. The investment itself has proven to be a sound one, and this has been more particularly strengthened by the wonderful financial showing that the Paco Manufacturing Co. has made. The Paco Manufacturing Co., their associates and selling agents, the Powdrell Alexander Co., of Boston, are now among the largest of plain and fancy curtain manufacturers, and their success has been so phenomenal that it has been found necessary to expand the local plant. This is very gratifying news to the members of the Danielson Development Association, and more especially to all citizens of the Borough of Danielson, in view of the fact that an expansion of this mill means the employment of more people, thus increasing the weekly payroll, which will naturally be of material help to all merchants. Furthermore, it means additional money in the form of taxes paid, not only to the Borough of Danielson, but also to the Town of Killingly.

It is reported that additional adjoining property is to be purchased, and on this property a mill 190 ft. by 54 ft., is to be built of modern mill construction. The plans are but in the embryo state in that no contracts have yet been let.

It was stated that anyone obtaining membership in the Danielson Development association in multiples of $50 up to $1,000, will have a 6 per cent. investment secured by a first mortgage.

The report of the secretary and treasurer at the Thursday evening's meeting was enthusiastically received, and a committee of three members, F. A. Jacobs, A. Van Woodworth, and F. E. Storer was appointed to obtain from the contractors, and the Paco Manufacturing Company, all the necessary contracts and al-report as possible to a future meeting.

The trustees elected at the meeting were: F. A. Jacobs, A. L. Reed, C. A. Tillinghast, K. A. Darbie, D. E. Jette, E. L. Darbie, and F. E. Storer. The officers elected were F. A. Jacobs, president; A. L. Reed, vice president; F. E. Storer, secretary and treasurer.

Seven men were committed to the Brooklyn jail Friday, on intoxication charges, Killingly supplying four of the number from the part of the county. Of those who went to jail from the Killingly court one said he was Ernest Hunter of Boston, another that he was Joseph Carter of Webster, another that he was Thomas Gahan of Attleboro and another that he was Rocque Drolit of Woonsocket. Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis sentenced each member of the group to serve 30 days in jail and pay costs of prosecution. The men were arrested in the business section Thursday evening by Chief John McFarland and Officer Christopher Andrews. Hunter and Drolit were camped out in the railroad station, apparently for the night, when officers took them into custody. The other pair were on the streets. Officers learned that some of the men had canvassed drug stores and garages here during the afternoon seeking to buy denatured alcohol, but without success. Later they obtained moonshine, nearly a pint of which was found in Hunter's pocket.

At a meeting held with 30 in attendance, the following officers of the Manufacturers' association of Eastern Connecticut were elected for 1924. President, John F. A big gasoline pump was torn from its moorings in the sidewalk at the curb at N. A. Jordan's store in the town hall block Friday noon when the looped hose caught in the slats, on the side of a motor truck that was getting away after the driver had made some purchases. The pump was put out of service for the afternoon, but the damage is not great and can be promptly repaired.

"What is slush for, Johnny," asked teacher Friday morning of one of her bright pupils, just in from paddling around in some.

"Slush," said Johnny, "is made in the winter time when the weather man can't decide whether to let it rain or snow and it is made to see if little boys' rubber boots will hold more than a gallon each and for careless automobile drivers to splash all over people."

At least that is what Johnny might have said if the teacher asked him on a day like Friday had he been as observant as bright pupils usually are. Which leads up to re-asserting that no certificate of intelligence is required of a man that would drive a motor car, through consideration for others is not held as a barrier against an applicant.

The manner in which some drivers rushed machines through Friday's slush and scattered it right and left plastering people from head to foot, was wholly inexcusable, but typical of present day disregard for the rights of others. Instance after instance of this kind was noted. There were threats from some of the aggrieved that drivers would be called upon to make good to damage done to clothing of their victims. There was vitriolic language. And there was one case disproving an item in Friday's Bulletin that a woman can talk no faster than a man. One that was slathered from head to foot by slush hurled in a sheet by a rushing motor truck appeared to be breaking all known records. Checked for a period of 10 second she appeared to be doing about 2200 words a minute. And she was saying something!

Likely there will be more slush before the winter is over. If it comes, motor car drivers can do something to redeem themselves by being careful in operating. If they do not, they may have some bills to pay for clothing of others they have ruined.

Commendation is due all who were so prompt Friday in clearing sidewalks in the borough of accumulated slush. A good spirit was shown and what was done was appreciated.

There was simultaneous appearance here Friday of Anti-Saloon league propaganda and interesting newspaper narratives of William H. Anderson's appearance on the witness stand in a New York court, where he is being tried for forgery.

Mrs. Walter E. Card, patient at St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester, is reported as recovering, after undergoing a serious surgical operation.

The funeral of Noe Rounds, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Allie Rounds, was held from their home on Carter street with a service at St. James' church conducted by Rev. F. X. Richards. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery, where the committal service was read by Father Richards. L. E. Kennedy had charge of the arrangements.

At her home in Goodyear, Friday afternoon, funeral services for Mrs. Melissa Carver were conducted by Rev. William Swainson, pastor of the Congregational church at Dayville, where burial later took place in the High street cemetery. The bearers were Robert Day, Albert Day, Louis Day and Henry Day, nephews of Mrs. Carver's. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Six-inch ice was reported Friday as covering some of the smaller ponds in territory hereabouts, but none of this was being cut.

PUTNAM

There was talk here Friday that recourse to the law may be taken before all concerned are satisfied as to who really has title to a bit of land at the corner of Providence and School streets. One claimant is the city, while Edmond Dubois, a member of the common council, is well satisfied that the land is rightfully his, and with that viewpoint well fixed in his mind has improved the property and had some gasoline pumps set upon it as a feature of the business enterprise he conducts in that locality.

It was understood Friday that the city has requested Mr. Dubois to have the pumps and tanks under them removed, but this he has declined to do, so if the city wishes to urge its claim it may have to go into the courts about the matter, as was hinted Friday might be done.

It is contended by the city that the land in question—a very small area—is really a part of School street and that surveys will establish this. Through disuse through many years, and the development of the street as it is curbed today, the little plot, adjoining property owned by Dubois, becomes a matter of controversy. Mr. Dubois was declared Friday to be firm in his intention not to obey any order pertaining to the removal of the gasoline pumps and tanks at the filling station. The city, on the other hand, is insistent that Dubois must vacate the property in question.

Cologne spirits, so it was said, containing some prescribed ingredient to spoil it as a beverage, which distinction such spirits have attained in this day and generation, were responsible for the appearance in court, Friday morning, of three visitors to this fair city—Joseph LeBlanc, who allowed he hailed from Norwich, and Edward Jarvais and Alex Bellageron, whose hailing port is Eagleville. The men were charged with having been intoxicated. LeBlanc was in rather a pitiful state as the result of his indulgence of the day before, a fact that should serve as a warning against drinking such concoctions as rubbing alcohol, known under whatever name.

Deputy Judge Archibald Macdonald, who was presiding at the session, saw to it that Messrs. Jarvais, LeBlanc and Bellageron will have no immediate reunion and liberty party upon their release from jail. To guarantee this Jarvais was given a sentence of 28 days. LeBlanc one of 30 days and Alex Bellageron one of 29 days, his stay being suggestive to him that this is Leap year.

Among exquisite floral remembrances at the funeral of Miss Katherine E. Burns, a nurse who died at the Day Kimball hospital early last Sunday morning and whose body was taken to her father's home in Worcester, where the funeral was held, were pieces from Putnam as follows: Day Kimball hospital staff of nurses, Attorney and Mrs. Arthur S. Macdonald, Mrs. Nellie King, Mrs. Mary Hogan, Lillian Andrews, Mrs. Oliver Purdy, Mrs. Josie Wrobel, C. Bauzer, Miss Arlene LeClair, Kathryn Lizotte and Marion G. Shea.

Stanley Kelley, recently returned from Russia, has purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Eddy their house and its furniture, near Crystal lake in the town of Eastford. Mr. and Mrs. Eddy, spending the winter in California, lived in Eastford two or three years. They formerly were of Rye, N. Y.

Mr. Kelley and two young men who returned with him from Germany are now occupying the Eddy property. Mr. Kelley will again conduct the coming summer the camp for boys that he has had at Crystal lake for several seasons.

Distribution of the estate of William C. Riggs, of New York, who died in October, 1922, brought to Frederick H. Sanborn, formerly of Senexet road, in Woodstock, a bequest of $10,000. Mr. Riggs left his residuary estate of $242,268, to his friend, Robert Walter Goelet, who inherited a fortune from his mother, Mrs. Robert Goelet. Mr. Sanborn and Mr. Goelet were two of a group of about fifteen people who were generously remembered by Mr. Riggs.

Friday mornings weather was hailed with delight by the dealers who have rubber footwear to sell. It was the first real slushy morning of a winter that has been marked by an almost utter absence of snow and wet going. Rubber footwear sales have been light all through the late fall and winter period, but Friday's storm gave the business a real boost and helped lighten accumulated stocks. There was much discomfort attached to getting about on foot during the morning hours, but a thawing temperature and smart work of walk cleaners throughout the city materially improved traveling conditions by early afternoon.

Out of Woodstock comes the story that Herbert W. Bowen and Frank Bowen, brothers, and among the best known residents of that nearby town, have established a record by playing a round of golf during January—the first time this has been done in Woodstock, insofar as is known. On a recent day they visited the links over there and noting they were in as good condition as last fall decided to play. Their scores for the round were under 45 in each case, an evidence of the good condition of the links. Usually the links at Woodstock are covered with ice or buried under snow at this season of the year.

Members of the Putnam fire department are in some instances laughingly describing themselves as chimney sweeps these winter days—this due to the fact that they get so many calls for chimney fires, due in almost every instance to neglect of owners to keep the chimneys clean. These fires call them out at all hours, and on cold nights it means a lot of hustling and work. A review of the fire record for the past year will indicate that the great majority of the fires occurring here are of the chimney variety. These fires are potentially dangerous, yet many owners of property continue to be careless about cleaning chimneys.

AFTER AN OPERATION

Mrs. Wilke Couldn't Get Back Her Strength Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rochester, Minn.—"I had a very serious operation and it seemed as if I could not get my health back after it. I suffered with pain almost constantly. My sister came to help take care of me, and she was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nervousness and a run-down condition. She had me try some of it, and in a very few days' time I began to feel better. In two weeks I hardly knew myself and after taking a couple of bottles more I was up and helping around, and now I am strong and healthy again and am still taking it. It is a pleasure for me to write this to you, and I hope that many other women who are suffering like I was will find out about your medicine. I will give any information I possibly can."—Mrs. JAMES WILKE, 933 E. Center Street, Rochester, Minnesota.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of fifty years of success among American women.

EAST LYME

The First Baptist church of East Lyme, on the evening of the 23rd inst., held the annual church rollcall combined with a reception to Rev. P. S. Collins, the new pastor, and his wife. This was a community affair and largely attended.

Supper served in the vestry at 6 o'clock, was followed by the program in the church at 7.30. The pastor was welcomed by Deacon B. F. Bump in a pleasing speech, which consisted, in part, of a verse which was punctuated by the deacon's handing one by one, to Mr. Collins, ten crisp bank notes. Mrs. Collins was welcomed in a fitting speech, by the deaconess, Mrs. Dwight B. Richmond, who presented her a dozen American Beauty roses. The audience then stood in the aisles with joined hands and sang Blest Be the Tie That Binds, after which the long line passed before Rev. and Mrs. Collins and the receiving committee, which consisted of Deacon B. F. Bump, Deaconess Mrs. D. B. Richmond, Rev. E. E. Gates of Hartford, and Rev. George H. Strouse of Waterford.

The address of the evening was by Rev. E. E. Gates of Hartford. Other speeches were by Rev. W. D. Hetherington of Preston City, Rev. Geo. H. Strouse, and Deacon Fred Beckwith of Niantic, with a response by the pastor, Rev. P. S. Collins.

The speeches were interspersed with singing by the choir and congregation, with a duet by Miss Edna Garlick and Miss Helen Richmond.

A pleasing feature of the reception was the presence of friends from the vicinity of Norwich, where Mr. Collins was formerly pastor—Rev. and Mrs. Hetherington, formerly of Fitchville, Frank Rose, James Turnbull, Mrs. Frank Harding and John H. and Charles Rathbone.

SAFETY IMPEDIMENTS.

That court cooperation is not only needed but a necessary part of law enforcement, if the safety of the highways is going to be increased, is interestingly disclosed by the statement of the motor vehicle commissioner of Massachusetts. His appearance was before a legislative committee when a bill was under consideration which calls for the imposition of a jail sentence upon all who are convicted of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Strange as it may seem the commissioner voiced his opposition to such a law. None is more earnest in behalf of greater highway safety than he, but he opposed such a law because of the belief that it would result in less convictions than at the present time. Requiring the courts to send the drunken drivers to jail would in his opinion be such as to cause the courts to balk and to result in giving greater consideration to such drivers than to the public.

It has been his experience that such is the case at the present time in too many instances, and with too much leniency being shown under the existing law he believed it would only be increased by stiffening the penalty and making it obligatory. To illustrate present day laxity he referred to one case where a man had been convicted three times for which driving under the influence of liquor and once for driving without a license, and yet this man has never spent a minute in jail nor paid a penny of fines. Well does he ask the question "How are we going to keep these men off the roads if the judges are going to defy the law in that manner?"

There is such a thing as giving weight to circumstances under proper conditions, and exercising what may be considered reasonable judgment, but when cases, such as the commissioner quotes, indicate that there is a disposition to shield repeated offenders, whose conduct may mean the death of others, it is evident that the law enforcement machinery is breaking down at a vital point and till the machinery is at least strengthened it is useless to load it down with stiffer requirements.

HELPING THE NORTHWEST.

In the northwest there are those sections where the same policy seems to have been followed that brought unfavorable results in the south when economic conditions interrupted the usual course of affairs. Devoting all the efforts to the production of a single crop brings large returns if everything goes well, but it brings trouble when something goes wrong such as weather or market conditions. The south has had its lesson in regard to the importance of diversified crops and the same is getting emphasis now in the region where the farmers put their all into wheat.

It is a situation that demands attention and action. Even if those concerned have failed to give proper thought to crop diversification, it does not mean that they must be required to suffer without something being done to relieve their distress. This is realized by President Coolidge, as his message to congress clearly shows, and it is his purpose to use such machinery of government as is available for the tiding over of the situation.

According to his views he believes in the refunding of indebtedness of the farmers that is past due and which they cannot meet, the giving of financial assistance through a federal agency to enable the wheat farmers to change to diversified farming from a single crop system, the restoration of the impaired capital of banking institutions where it would be advisable and the creation by private capital of a substantial financing corporation to assist in this reorganization. He would have the time extended during which the war finance board could make loans.

That congress will act in keeping with the recommendations of the president is to be expected. It is a situation that cannot be ignored, even though those concerned may have it within their power to prevent such a situation in the future. The need now is to help the wheat farmers out of a bad predicament and the suggested remedy should do it.

WASTING VALUABLE RESOURCES

Much indignation has been expressed in this part of the country over the fact that there is a tax placed upon all coal mined in Pennsylvania. It has been held to be a legal tax but that doesn't make New England feel that there is any moral justification for it, and when George O. Smith of the United States Geological Survey and also of the recent federal coal commission declares that there is no more justification for it than there is for the refusal of Maine to permit the exportation of electricity from that state, there is bound to be agreement with his views.

Maine is one of the states which can, if it will, produce more electricity than it requires. But because it does not need all that might be generated at its many water privileges it refuses to permit development of power stations for the purpose of exportation.

It can be readily understood that Maine should want to have its industries, cities and towns to get the full benefit of its water privileges, but it refuses development until the Maine demands require it.

In these days when it is possible to transmit current over long distances and when there is such a demand for cheaper power, Maine seems to be losing sight of the fact that on those streams which might be harnessed there is daily going to waste a big horsepower that could be utilized elsewhere to the profit of Maine until such a time as Maine required it.

Maine's purpose may be to endeavor to attract to that state such industries as want that power, but until the charm works it stands in the position of making no use whatever of a highly valuable asset. Maine is wasting instead of utilising its natural resources. In that course it may be no different than other states as far as lack of development is concerned, but it is decidedly different in prohibiting the transmission of hydro-electric energy to other states.

FORMER GOVERNOR WALLER.

Not only New London but the entire state suffers a distinct loss in the death of former Governor Thomas M. Waller. He was one of the old school of lawyers and politicians who not only became known but admired beyond the borders of his own city. Numerous are the times when Norwich has been thrilled by his oratory, both as a lawyer and a speaker. There was a charm about his manner and an appeal in his argument that couldn't be shook off. He had a manner of sending home the point he was making in a way that clinched. His personal magnetism was contagious and he wasted no time in getting the good will of his hearers, whether the number was large or small.

In the city where he has spent practically all his life he has been a citizen on whom great dependence has been placed. He was not lacking in faith in his home town, any more than he was in his state. He showed his confidence and interest in many ways, and the benefit of it can be noted in the fruits of judgment. His public spirit was ever manifested, his sincerity was unquestioned and his ability was outstanding, and far beyond the city that he called home are there many who have watched the handicaps which age has for some time been placing in his way with much regret and who will mourn his passing.

The benefit of such an influence in a city or state is by no means temporary. Governor Waller was admired for the man that he was, whether as a plain every day citizen or as the occupant of the highest office within the gift of the people of the state.

THE SEALED LIQUOR PROVISION

That the treaty which has been negotiated between this country and Great Britain, relative to the search for liquor on British vessels within one hour's steaming from shore, will have to stand the fire of constitutional attack is to be expected. That is the course that has been pursued with most of the legislation connected with the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, and there is no reason to suppose that it will be passed in this instance.

The attack is likely to come over the fact that the British vessels will be allowed to bring into our ports under seal the liquor that is intended for use on the vessels after passing beyond the limits on the return voyage. This is transportation of liquor within American waters under one construction and against the law in the eyes of those who don't want to see any handicap placed on the rum runners.

This government has had confidence that it has met this point in a manner that will stand the scrutiny of the constitutionalists and the supreme court. It is set forth in the treaty that the bringing in of the sealed liquor is to have the "same status as now provided by law with respect to the transit of alcoholic liquors through the Panama canal." The contention in this respect is that inasmuch as congress has the authority to make exceptions to the rule relative to the foreign ships in the canal, it can do so relative to sealed stores. The state department is confident of its position in this respect, and whether it contemplates the matter being carried to the supreme court or not, it feels certain of the outcome of any such action. That, however, may not make the wets refrain from applying the test to the limit.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

What great event is scheduled for the fourth of February?

Percolation is already well under way under the Teapot Dome.

What would the senate committees say if Edward Bok should be awarded the Nobel prize for peace work?

After the region around the north pole is annexed, who is going to have the job of keeping the sidewalks sanded?

Taxes in the United States have increased 193 per cent since 1913 and yet there are those who want them maintained or pushed still higher.

Even though New York's borrowing capacity has been cut to $67,000,000 that ought to help quite a number of the politicians make a good distribution.

When everyone acts on the understanding that all corners and crossings are dangerous there'll be a welcomed reduction in the number of accidents.

It is hard to understand why Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania delayed the announcement that he was not a candidate for the republican presidential nomination until this late date.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Under the head of religious notices that appeared in a certain newspaper the other day was the following: "One Senorita Somebody, age 21, weight 147 pounds, claims to be the champion prize fighter of Mexico. She has been in 75 ring battles and has fought both sexes. The announcement may give the Matildas of Mayflower descent a start and make them wonder just how the "gentler" sex is going to end up. She dresses like a man, drinks like a man, smokes like a man, and in not a few instances, swears like a man. We would also add, with due reverence, of course, that she has the fighting disposition of an man. As long as there is some other blooming senorita just aching to be thumped, isn't it in better taste for her to do it than some burly man. Now the logical conclusion is, that if Senorita Somebody is a qualified puncher, why not let her bang the little powdered nose of Senorita Somebody Else, for whether she does or not Mexico will continue to have its revolutions.

One need not go on a special hunt to find human tragedy in some form. It will, however, be an eye-opener to most people to learn how big a tragedy comes to the average business man at, or before, the age of 65. Beginning with 100 average men we find that they enter business between the ages of 16 and 24. This varies according to the time spent at school. At the age of 35, of these 100 men, 75 will be self-supporting, 10 will be well off, 10 will be wealthy, and 5 will have died. At the age of 45 there will be 65 self-supporting, 15 non-supporting, 4 wealthy and 16 will have died. At the age of 55 there will be 46 self-supporting, 30 non-supporting, 3 well off, 1 wealthy, and 20 will have died. At the age of 65 there will be only 6 self-supporting, 64 non-supporting, 3 well off, 1 wealthy, and 26 will have died. Were these not facts collated by an eminent statistician they might well be disputed.

Are our people, especially our young people, giving as much attention to the philosophy of saving as the matter warrants? It is one thing to save and another thing to do it according to some scientific method. One gets very little pleasure from reckless spending. But there is real fun in saving when it is the result of intelligent planning. Somebody has said that "saving is no trick at all when you have learned to spend money at your bank." The least satisfactory way of all of saving money is to lay aside what is left. It is suggested that a certain definite sum is put in the bank first, not last, before a single dollar for anything else, is paid. The best system of all is the budget plan. Carefully estimate what your expenses are going to be. Divide it by percentages: such a percentage for board, another for clothes, and thus on down. Don't skimp on the necessaries, if anywhere on the luxuries and by this method a regular sum can be laid aside.

It is a matter of congratulation that in face of such a variety to choose from the peace award commission should have found it possible to find one so outstanding as to receive the Bok prize. The mere mechanical labor of even glancing over more than twenty-two thousand manuscripts was some task. And as a majority of them must have expressed the same general ideas, or those that were closely kindred, it must have complicated their final judgment. Probably a single glance was enough to show the utter impossibility of a majority of these plans. In this case it was the expected that happened: any plan to succeed must, to some extent, have involved the league of nations plan, some amplification, some restriction, some modification of this treaty of Versailles was inevitable to any successful plan. It was a foregone conclusion that the insurgent group in congress would criticise any plan accepted, for criticism of everything and everybody is the only excuse they have for being in Washington.

Without indulging in any bitter or unkindly criticism, one cannot help asking what is the idea that lies back of the attitude or these so-called "irreconcilables?" It seems to matter little what legislation is brought up in congress for action there is the same spirit of belligerency. They attack both friend and foe alike. They are as hostile toward republican action as democratic, and yet most of them owe their place to republican votes. In the present congress they have greatly retarded legislation for no visible reason. Is it strange that, judging from the note of the public press, the country at large is getting a little weary of such useless obstruction? Chronic growling is bad for anyone, but it seems worse when it costs the country at the rate of $7,500 a year. Of course some of it is high grade growling, but it is barely possible that some of these toppotchers at the business may overdue it. Possibly it has long since been overdone.

Instructions in physical culture put a good deal of stress on the practice of what they call "dead still" exercises, during which one must perfectly relax and keep quiet. This is a great aid to physical and mental calmness. There are few lessons that we need to learn more than that of calmness. It is not the excitable man that does the world's work of the higher grade. The man who is in control of his own faculties is the only one who is able to control other people. Conversely it is true that a man who is not master of himself is not able to master others. In their business pursuits the American people need to take lessons in calmness. Foreigners who come over here and criticise us—and sometimes their criticism is intelligent—are surprised at our feverish haste. They say that we even make work of our play. As a race we are certainly too much in a hurry to get the most out of life.

The person who is compelled to resort to some peculiarity of dress in order to attract attention is apt to be very ordinary along other lines especially in mental endowment and moral equipment. A bright overcoat invites notice; a bright mind awakens admiration. As far as sex is concerned there is no difference among those who are crazy to be noticed. It is meat and drink to the shallow-pated to live, even for a brief season, in the limelight. Their attempts to worm themselves into notice are perfectly harmless, and, as it is a great pleasure for them and amusement to others no one but a confirmed old grouch would deprive them of their cheap bid for notoriety. Painted faces and big plaid overcoats will never bring in a reign of terror; will have no influence in revoking the Volstead act, nor bring on another financial depression.

It is said that a Harvard freshman once told a Boston fishwoman that she was "an old rectangular parallelopipedon", and at once she burst into tears, which was the least she could do. But one dreads to think what would have happened if he had called her a "scofflaw." Probably she would have jumped into Boston harbor. This newly-coined word "scofflaw" is something awful. How can any man henceforth be able to deal in bootleg whiskey, holdups, burglaries, oil stocks, or to advocate birth control when offended justice will hiss in his ears that awful word, "scofflaw?" I can see the poor guilty wretch, clad in sackcloth and ashes, tearing handfuls of hair out of his head and piteously moaning, "my punishment is greater than I can bear!" Alas, that I should live to be called a "scofflaw!" I can see them standing on the street corners with arms uplifted and crying out, not "unclean" but "scofflaw!" Surely the one who invented the awful word deserves his $200 prize.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

OUR EVERY DAY LIFE

"He that saith he abideth in Him ought himself also to walk even as He walked." One of the strongest words in the New Testament is this, great and all comprehensive. Every man that talks ought to walk in union with that which he professes, from a sense of obligation. The world is not interested in the Bible or Christian doctrine. I have found it more interested in the newspaper, in sport or politics. But let the world begin to see in the lives of those who profess to believe in Jesus Christ, flowers and fruit. The strongest argument for power which Christ has committed to His church is concrete holiness. I am to walk even as He walked. Add to that scripture a word with which we are all families, "Christ also suffered for us; leaving us an example that we should follow His steps." Are we all at one in this? Do we follow one another when we say the best explanation of a holy life is one which is obviously following the steps of Jesus Christ. How did He walk? In every man's life there are three currents, outward, inward, upward. This threefold relationship embraces the whole of life in all its worldward, Godward. How did the Lord Jesus walk in regard to these? What were the currents of His life?

Truly towards Himself, abnegation, an utter self-denial, a selflessness characterized Him, He lived in a pathway life in which there was no self-assertion, but utter, entire self-abnegation, hiding Himself always for the fullest revelation of His father, His life before the world, separation and, it seems to me, isolation. He said, "I am not of this world," and I can imagine the people who knew Him best, and understood Him least in His village, who knew Him before His manifestation, saying every day, "He does not belong to us, He is not our sort at all, He is obviously of the world. He is a good carpenter, and yet He does not belong to us, something is in Him which lifts Him above us, He does not talk much, never shares in the gossip of the village, never has been known to speak an evil word about anyone, knows more about everything than anyone else, yet never sets people down as, being superior to them," Not of the world. The spirit of the world was not in Him, and yet at the same time, no one ever touched the world as closely and munificently as Jesus did. This is His rule for His people, "Father, they are not of the world but I have sent them into the world." His vision was directed to taking the world out of their hearts and sending them back into the world. We should follow His steps. Lives, not so much of worldliness but of other-worldliness. Lives that touch the need, the great, gaping, bleeding sores of the world with things clean, and gentle and tender and strong and true, His relationship Godward, utter devotion. If there was one who could say: "I delight to do thy will, O. my God," it was our Lord Jesus Christ. To Him the will of God had ceased to be a matter of deliberation. It had become a matter of positive instruction and progress in holiness and grace. He withdraws from the activities of life in order that He may wait upon God.

The Lord Jesus stands before us today as one who walked in such a pathway, and He has left us this entirely unmistakable example to follow His steps. So, it is well for us to thus walk? What is my relationship toward myself? Am I constantly seeking my own pleasure? Is it normal in my life to seek my own good? Do I seek to please my own esthetic taste, my own convenience, or is it subordinated to the great purpose and will of God? Am I living a worldly life? Is there any difference between me and those who are frankly worldly? Do I spend my time and money with them? Do I seek my pleasure with them? Do I rule my life by their standard, or am I as the Lord Jesus in this respect at least not of the world, but sent into the world to represent a holy God?

SOUTHERN ALASKA WANTS TO BE SEPARATE

Statehood has been asked for the southeastern part of congress, a bill for such has been presented to congress based upon convention action of residents of the district. They want it to be known as South Alaska.

This part of Alaska embraced, when the census of 1920 was taken, 31,433 of Alaska's population of 57,000, living in 115,000 of the 590,884 square miles of the northeastern corner of the North American Continent that President Lincoln's Secretary of State, William H. Seward, bought from Russia for $7,900,000.

The proposed territory or state for whose formation the convention prepared two memorials to congress and framed a suggested organic act, would include all the first judicial division of Alaska in its present status and about one-third of the third judicial division. The first division is the panhandle, a strip running about twenty miles wide between British Columbia and the Pacific Ocean. The third division is southwestern Alaska, including all the southern coast running from the northern end of the panhandle far out to the end of the Aleutian Islands.

The promoters of separate statehood for South Alaska were inspired, according to numerous formal publications, by the desire to be set off from the second judicial division, vast western and northern Alaska, with Nome as its best known point, and the fourth division, interior Alaska, with Fairbanks, often called "the Chicago of the north" as its metropolis.

The two memories to congress stated the request of the panhandle to be formed into the territory of South Alaska and that "intimation that the drainage area of Prince William sound and Copper river should be incorporated with the first division" had been received. One of the memorials set forth that "the people of southeastern Alaska would welcome inclusion in the separate territory for which they pray of said drainage area of Prince William sound and Copper river and the territory east thereof or any part of it be the desire of the people thereof and of congress."

Agitation Last Summer

Lively agitation for a separate state for South Alaska began last summer when the late President Harding, on his return to Seattle, said in his last address, six days before his death: "Alaska is destined for ultimate statehood. In a very few years we can well set off the panhandle and a large block of the connecting southeastern part as a state."

Scott C. Bone, governor of Alaska, said recently that the desire for statehood was "perfectly natural and logical, based on the arguments of proponents of division of the territory that southeastern Alaska's resources and interests are different from those of other sections."

"This separation has become necessary for the development of the resources of the first division. There are no geographical, business or personal ties between our division and the second and fourth divisions.

"Notwithstanding that they each have only a small and scattered and steadily decreasing population, and combined contribute only 7.7 per cent of the revenues of the territory, they each have the same number of senators and representatives in the territorial Legislature as are permitted for the first division. Through their combined representation they have continously and unjustly taxed for their own use large portions of the revenues collected in the first division, and at each succeeding session of the Legislature they endeavor to impose and through their combined efforts often succeed in imposing, new and additional taxes upon our fishing, mining and other industries, while at the same time they protect their principal industry of placer mining."

The assessed valuation of the incorporated towns in the panhandle division is $10,971,000 and the estimated value of improvements in the unincorporated villages and towns and on the farms is $6,000,000.

In the Prince William-Copper river area proposed as part of the territory and state of South Alaska, the assessed valuation of the incorporated towns is $1,991,798, with improvements outside these places put at $3,000,000, besides investments averred as follows: Mining, fishing and other industrial plants and equipment, $5,000,000 in addition to the investments in the Kennecott, Latouche and other mines along the Copper river and Northwestern railway, and this railway and the coal and oil development in the Kalalla district, $40,000,000.

"Municipal schools and other municipal investments, $523,000.

"Banks—invested capital, $735,000; deposits, $6,524,000. Of the latter sum, $1,962,000 is saving accounts.

"The fisheries in 1920 represented an investment of $24,078,784, and employed 12,605 persons. In that year 32 canneries packed 2,235,011 cases of salmon valued at $13,384,967. In 1923, 64 canneries operated with an estimated pack of 3,950,000 cases valued at $14,530,000.

"There are twelve operating mines valued at $9,775,000, and employing 1250 men.

It was set forth that there were thirteen sawmills in the panhandle, one pulp mill worth $85,000, employing forty men, and undeveloped water-power of 460,110 horse-power besides 35,000 developed. It was asserted that the first division has 75,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber and all other divisions 6,000,000,000.

"The principal industries of southeastern Alaska," said the memorial, "are hard-rock mining, fishing, lumbering and the raising of fur-bearing animals. An increase may reasonably be expected in three industries and perhaps in the other."

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS

Innumerable avenues of information for checking up delinquents are furnished the Bureau of Internal Revenue. One of these is the "information at source" provision of the revenue act. Under this provision report must be made by all persons, corporations, and partnerships of payments of income to others during the year of $1,000 or more. Information returns are carefully checked with the individual return of the taxpayer to whom such payments were made. Thousands of delinquent and additional taxes aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars have been discovered as the result of this audit.

The act requires report of payment of all "fixed and determinable income," such as wages, salaries, com missions, royalties, etc. The requirement is not limited to periodical payments, but a single payment of $1,000 or more must be reported. A separate return of information for each employee whose salary or wage for 1923 was $1,000 is required of employers. Payment for overtime, fees, commissions, bonuses, and a fair value of board and lodging furnished as part payment for services should be included.

Fraternal organizations and associations are required to report salaries paid officers. Banks are required to report interest paid or credited to a depositor if the total during the year equaled or exceeded $1,000.

A separate report of each payment of $1,000 or more is required on Form 1099. Form 1096, on which must be shown the number of separate returns serves as a letter of transmittal. The forms may be obtained at offices of collectors of internal revenue and branch offices. Collectors, however, are not authorized to receive information returns, which should be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Sorting Section, Washington, D. C. The filing period is from January 1 to March 15, 1924.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Crown Prince Hirhito, Regent of Japan, whose wedding is to be a big event in Tokyo today, is the eldest son of Emperor Yoshihito and heir apparent to the throne. Born in 1901, he was proclaimed Crown Prince in 1912, when his father succeeded to the throne as 123nd Emperor of Japan. In 1921, having completed his academic course, he made a tour of Europe, being the first Japanese prince of royal blood to travel abroad. As observing disposition, a retentive memory and a keen desire for knowledge are said to characterize the Crown Prince. From his earliest youth, the court chronologers say, he has been especially interested in history and geography, and is so well informed on world affairs that since 1919, when he attained his majority, he has taken part in the councils of of the imperial family and occupied a seat in the House of Peers. For more than a year past, owing to the incapacity of the Emperor, Prince Hirhito has filled the regency.

A Little Talk on Thrift

Test of Success is Thrift

Many men and women are receiving salary increases at this period of the year, and the present is an opportune time to give thought to the matter of increasing one's savings along with one's increased income.

Will your enlarged salary for 1924 mean simply an advanced living standard, or will it mean also an added amount systematically saved?

In the final analysis it is not so much what a man earns as what he saves makes him really contented and happy. He may earn $10,000 a year and if he has saved nothing he will be discontented, while a man who earns only $5,000, if he has saved systematically some portion of that $5,000, has a feeling of security and contentment that can be obtained only with the processes of saving. In other words, raising a man's salary does not insure happiness, unless that man saves at least some portion of his increase against future wants.

Higher wages, or as might be stated, inflated wages, will never correct inflated living.

Sound and wholesome policies of personal economics dictate that increased earnings should mean increased opportunities for saving as well as increased opportunities for spending.

The same principles apply in the management of a business. A concern may be large and doing an extensive business, but if its increased volume is not accompanied by a corresponding upbuilding of assets or reserves, it is not really making progress.

The test of real success is thrift.

Neither in personal matters nor in business can true progress be made without it, no matter how circumstances may make it appear otherwise.—American Society for Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

Not Sheiks

The average traveling man thoroughly enjoys the amusing experiences which happen to him day after day. One selling jewelry was at a high school recently endeavoring to interest the senior class in a class ring. The girls had expressed themselves favorably on a certain design which was both new and good looking, but also expensive. The boys of the class, to a man—or, rather, boy—disagreed.

"Don't you like this design?" the salesman asked them. Some nodded their heads and others declined to express themselves eve to that extent.

They all changed to the other foot, but finally the spokesman gave vent to his sentiments. "Yep, we like the ring all right, I guess. And 'tisn't so much the price, but, we're working fellows, we are. We gotta plow—there's nothin' fancy about us. I don't guess we need anything like that. Something plain's what we want. We're not sheiks!"

Tokio, before the earthquake and consequent fires, had an area of 57-1-3 square miles of two-story wooden buildings.

January Dandelions in Baltic.

"Aint Nature Just Grand." During the past few months freaks of nature have been reported many times in The Bulletin and other papers, but the find of John Hussey of Baltic on Friday beats them all.

While moving a pile of railroad ties yesterday Mr. Hussey was surprised to find a dozen dandelions in full bloom in the sheltered space beneath the ties. He picked a number of them and carried them home as proof of his story. The first entertainment number of programme was by Frank A. Mell, who gave his favorite number, Brother Brown on Apples, a humorous story, and followed this by a second reading entitled, Sam's Letter. He was compelled to respond to several encores. Toastmaster Cowan then called on various members for brief remarks as is the annual custom and then introduced Mrs. Irving Hill of Portland, Maine, who is visiting her home city. Mrs. Hill gave a most interesting and instructive talk on Girls' clubs, which was greatly appreciated. In addition to her talk, Mrs. Hill favored her audience with several novelty numbers, playing a number of popular selections on her teeth. To insistent demands for more Mrs. Hill played one selection by tapping her cheeks. Both numbers were novel and made a hit with her audience.

The closing number of the program evening was a debate on The Bok Peace Plan. The affirmative was taken by Rev. E. C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church, while Walter M. Cowan, took the negative. The debate was close, both speakers strongly contending for honors. The finding of the judges was not announced.

The committee in charge of the banquet comprised Mrs. Earle Christman, chairman; Mrs. Edward Briggs, Mrs. John O. Peckham, Mrs. Howard Smith, Mrs. Emma Breed and Mrs. Walter Woodworth. EXCERPTS FROM OPERA DELIGHT NORWICH AUDIENCE

An audience of 400 at the Community house on church street Friday evening enjoyed a delightful musical programme when excerpts from grand opera were presented by the New York Opera Guild under the auspices of Norwich council, No. 906, U. C. T.

Complete and adequate staging and costuming for the several operas given heightened the art of the musicians and completed the pleasure of the audience which was generous in applause for each number.

The program opened with a scene from Aida with Eunice Forrester as Amneris and Mildred Sceba as Aida in which particularly effective work was done by the latter. This was followed by the card trio from Carmen with Mary Lothrop as Carmen, Helen Denay as Frasquita and Eunice Forrester as Mercedes, which was given with dramatic power and in fine voice by the three artists.

Miss Mildred Pearson, a former Norwich girl, appeared in an excerpt from Faust, the jewel song and King of Thule, and easily scored the hit of the evening with her voice of beautiful quality and her interpretation as Marguerite. She received a beautiful bouquet of roses and when given a second curtain call tossed one of the buds from her bouquet to the audience.

The closing number was an excerpt from Butterfly where the Japanese maiden awaits the return of her American husband, Lieutenant Pinkerton. Mary Lothrop as Cio-Cio-San and Margaret Scolley as Suzuki, her servant, made this a pleasing number in the well chosen programme which was prepared musically by Ora McCord Wheatcroft and staged and coached dramatically by Armand Agnini, stage manager of the Metropolitan Opera House. A piano prelude was given for each of the opera excerpts.

Cranston, president of the Norwich Music association, announced the Eastern Connecticut Fair to be given by the Commercial Travelers in the Norwich armory in April and the concert by Miss Mildred Pearson under the auspices of the Music association next month. Sees Another War Because Of American Stand

M. Tchitcherin, the Soviet Foreign Minister, who expresses regret over America's rebuff to the Russian offer for recognition. He claims that the situation in Europe today is a grave one and that only the United States can avert another war. He believes that Britain may see Afghanistan and that France is a general disturber. With Uncle Sam keeping tabs on both on the other side, it would be a great step forward to universal peace.

SARAZEN LEADS HAVERS THREE UP FOR FIRST HALF OF THEIR 72-HOLE MATCH

San Francisco, Calif., Jan. 26.—(By The A. P.)—Gene Sarazen, American professional golf champion, was leading three up in the first half of his 72-hole match with Arthur G. Havers, holder of the British open title, played today on the Lake Merced Golf and Country club links.

To total cards for the 36 holes were Sarazen 151, and Havers 154.

Sarazen will carry his lead to the second half of the match which will be played at the Hillcrest Country club, at Los Angeles, Sunday.

The American was much steadier throughout the day's play, than the British champion. Rain fell most of the day and in the afternoon many of the greens were puddles. Several times the contestants used mashies on the greens to drive through the water.

Havers outdrove Sarazen in the afternoon round, but was unable to negotiate the pond-like greens, Sarazen, however, was steady in the vicinity of the cup and got most of his lead in this way.

Par for the eighteen holes is 71 and the distance 6,570 yards.

BALDWIN CASE PLACED IN HANDS OF LANDIS

New York, Jan. 26.—The case of Howard Baldwin, star Newark pitcher claimed by both the New York Giants and Newark club, today was placed in the hands of Baseball Commissioner Landis, for decision. This was announced by Michael McTighe, head of the syndicate controlling the Newark club, after a conference with John Conway Toole, president of the International league.

A statement of the contentions of the Newark club, which denies the legality of the sale of Baldwin to the Giants by former Newark owners for a reported $25,000, was forwarded to Commissioner Landis, according to Mr. McTighe. He added that the commissioner had been requested to obtain a similar statement from Bernard Moan and William Ashton, of Baltimore, former Newark owners, who contend that a stipulation in the bill of sale gave them the right to dispose of Baldwin. This view also is shared by the Giants.

Mr. McTighe and his associates informed the commissioner they were ready to go into further detail at a hearing if one is called to thresh out the controversy. There is a possibility that Mr. Landis may summon parties to the dispute in connection with his visit here within the next few days.

The right to sell Baldwin, according to Mr. McTighe, was vested in the new owners and not Messrs. Moan and Ashton. Having the privilege of doing this or retaining the twirler on the club's roster, the latter choice was made, he added, and Baldwin has signed for 1924 with Newark.

URGES ACCEPTANCE OF RECORDS MADE BY NURMI

New York, Jan. 25.—Official acceptance as world's records of the three marks made by Paavo Nurmi, sensational Finnish runner, at 1,500 metres, one mile and three miles, will be urged by Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union and chairman of the records and rules committee of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, when the latter body meets to consider them. This was announced today by Mr. Rubien after receipt of official application for the recognition.

Nurmi's most spectacular performance was in negotiating the mile in four minutes, ten and 4-10 seconds, breaking Norman S. Taber's mark of 4:12 3-5 seconds made in Cambridge, Mass., on July 16, 1915, and which stood for nearly a decade. The other records for which Nurmi seeks official approval include the 1,500-metre run, in three minutes, 53 seconds, and three miles in 14 minutes, 11 2-10 seconds. These marks, if accepted, would replace the following existing records: 1,500 metres, three minutes, 54 7-10 seconds, by John Zander, Sweden; three miles, 14 minutes, 17 3-5 seconds, by Alfred Shrubb, England.

Thor Friman, secretary of the Svenska Idrottsforbundet and referee of the meet in which these records were made, informed Mr. Rubien that all conditions required by international regulations were complied with in connection with Nurmi's performances.

SHELBY OFFERS $300,000 FOR DEMPSEY-GIBBONS BOUT

New York, Jan. 25. — Shelby, the little Montana boom town where the Dempsey-Gibbons heavyweight championship fight last July 4 left a trail of financial disaster, has risen again from obscurity to offer $300,000 for the 1924 version of the Dempsey-Gibbons fued.

Tex Rickard, who plans to stage the return title fight here during the first week in June, announced today he had received such an offer on behalf of the Shelby chamber of commerce for a bout next July 4. The promoter hastened to add, however, that he did not view seriously the offer, which is $200,000 in excess of the guarantee made Dempsey a year ago and which the Montana men failed to meet after a financial struggle that eclipsed in intensity the ring battle it involved.

POLICE SEARCH CITY FOR ELUSIVE SIKI

New Orleans, Jan. 25.—Police here were searching for Battling Siki, who disappeared today. Matchmakers who are interested in future bouts in which the Senegalese is scheduled to appear wired local authorities to locate and hold the elusive boxer.

It was learned that Siki is registered at the Chicago hotel, where he has had accommodations since his fight with Battling Owens Monday night.

Battling Siki, the Senegalese boxer, whose disappearance in New Orleans was reported today, was scheduled to appear in the Weehawken, N. J., police court this morning to answer to a disorderly conduct charge made against him when he was found giving away dollar bills in a ferry house here a month ago. Siki failed to appear and on request of his counsel the hearing was postponed indefinitely, the fifth postponement thus far entered.

"DISAPPEARANCE INSURANCE" TAKEN OUT ON BATTLING SIKI

Chicago, Jan. 25.—An insurance policy for $5,000 against any further disappearance of Battling Siki, the Senegalese pugnr, has been taken out here.

The "disappearance insurance" taken out, Tommy Walsh, matchmaker, announced, to insure the presence of Siki in Minneapolis January 31 when he will meet Joe Lohman of Toledo. Siki is expected to come on to Chicago from New Orleans to spend the intervening time before the Minneapolis match and while here the insurance company, it is said, will have two men keep track of his movements.

NATIONAL MEETING IS CALLED BY HEYDLER

Ratification of the 1924 schedule, details of which already have been worked out in joint conference with the American league, and a report on plans for the National league's 50th anniversary jubilee in 1925 are among matters to come before the magnates.

Plans for the jubilee are in the hands of a committee of club owners, including Christy Mathewson, of Boston; William L. Veeck, of Chicago; Barney Dreyfuss, of Pittsburgh, and Charles H. Ebbets, of Brooklyn.

TWO CADETS ENTERED FOR WILCO A. A. GAMES

New York, Jan. 25.—West Point will be represented in the Wilco A. C. games on February 16, by two of its track stars, believed by Lieut. Eugene L. Vidal, athletic officer at the Academy, to be Olympic timber. They are Dean, the best sprinter the service school has had in years and Barkes, star hurdler of the cadet team.

Dean has run 100 yards in 9 4-5 on two occasions and has won the two dashes in virtually every meet in which he has participated under West Point colors. Barkes has a record of 14 4-5 for the 120-yard high hurdles and if he can maintain this speed during the Olympic tryouts he is sure of a place on the American team, Vidal asserts.

New York, Jan. 25.—The controversy between William T. Tilden, 2nd, national champion, and the tournament committee of the U. S. Lawn Tennis association, which for a time threatened to deprive the United States of its Davis cup ace, was amicably settled at a meeting Wednesday night at which members of the committee and of all the recent teams were present, it was learned tonight. The controversy was begun when Tilden was criticised for his play in the doubles.

It was decided to instruct Henry W. Slocum, national delegate at the meeting in March of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, to vote against the proposal that a period of more than one year might be permitted to elapse between challenges for the Davis cup.

SPORT NOTES

No Eastern league teams have announced their intention of training in the South this season.

Jess Winters is going South with the Philadelphia Phillies in the spring. He is leading a free and easy life in the West and South, digging up sundry golf courses.

According to the University of Pennsylvania Council on Athletics football pays for 17 other sports that Pennsylvania fosters.

There were 6,573 horse races run in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba during the 1923 season. Jockeys numbered 481.

Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, will make a serious effort to have maximum fines imposed on all retailers who have been selling and collecting commissions on baseball pool tickets.

Now that Joe Cosgrove is out of running for the pilotship of the New Haven club, the stove league has heard that Cosgrove is being considered for a similar berth with the Pittsfield Hillies.

Judge K. M. Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, was a newsboy, grocery clerk and later clerk in a railroad yard at Logansport, Ind. While attending public school he played baseball.

There is no question about Jack Ryder's qualifications as an athletic coach and trainer of the Olympic team. His success in developing exceptional performers entitled him to a place on the list of choaches recommended by the A. A. U.

Jack Barry of Holy Cross has turned down an offer made by Clark Griffith to manage the Washington Senators. Jack has a smooth working automobile business in Worcester, besides his coaching job at the college and doesn't want to leave it, even though Griffith was not adverse to promising a long term contract.

Jack O'Hara says he's going to give the rabid fans in the Park City a real ball club. He orates on the new lease on life the club is to take and although no player deals are mentioned, he promises a good team. Alterations on the grounds and stands are to be made.

Elmer Bowman has crossed the experts who were predicting all sorts of new jobs for him. Instead of signing up in the major leagues, he has joined the matrimonial league, which gives him a new manager. Elmer, who is out on the Coast, is to return to his home in Vermont soon, unless he is signed for Western duty.

University of California's hopes of retaining the intercollegiate track and field championship were jarred somewhat by the announcement that Elmer C. Boyden, star quarter-miler, failed to pass the necessary units in scholarship requirements and will not be allowed to return to college.

Against Drake University John Pence of Coe College not only registered the longest drop kick scoring a goal of the year, but the longest that has been made in six years. Pence's kick, coming in the third period, traveled 49 yards. While no player was able to equal Pence's kick in length, four other players did drop kick goals from beyond midfield.

Boston probably has the strongest newspapermen's golf association in the country, its membership numbers more than 100 players, many of whom are capable of qualifying in the major championships.

Miss Gladys Robinson, of Toronto, who has many speed skating championships to her credit, is still in the amateur ranks, although she announced recently that she would become a professional.

Earl Sheely, first sacker of the Chicago White Sox, began his career as a shortstop. An injured ankle that slowed him up caused him to take up catching, but he finally found his spot at first base.

Elmer Smith, who started with Cleveland, then went to Washington back to Cleveland, next to the Boston Red Sox, and finally to New York, is due for another change of scenery, this time to the minors, going to Louisville.

Too much weight kept Jack Bentley from doing good work with the Giants last spring. He reported weighing well over 200 and got a late start. He has profited thereby as he now weighs only 198.

VIEWS ON BRITISH RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA

Washington, Jan. 25—Resumption by Great Britain of full diplomatic relations with Russia in the opinion of President Coolidge will have less bearing upon the attitude of the United States toward Russia than will the investigation of Soviet recognition now being conducted by a sub-committee of the senate foreign relations committee headed by Senator Borah.

Mr. Coolidge believes that the senate inquiry is in competent hands, and it was indicated today that he will not close his eyes to anything which may be developed by the committee. Nothing has occurred to change the attitude of the American government as stated in the president's message to congress in December and it is not expected that any change will be made pending conclusion of the senate investigation.

In a statement tonight Senator Borah said he had presumed "for all practicable purposes we may regard recognition of Russia by the English government as a fact."

"That is a statesmanlike and courageous thing to do," he added. "It marks a distinct break with the bitterness, the hatred, and the intolerance of war times. It points to a new moral and spiritual regime. The way to get rid of bolshevism is to restore sound economic conditions throughout the world particularly Europe.

"The loss of human life, the suffering since the war have been almost as great as during the war, all because of narrow, bigoted, vindictive policies international affairs."

CANTERBURY GREEN

Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock many of the townspeople gathered at the church to attend the funeral of Walter Davis, Rev. Ralph Knight, the pastor, officiating. Two hymns were sung by Mrs. Sager and Hart Goff. Burial was in Carey cemetery. The bearers were Henry Larkham, Henry Lecraw, Walter Sager and Robert Burnett. Among those in attendance from other places were Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Davis of North Haven, Herbert Gardiner, Albert Geer and Mrs. Lucy Chesbro of Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kent of Putnam and Irving Gardiner and Richard Davis of Willimantic.

Mr. Davis was a native of Hampton, born Dec. 9, 1841, the son of George and Susan Geer Davis. About nineteen years ago he came to Canterbury and purchased the farm north of the Green, which has since been his home. During these years he had won the confidence and respect of all the citizens. He had served the town as selectman and shortly before his last illness was elected deacon of the Congregational church of which he was a member and faithful attendant. Last spring he suffered a nervous breakdown from which he never recovered through at times he seemed to improve. He leaves his wife who was Miss Lucy Burnett, and three children, Ruth, Gladys and Walter. Five brothers and sisters survive of whom, Mrs. Minnie Towne and Henry Davis, live in Canterbury. The bereaved family have the sympathy of all.

Mr. and Mrs. Brownell of Riverpoint were guests for the week-end at Henry Larkham's.

Rev. Ralph Knight remained in Hartford this week during examinations at the seminary.

Mrs. Addie Waldo was called to Norwich this week by the serious illness with pneumonia of her brother, Byron Peck.

Mr. Garrison of the state board visited schools here this week.

At the grange meeting Wednesday evening Milo Appley, master, gave a report of the state grange convention recently held at Hartford. An item of interest told was that during the giving of the seventh degree with a class of 300 Mr. and Mrs. Appley were among the ten chosen to assist in exemplifying the work—an honor for Canterbury grange. A supper was served at the close of the meeting, the committee being Mr. and Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Sager.

The all-day meeting of the Ladies' Aid society at Mrs. Lathrop's, Tuesday for the purpose of quilting proved so inspiring that the members became ambitious and repeated operations the next day, finishing the quilt. A bountiful dinner was served on both days, a large chicken pie furnished by Mrs. Hadley being a feature of the feast.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lathrop visited relatives in Norwich Thursday.

SENSATIONAL SHAKE-UP OF NEW YORK POLICE

New York, Jan. 25.—A sensational police shake-up, in which one inspector, three deputy inspectors, 11 captains, 17 lieutenants, 23 sergeants and 330 patrolmen were transferred to other posts was ordered tonight by Police Commissioner Enright. The order also relieved inspectors of responsibility for enforcement of prohibition, that duty being given to a special service division.

The inspector transferred was Edwin H. West, named by Commissioner Enright as one of thirteen in charges made recently that liquor law violations were openly carried on in their inspection districts. Inspector West was transferred from a downtown Manhattan district to the Poplar street station in Brooklyn.

The order affects virtually every inspection district in the city. The special service division to handle Volstead act violations will be increased by the addition of several hundred men.

VICAR OF NORWICH HAS DELIVERED 22,000 SERMONS

London, Jan. 25.—John Wesley's record of having preached 27,000 sermons is being measurably approached by Canon Hay Aitkin, aged vicar of Norwich cathedral, now in his eighty-third year, who has ascended the pulpit to deliver sermons for the 22,000th time. Canon Aitkin began preaching at the age of 17.

Since 1900 when he became attached to Norwich cathedral he has conducted seven to ten missions each year. He plans to continue his mission work for a year or so longer after which he will continue his pulpit work at the cathedral.

Never, he says, has he preached from written sermons and not once has he delivered a sermon written by anyone else. He became aide de camp to Moody in 1875 and for many years preached in England and America.

PREPARING MAUSOLEUM FOR BODY OF LENINE

Moscow, Jan. 25 (By the A. P.)—Work was begun, with the aid of dynamite to break the frozen ground, on a temporary mausoleum in Red square, in which the body of Lenine will be placed after the funeral ceremonies Sunday. The mausoleum will be deep-cellared, especially built to preserve a uniform temperature, will be lighted by electricity, and by means of a mirrored ceiling the casket will be seen at all times.

Again today there was a continuous march of people through the house of unions to view the body of the soviet premier, and up to tonight the number of those who passed through the chamber was placed at almost half a million. Peasants and workers continue to arrive in the capital from distant points to swell the long lines awaiting entrance to the house of unions.

LABORER AWARDED $65,250 AGAINST ERIE RAILROAD

Hornell, N. Y., Jan. 25.—Hugh Stephens, a Canisto laborer, was awarded a verdict of $65,250 against the Erie railroad by a jury in supreme court late today. Stephens lost both legs crushed in the Erie yards last September while he was engaged in icing refrigerator cars at the plant of the Hornell Ice and Storage company. He sued for $100,000 damages claiming that the Erie was negligent in allowing a switch engine to crash into the car on which he was working.

WOMEN'S SHOES TO BE COMMON SENSE STYLES

Chicago, Jan. 25—Common sense styles in women's shoes are coming into their own, said shoe dealers of the country arriving here today to prepare for the thirteenth annual convention of the national shoe retailers' association February 11 to 14.

Of the 15,000 pairs of shoes listed for display in the convention exposition, they declare there is not one revival of the cramping and deforming toes and heel styles which have "almost totally destroyed perfect feet."

COUPLE IN BOSTON WERE ATTACKED BY BOARDER

Boston, Jan. 25—The police answered a riot call today when Zachary Andrew Schutz, apparently insane, attacked Mr. and Mrs. Walter Michalik, with whom he was boarding. The two were cut and bruised in fighting him back from a crib where their child lay sleeping. Andrew Schutz wielded a bicycle pump upon his victims and bit the hands of policemen who took him to a hospital.

It takes more than hot air to kill the germ of suspicion.

Chamonix, France, Jan. 25.—(By The A. P.)—The athletes have taken the spotlight at Chamonix, now that the ceremonies and speech-making of the official opening of the winter sports of the Olympic games have ended and officialdom has been relegated to the rear.

The condition of the American skaters who are to compete is all that could be expected after the difficulties they have encountered in training. They will take the ice tomorrow, fit to give stiff battle to the best skaters of any nation entered. Steinmets, Jewtraw, Donovan, Bialis, Moore and Kaskey, all expressed confidence of success today. They look for the most strenuous opposition from the Finnish team.

The cold weather of the past twenty-four hours has dispelled the suspense due to the long stretch of mild, enervating temperature which had threatened to delay the competition.

The athletes of all the nations took to the ice today with such vim and energy, stored up by reason of their enforced idleness that their managers felt obligated to restrain their ardor. The American hockey players were called off the ice after a few minutes of exercise, William S. Haddock, Pittsburgh, manager of the team, fearing accidents because of the large number of skaters on the rink.

Jewtraw, United States; Gorman, Canada; Thunberg, Finland, and Olsen, Norway, four of the fastest skaters here, hooked up in several turns around the rink in an impromptu race that brought the four or five thousand spectators to their feet cheering.

Prior to the official opening of the games, the competing teams with banners and their national emblems flying, today paraded from the city hall of Chamonix through the streets to the rink, where they filed past the reviewing stand, in which sat Gaston Vidal, under secretary of state for physical education; Count Clary, president of the French Olympic games committee, and the Marquis de Polignac. The band of the 27th Alpine "Blue Devils" played the national anthems of Austria, Belgium, Canada, Esthonia, the United States, Finland, France, Great Britain, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Norway, Poland, Sweden, Switzerland and Czechoslovakia, as the group of athletes passed in that order.

The athletes of Belgium, Canada, the United States and France received the most enthusiastic welcomes. Clarence J. Abel, St. Paul, of the American hockey team was the bearer of the stars and stripes, and Harry Drury, Pittsburgh, carried the American emblem. They took the Olympic oath, administered by M. Vidal, on behalf of the American athletes would be "loyal competitors and respect the rules and regulations in a chivalrous spirit for the honor of our country and the greater glory of sport."

Abel stumbled over his French a few times in repeating the oath, but he told M. Vidal that he would rather be tripped up in his French delivery than while shooting for a goal in the hockey competition. This brought a cordial laugh from the under secretary.

The Olympic spirit which was renewed in the vivifying atmosphere also served to clear up the threatened storm between some of the teams and the organizers of the games growing out of differences of opinion which seemed insurmountable in the smoky committee room. Out in the bright sunshine the differences appeared petty and soon were overcome. William Taylor, manager of the American team, gracefully receded from the attitude taken yesterday with regard to his demand for recognition of Clarence Carmen as an official trainer for the Americans, and the American speed skaters will take to the ice at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in the 500 metre race. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the 5,000 metre event will be contested. The difference between Mukueen of Canada and the officials over the expulsion of the Canadian team from the ice on Thursday also was patched up.

"We will show them that we can win, trainers or no trainers," Taylor told Allen H. Muhr of the French Olympic committee, when announcing that he had withdrawn his threat to prevent the participation of the Americans in the speed skating events.

"You have my best wishes," Muhr responded, and the men shook hands.

Tonight the weather prospects are for continued cold and clear weather, and the organizers of the games feel that success is assured them from all standpoints.

NEW LONDON FLAGS AT HALF-MAST TILL EX-GOV. WALLER'S FUNERAL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Jan. 26.—A fire occurred late this afternoon in the building occupied by Antone Deneski, at 695 Bank street, when a quantity of burning soot in a chimney threatened to cause the fire to reach the living apartments of the occupants. A still alarm was sent to fire, headquarters and Chief Charles Rose and the Niagara Engine company and Allen Hook and Ladder company responded. The firemen had but little difficulty in subduing the blaze, which was confined to the chimney and was extinguished with chemicals and without damage of consequence resulting.

Two New London youths were taken into custody in Norwich this afternoon as runaways. They were held at the police station there until tonight when the father of one of the youths went to Norwich and accompanied both youngsters home. One of the lads, a resident of Main street, will be sent to the reform school at Meriden Saturday morning. He was recently convicted of being incorrigible and was committed to the institution, but the execution of sentence was suspended. Judge S. Victor Prince has knowledge of the conduct of the youth since that time and has ordered the sentence to become operative. Yesterday the boy ran away and started for Hartford. He was picked up near Chesterfield by a New London automobilist and returned to New London. Today, the boy, accompanied by a companion, decided to run away again and this time headed for Norwich, where both were arrested a short tiime after their arrival.

Mrs. Bessie Jackson, of 849 Main street, today applied to Commissioner of Charities Henry F. Dorsey for his aid in the recovery of $5 which Mrs. Jackson's daughter lost and which a boy was reported to have found. Sergeant Frank Howard discovered that the girl suffered a nose-bleed while passing through Main street and in taking her handkerchief from her pocket, the bill which was loose in the same pocket, was flirted to the sidewalk. The girl did not miss the money until some time afterwards and it was then reported that a young man had picked up the bill.

The body of Patrick Ducy, a former resident of New London, whose death occured at Preston several days ago was buried today in St. Mary's cemetery.

The funeral of Daniel Westwick, whose sudden death occurred at his lodging house on Union street Monday night, was held last night at 48 Shapley street. The services were conducted by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which order Mr. Westwick has been a member. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

William H. Silliker, 42, a former resident of New London, died this morning at his home in Somerville, Mass. Mr. Silliker is survived by his father and his wife, Gladys Lester, daughter of Leonard Lester, of New London.

Harold H. Starr, of Williams street, has left for Cuba, where he anticipates remaining two weeks or more

When the funeral of Former Governor Thomas M. Waller is held Monday afternoon at St. Jame's Episcopal church, it is highly doubtful if the seating capacity will be sufficient to accommodate all who will desire to pay their last tribute of respect to one of the foremost citizens of the state. Not only will there be among the attendants at the service many acquaintances, both in social as well as business life, but there will be a large gathering of members of the bar, many from other parts of the state as well as outside the state. Today flags were set at half mast on the staff of the Municipal building, on the building of the Savings Bank of New London and the National Whaling Bank.

The condition of State's Attorney Hadlai Hull was reported this evening as being slightly improved, Mr. Hull having experienced a restful day and apparently had gained slightly in strength.

William H. Noland and Miss Nancy Capron, both of New London, were married last evening, the ceremony being performed at the parsonage of the Second Congregational church by Rev. J. Beveridge Lee.

It is anticipated that the meeting of the city council Monday evening will be of the "hot" order, for the junior high school matter is to come up for consideration again. Two weeks ago the council chamber was filled with interested parties and the debate went on with a good deal of vigor. The matter has been under advisement by a committee of the council and by representatives of the school board, but what course they will recommend is not known. It is said that the purpose is not to have it known until it is proposed to the council next Monday evening. Councilor Whitton has been a stickler for a building that can be erected for the sum appropriated by the city—$500,000. The first plans the school board presented to the council provided for a building that would cost vastly more than that sum. Then they got new plans at a cost, it is said, of $2,500 for architect's fees for a building which, they declared, could be erected within the appropriation, but they gave no guarantee that such would actually be the cost of the structure. So the contest is on and will go to a finish, if is expected.

William Porter, of 248 Crystal avenue, reported to the police this morning that a dog, Angora cat and several ducks had been stolen from the yard of his home. Sergeant Frank Howard obtained information that revealed that the dog disappeared three days ago, that the cat had not been seen for a year and that the ducks were missed six months ago. The police will not give the complaint further attention.

The American investigating Bureau, Department of Research, of New York, has communicated with the New London police requesting information of James R. Ray, who formerly resided at 9 Hope street. Sergeant Frank Howard ascertained that Ray had not resided at the Hope street address for two years and when he left New London he stated that he was en route to Providence and Boston.

An automobile operated by Mrs. W. B. Waterman, of Glenwood park, struck a girl named Connell, about 6, residing at 32 Reed street, this afternoon, corner of Bank and Reed streets. The child escaped with minor injuries as was revealed by an examination made by a physician, who was summoned to treat the girl.

Letitia E. Gardner, administratrix of the estate of Frank S. Gardner, has sold a building lot on Gardner avenue to Hendrik Verkade.

Sarah E. Crocker has sold a house and lot on Lee avenue to Edgar N. and Bessie E. Beebe.

Unconscious at the wheel of his motionless automobile, as the result of imbibing too freely of alcoholic drinks, a fellow was taken into custody this afternoon by Patrolmen William Graham and George Laboue. The man was attended by City Physician George P. Gheney, as it was believed that his condition might have been due to drinking wood alcohol, but such was not the case.

The man had operated his automobile to a point on Huntington street, near Pierce street, where the machine was brought to a stop. The intoxicated driver then fell insensible over the wheel and was observed by a passing automobilist, who removed the keys of the machine from the driver's person in order to prevent any attempt being made to start the car in motion. The keys were delivered to Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy, on duty at the corner of State and Main streets, after which the officer made a report of the incident at police headquarters. The police automobile was sent to where the driver was unconscious and the fellow was taken to the police station, where he remained insensible several hours.

Tonight the man was identified as John Rynoski, a clerk. He had sobered up by 9 o'clock, enough to permit his being held under bail. Rynoski furnished, in I. Merran, a Truman street butcher, a surety on his bond of $200 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

The police patrol is back in commission once more and after having been out of service several weeks. Repairs have been made to the machine and it is hoped that it will do many weeks of service without additional repairs being necessary. The machine has been out of commission the greater part of the past year.

A house on Golden street was visited by the police, last night, because a sailor complained that his wife was entertaining male company. Two girls, one of them the alleged wife of the sailor, were found there, but no charges were preferred against either of the trio, who were released after being advised as to their future conduct.

The condition of Mrs. Margaret Keeney, ill some time at her home, on Williams street, is reported as being greatly improved.

Philip Taub, a resident in the Bronx section of New York, was arrested at the Union station last night by officers in the police department of the road. Taub had come to New London without having paid for his fare on the New Haven road. He seems to have been without purpose and to be possessed of very little judgment. He had a vanity set which he declared he found at the railway station, and which he also said he proposed to sell if he did not find an owner for it. Judge Prince did not encourage the notion that Taub should be entertained at the expense of the county at the jail here, so he turned him over to the probation officer with instructions to that official, to communicate with Taub's parents and to see that he was started on the way back to New York.

Police officers declare that January has been the slowest month thus far in their recollection. Few arrests have been made and there have been many days when there has been no session of the police court.

In confirming that Mme. Ganna Walska, wife of Harold McCormick, of Chicago, had appeared with the Wagnerian Opera company under an assumed name at Detroit, Albany and New London, Conn., Theodore Latterman, general manager of the troupe, revealed yesterday that she had contributed $100,000 toward the expenses of the organization. Latterman, who with twenty-nine members of the Wagnerian company sailed for Germany on the Thuringia of the Hamburg-American line yesterday, said that the money was insufficient to keep the organization going.

Latterman said that Mme. Walska sang the role of the countess in Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" in a praise-worthy manner. He also indicated the possibility that Mme. Walska would appear abroad with his company. He showed a telegram from her wishing the singers greater success in Europe than they had had in America.

Profits of Max Hart as a theatrical booking agent in New York averaged $68,000 a year between 1916 and 1922, his secretary, Josephine Brown, testified in Hart suit for $5,250,000 against the B. F. Keith Vaudeville exchange and others under the Sherman act.

JEWETT CITY

Mrs. B. R. Gardner entertained the Baptist Ladies' Aid society at her home Thursday afternoon. She was assisted by Mrs. Emma Raney, Mrs. Winne Sweet, Mrs. W. H. Brown, Miss Nellie Franklin and Miss May Blake. A calendar social was planned to take place soon.

Miss Faith Gager of North Franklin is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Cheney.

The 26th annual concert and ball, given by A. A. Young, Jr. Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1, Friday evening in the Finn Opera house ranked with the former successes of this popular annual social event.

Shortly after eight o'clock the big balcony was filled to enjoy the concert given by Harry Armour's variety orchestra of Worcester, Mass. They gave an hour of fine entertainment, the applause they received indicating the leasure they afforded the assemblage.

Their program included the following numbers: The Ambassador, march, Bagley; popular selection, Little Nellie Kelly, Cohan; trombone solo, by W. W. Darling; waltz, Kiss in the Dark, Victor Herbert; popular selection, The Rise of Rosie O'Reilly, Cohan; closing with Sousa's famous march, Stars and Stripes Forever.

The large audience that witnessed the grand march, taking note of the finely executed figures, were unanimous in declaring that when it comes to handsome women, gowned in the smartest of beautiful dresses, no event can excel the firemen's ball. The grand march compared favorably with those of other years, the leading couple being Chief Thomas Wakely and Miss Irene L. Stewart. Miss Stewart's dress was turquoise brocaded chiffon velvet, over satin. She wore silver slipper, silver head band and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The dance programme of 24 numbers, was carefully planned to suit all who wished to enjoy its varied selections. Sometimes on the floor there were over a hundred couples and the merry joatling kept all the dancers as well as the spectators in great good humor.

Carnations presented by Mrs. A. A. Young, were offered for sale by Ernest Laranger and George Ritchie. The concert progams were distributed by Thomas Wakeley, Jr., and George Ritchie and the dance cards by Miss Edna Morey and James Wakely.

The orchestra came in for their share of praise for the fine music furnished for the dances. There were visitors present from all the surrounding towns.

The efficient committees, without whom the evening's success would have been impossible were:

Master of ceremonies — Thomas Wakely.

Floor Director—Mose Loranger.

Reception Committee—Wm. Granier, Joseph Couture, Eugene Carroll, Jerry Morey, Peter Bryant.

There were eighty couples in the grand march—the largest number ever at a firemen's ball here. Among the guests during the evening were Fire Chief White, from Groton, Mrs. White, several of the chief's assistants, also the Fire Commissioner.

Funeral services for John P. Gorman were held in the Methodist church at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. Close to three hundred people filled the church. Besides the relatives and 70 Master Masons, largely from Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, F. and A. M., there were reresentatives from more than a dozen other fraternal orders and lodges, both in Jewett City and in Nowich.

These were augmented by a large number who came from all sections of the town and vicinity. The body lay in state during the forenoon and between two and three hundred persons, including a large number of school children came to see their friend for the last time.

JOHN P. GORMAN

After the reading of the Shepherd's psalm and other passages from the Bible, the speaker narrated a number of incidents, touching John P. Gorman not only as the Christian, but as the man. Personal incidents related, were of the sort to deeply impress his hearers with the great loss the church and the community had sustained. Then came the Christian teaching, which he believed was clearly exemplified in the life of his faithful friend.

Rev. John W. Payne, also spoke in a eulogistic manner, and told of the very great good that must still live in the community as the result of the life that had gone. During the service, Rev. and Mrs. Wilber accompanied by Mrs. Irving Thornton sang with harmony, I Know That My Redeemer Lives, and Whittier's, When on My Day of Life the Night is Falling.

At the grave in Jewett City cemetery, the services were in charge of Mt. Vernon lodge, conducted by its Master, Dr. Frnak D. Browning. The fraternity laid to rest their departed brother with full Masonic honors.

The bearers were Archibald M. Clarke, Benj. R. Gardner, Robert J. Guy, Fred S. Campbell, George H. Frior and Everett H. Hiscox.

The flowers were exceptionally beautiful and came from the sister, nieces and nephews, Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, F. and A. M., Columbian Commandery, K. T. Another Triumph for Mrs. Gardner

Again Mrs. Lelia Troland Gardner, of New York, formerly of Norwich, has won praise from the critics, for her work at the big patriotic entertainment of The Pathfinders of America, at the New York Community Church. Mrs. Gardner sang a number of negro spirituals and several of her own songs and received a genuine ovation. One of her numbers was "De Wheel of Love", a fourteenth century spiritual.

She has been complimented by an invitation to sing before the Alabama Society, the club of southern women prominent in New York.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
From Mother—A Valentine

The postman brought it to me this morn,
A token dainty and fair,
Folded in tissue, and tied and sealed.
All with the tenderest care.
The writing I know, and my eyes were dim,
As I loosened the knotted twine,
And I kissed the little card which said:
"From Mother, a Valentine."

I shook it out from its paper folds,
A bit of filmiest lace,
That any queen might be proud to claim,
Since her royal robe 'twould grace.
Each stitch had been taken with patient care,
Of thread that was gossamer fine,
To fashion this gift that had come to me—
"From Mother—A Valentine."

And holding it there in my hand I saw
A vision—none dearer could be:
A farm house old amidst meadows white,
Stretching so wide and free.
In the sunniest window a well-loved face
Wears a smile that seems all divine,
And the dear hands weave as a fairy lace,
"For daughter—a valentine."

Stitch by stitch the fabric grows;
And each has a love thought woven in,
Far sweeter than any rose.
The wireless message is true and clear,
And my eyes with glad tears shine,
As I press my lips to the precious thing—

SUGGESTION ON BIRTHDAY DATES.

Dear Sisters, one and all: Just a few lines this beautiful morning. Was so glad to see the Corner page so full. Let's keep it so if we possibly can. We don't want to miss reading the nice letters that the sisters send in. I always turn to the Corner page and was more than glad to see so many letters. Now I want to speak of the sisters' birthdays. Wouldn't it be a good plan for all the sisters, after they have written, to mention their birthdays and then we could set them all down in a book and then when we wanted to send them a card or anything all we would have to do would be to refer to the book? Anyone is apt to forget the different dates. What do you think about it, sisters?

Twice Twenty: I went to the Brooklyn fair, was there all day Wednesday, and I wore a yellow sow besides, but never saw anyone all day that had the yellow bow on. Hope to meet someone next time if all is well. Would like very much to get acquainted with some of the sisters and if we couldn't get to the club meetings we could correspond by letter if no more.

Free Air: Why don't you write longer letters? We will need all we can get later on when housecleaning will be in order.

Ma of Greene Gables: Please write as I like to read your interesting letters. Hurry and get your mending done and get time to write.

As I am hulling corn will send in my recipe. Just take two tablespoons of baking soda or saleratus to one quart of corn, put on stove and boil for four or five hours and wash in several waters to remove the hulls and then put on stove in clear water, changing three or four times to remove the soda, stirring often as it burns easily. Salt the last water.

As some of the sisters requested more recipes I will send in a good and cheap cake that you can bake in a large loaf or two medium loaves. Beat two eggs well and then add one cup sugar, a little salt and flavor and beat again and then add one cup of hot water and two and one-half cups flour sifted with three rounding teaspoons of baking powder. Try this and see if you don't like it.

Will close by wishing everyone health and happiness. Always remember to be content with what you have and the skies will brighten o'er you.

Good luck to all.

RURAL AUNTY.

BUSY WITH RUGS AT 86.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It has been some time since I wrote you a letter on my birthday and partly promised myself to write once a month, but I certainly have enjoyed reading every letter in the Corner. Am rejoicing that the advertisements have disappeared from the page. May they be crowded out for the rest of the year.

I have been especially pleased to know that so many writers have such a courageous and even joyous spirit in time of sorrow. It shows to whom they belong and whom they serve. When Roosevelt received the telegram saying that Quentin had died in France, the tears ran down his face but he said, "Thank God for Quentin."

Rural Aunty must be very busy most of the time. My mother is making hooked rugs and just came in to ask me to color some orange to put around scroll work, so I must get busy. As it is too cold for hanging out doors will dry by the fire.

Mother is 85 years old and makes both hooked and braided rugs.

I have enjoyed reading The Blackberry Gift again because my father used to recite parts of it so often when I was small.

This is a cold day but we have had very few this winter. Perhaps the wild geese are right as I read that a flock was seen flying north over Springfield the other day.

If it is not too late I wish the editor and all Corner sisters a very happy new year,

ROSARY (Aug. 18th.)

LETTERS THAT PARTICULARY INTEREST

Dear Social Corner Members: Enjoyed the Corner page especially on Jan. 12th. Now I want to take my turn and thank the sender of my pretty calendar.

I am wondering if Flower Lover can be someone I have known, as she mentions rooming with Neighbor Eveready. Was it at Willimantic Normal school? We shall be anxious for a letter from the bride to know if she remains in Connecticut as where we shall find her. All best wishes to her and hers.

My windows are not real sunny in winter—too much verandа—so I have to plan for flowers that will do well under these conditions. My crab or Christmas cactus never fails to give its midwinter glory I have one tree blooming red begonia and cyclamen raised from seed are now coming on. A pot of fuzias are budding nicely, hyacinths showing their color at the tips bud clusters and tulips and daffodils starting out. I get only early varieties as late ones come too late in spring.

I started a dwarf lemon and orange last summer. A neighbor has an orange and it blossoms all the year and I had great hopes when mine began to bud as soon as taken into the house. But some little flies came to inhabit it and soon the buds fell, followed by the leaves. I used soap and tobacco, but I failed to dispel them. Can anyone tell me what to do to keep one another time?

I was interested in the Corner sister who has a daughter in East Northfield. I have a sister living on Main street. I was there in November. It must be a nice place to live.

I wonder how many of you read C. A. Stevens stories in the Youths' Companion. This recipe he gives in one of his books for "White Monkey," is one we have often for supper and we never fail to scrape the dish:

White Monkey: For three persons: One pint new milk, when warm stir in 1 teaspoon flour mixed with two tablespoons cold water. As milk gets hotter add slowly so as to dissolve it, 2 ounces cheese, grated, or chipped fine. Add 1 ounce butter, 1 teaspoon salt, a dash of cayenne pepper, 1 egg well beaten and mixed with 2 tablespoons milk or water. Let simmer 5 minutes and serve hot on wheat bread or brown bread (or johnnycake) well buttered. With all best wishes

HOW MAINE HAS FARED.

For the past week we have had beautiful weather with snow all gone in places. Only one morning has the thermometer been below zero. It was 18 below just once. It has amused me when letters have questions like these: "See by paper snow was three feet deep at Bangor—or is snow two feet deep on level?"

I am pleased to answer that while that amount of snow fell in New Hampshire and Massachusetts, 20 inches, I believe, is the heaviest fall we have had. I was sorry to read of so many of our dear sisters being in poor health. Trust they are feeling better.

Dom Pedro: I thank you for the calendar, also the Social Corner sister who so kindly sent me the pretty calendar. I had nine sent me. Guess I have enough for one year.

BALSAM FIR.

GREETINGS FROM BARBAR.

To the Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: I, too, received a nice little calendar and did not know who to thank until I read the sisters' letters, so I think mine came from the same source, so I thank you.

Photographer: I am so glad to read you received a prize. Am sorry you have so much sickness. Hope the little boy is better, also yourself. What a nice winter we are having. Hope it keeps so till spring.

Iola: We are waiting to hear more about Westminster. Do you remember Prof. W. O. Turner and his singing school?

C. E. S.: Are you making quilts this winter? Tell us about it.

SAD OVER LOSS OF TROLLEY CARS

Dear Corner Members: I wish the editor and all of the Social Cornerites a happy and prosperous new year and wish to thank the Social Corner Member for the lovely little calendar I received. It reminds of spring with its bright blue birds. I feel as if I needed something cheerful as we have lost the trolley cars through here. We have a bus line but it won't be so convenient as the trolley.

I thank all of the members that sent me Christmas cards.

DELIGHT.

USES TAFT'S RECIPE OFTEN

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I wish to send my thanks to a Social Corner members for a lovely calendar I received. It was lovely and I appreciate it very much. My thanks to H. M. L. and Neighbor Eveready for birthday cards.

I have so little to write about. The most I see are the hens, cows, dogs and the child, and they only interest me.

I think Tafts sent in a chocolate cake recipe that I use very often.

Best wishes to all.

CHEFS SISTER.

SISTER AMY SICK.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have been thinking of writing for a long time but have been putting it off. What nice weather we have been having for winter, but it is some colder this morning. I met Theoda on the street last week. She had just come from the hospital. She had been to see Amy. I am sorry she is so bad. Shall try to see her this week.

ELANORA (Aug. 21).

OLD FRIENDS.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I resolved I would write to the corner the first of the year and if I do so must hurry as January is nearly gone. How time does fly! If I had written as many times as I have intended to write there would have been a good many letters from May B. Do I hear some one say "She must have quite a pavement in the place said to be paved with good intentions?" However, I never fail to read the Social Corner in Saturday's Bulletin and always find something good. I liked what one of the sisters wrote a few weeks ago about making new friends as we were bound to lose some old ones in this changing world. "Such losses are sadly met, they break the long trusted bounds of association and remove a part of our own life. Old friends grow dearer as they grow fewer. Those who remember us as long as we remember ourselves become a part of ourselves at last and leave us poorer when they are taken away." I think that quotation is true so send it for someone else to read.

How sad it must be for a person to outlive all the friends of their own age, not to have anyone they can turn to and say, do you remember?

I want to thank a Social Corner member for the pretty calendar she sent me. I don't know who she is so thank her through these columns. I thought of the saying. If you have a kindness shown 'twas not meant for you alone, pass it on." I have passed on her kindness by taking a pretty card and little gift to a lady 85 years old.

I visited my sisters (also a Social Corner sister) in December. While there we attended the New London Pomona Grange, she being one of the joining candidates.

While there we were talking with a lady and she mentioned having attended a Social Corner meeting at the Buckingham. So I asked her if she was a writer and found she was L. C. E. She introduced us to another one, Snowflake and pointed out another one whose name she didn't know. So there were five of us there and I wondered how many more we didn't know of. I enjoyed meeting with her very much and hope we will meet again.

I called upon Sister Breeze while I was away. I had always thought she took the name Breeze because her house is in a breezy location, but from her last letter I see it is because her birthday is in March. I hope it will send in another of those old letters. It is interesting to read of the customs of those bygone days.

Old letters and auto-biographies present a true picture of the times in which they were written.

I was glad to read 1893's letters. Twice Twenty has been the loyal mainstay from up this way. I think it's time we heard from some of the others.

Just Me: Why don't you write? I had a good laugh when I read Twice Twenty's letter last Saturday. The thoughts of Mr. T. T. using the cream of wheat for butter was funny. That kind of surprises always are funny, I will tell you about one I had once, some time when I write again.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year.

MAY B

EARLY DAYS IN SOUTH DAKOTA

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Are there really several who would like to hear me tell of our life in South Dakota before the days of autos and telephones? I could answer questions and tell you a lot, for I went there as a bride—a very, very unsophisticated one—and really not expecting to stay only till we got a deed of 160 acres of the best land in the world. That was the way all of us went everyone just thinking it a summer's outing and getting a farm from Uncle Sam for almost nothing while having a good time. We were all young—single and married, shop men, clerks, teachers, cooks, new professional sprouts of all sorts and a few real dirt farmers. Imagine the picnic ideas and picnic times gradually growing into realities. We were a big family depending on each other; and when stress and storms arrived, as do to us all everywhere, there was truly demonstrated the survival of the fittest. The foolish ones who had "no oil in their lamps" were left behind, as anywhere else. It was the enactment of the Pilgrim Fathers over again with necessary variations.

After 23 years of pioneering there was still romance enough left in us to try going back to so-called civilization, where again one could get abandoned farms for almost nothing and be near to all things desirable on earth. We had become used to driving ten miles for our mail and supplies, and visiting neighbors with a spy glass and skipping next door (a mile away) for a little chat. I remember one neighbor who hitched an old cow to the cellar door (taking the door from its hinges) putting her baby in a clothes basket and setting it on the door and riding and walking four miles over the slick grassy prairie to see a sick neighbor and be of some help.

Ten years now have we lived here on this little farm. People often ask which we like best. Comparisons are odious, you know. But everything is so different, there is no comparison. We find good neighbors and congenial friends in both places and all the good things are not in one place. We must accept the bitter with the sweet.

We had a hand in dividing Dakota into two states, going three capital fights, county seat fights, prohibition and constitutional fights and are perfectly willing to let some younger blood carry on to the end.

We have learned that there are no more bad storms per mile out there than here. There have been several severe cyclones and destructive storms here in Connecticut every year. It is a surprise to stretch one's ideas to space. Put your finger Connecticut on a map of the United States, and you cover the whole state. Put your finger on South Dakota in the same map and you may cover one county, and there are twice as many people in Connecticut as in South Dakota but South Dakota produces more wealth per capita than any other state in the union, remembering the richest ten miles square in the world is in the Black Hills.

I'll wait another time to tell you of our discovering artesian wells that are now used for light and power on nearly every farm. I want to return thanks for the calendar, and the card from Theoda.

GREETINGS FROM OLIVE

Social Corner Sisters: Wish to thank all the Corner writers who so kindly sent me cards. Sisters, I had 48, 20 from the Corner friends, and I thank you. I can't tell you how many times I have looked them over, I think a great deal of them all.

Huldy: I hope brother is fine by this time, and can enjoy the south. Lovely weather up here in Connecticut, so far though.

Lavender: How I would love to run in for a chat while I wait for my car up here. Hope you have been well and will keep well.

Theoda & Brave: What are you up to this lovely weather? How I do miss all the Corner friends.

Through Jennie I met Priscilla at a W. R. C. meeting. The Norwich sisters will know who I mean. She is living here now not far from me.

Clio and Harlett: Why don't you come up? Fine weather to go, so warm.

Little Sister: How are you this winter? You surely can go for the snow cant keep you in this winter so far.

Happy New Year to all.

OLIVE.

ALCOHOL TAKES OFF WHITE MARKS

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner: Wish to thank Corner member for my calendar.

Calla Lily: A little alcohol takes the white stains off from your table and will not hurt the polish. Am glad to hear you say you are not of the lonesome nature, for I am never lonesome.

Flower Lover: You must have lots of room for plants. Begonias I think are nice, but I have not got one. I have 15 plants and they look good. Have always had plants in the winter could not do without them, or think I could not.

Marigold: Wish I could have met with Club No. 1. They do have such nice times.

Wishing you all a happy New Year

WILD FLOWER

A LETTER OF THANKS.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sister: Many thanks to a Social Corner member for a very pretty calendar.

Thanks to the sisters who so kindly sent me Christmas cards and to Bertha and True Blue for birthday cards January 21.

Bonie: You have my deepest sympathy.

Joan: Wall plant is in bloom.

A happy and prosperous New Year to all.

CHATTY LETTER FROM FOXGLOVE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: You have held both your January meeting and had I known the weather and the driving were going to be so good Whirlwind and I would have been at one of the meetings.

You see as I live off the main road I have never driven after the snow came, but this year it has been so open I could have driven every day. Today I received my markers for 1924, so if the driving and weather permits, Whirlwind and I will be at one of your meetings. I really ought to leave Whirlwind at home after what she told you about me in the Corner two weeks ago. Even if I am a great talker I notice she always likes to take me along with her wherever she goes and has for almost 15 years and she is not deaf yet. It's I that's a little deaf—so you see she does her share of the talking. Oh well, I don't mind what she says as long as you all don't agree with her.

I certainly look forward to getting my paper with the Social Corner news every week. Just as soon as I get it I glance at the name signed to each letter to see if any one of the sisters I have met have written. If they have I read their letters first, then I read the rest. I read every word of every letter.

My mother is in Sarasota, Fla., for the winter and I send her the Social Corner page, for she enjoyed reading it so much when she was with me. Also let my neighbor read them before I send them away and she looks for the paper almost as eagerly as I do.

I had several cards during the holidays and I thank all the sisters who sent them. During the winter I mean to send every sister whose address either Whirlwind or I have a card—sending a few each week. You who have never been in our pretty town will enjoy views of our public buildings and principal street, I know. We have a very fine library—one of the best high schools (in which my boy is a junior) and four other high schools, seven churches in the town proper, two banks, T. A. B. hall, Red Men's hall and a great many stores, lodges and societies of all kinds. It is a great town for manufacturing—forging and hardware.

Thames View: Where are you these days? I always look to see if you have written in the Social Corner, but as yet I've seen nothing. Would be glad to hear from you.

Joan—Faithful Joan: I saw your happy face at both meetings and by the way the sisters greeted you I judge you are an old standby. Am I right sisters?

Twice Twenty: Am sorry it was so stormy you could not get to the cemetery in Norwich the day we laid Old Timer away, but it could not be expected it was such an awful day.

How is your better half? I hope if Whirlwind and I are able to get to a meeting next month you will try and come too. Whirlwind can let you know for sure later.

Nema: You said it when you say the Corner sisters make one and all welcome. Why? No one could feel like a "stranger within your circle" long. We don't feel like strangers at all. Whirlwind and I talk about you all just as we'd been going to your meetings for ever so long. We are impatiently waiting for the time to come to your picnics this summer.

Chocolate: What are you doing that you can't find time to write us a word once in a while? Write, sister, but don't write as much as I do unless you can make it more interesting.

Ma of Greene Gables: I've never met you only through you letters, but hope to meet you personally some time.

There are several of the sisters who write such lovely letters that I am very anxious to meet them.

Now I know if I don't stop writing you will all say I deserve everything Whirlwind wrote about me, and the long suffering editor will begin to heave a sigh every time he sees one of my letters coming.

Hoping the weather will be such that we can see you either at Club No. 1 or No. 2 this next month, I will say good night and best wishes for the success of the Corner. It means more to the members than any of us realize.

FOXGLOVE.

ANNUAL TRIP TO MOUNTAINS

Dear Social Corner: I am glad to see the Corner page filling up again which means that it is still alive and progressing this lovely New Year, and let us hope it will continue.

I wish to render thanks for the dear little calendar which I was remembered with and which hangs in my desk as I write and which each day reminds me of a Corner friend whoever it may be who kindly sent it. I am wondering if it came from headquarters. Cannot some one of the Cornerites give the right guess?

I was absent from home all through the fall and until after Thanksgiving and what a lovely fall and winter we have had thus far! Lots of the dear old bare ground loved by us old people who can only toddle along as well as we can even in the best traveling and whose coasting and snowballing days are past and gone.

I suppose our young people are wishing for snow and ice to coast and skate on, but they have more time to wait than we have and a little lesson in patience will help make good citizens of them. An old saying is that winter never rots in the sky, and there is probably lots of fun ahead for them even though winter is nearly half gone.

My annual fall visit with my friends in the mountains was a real joy and never was there a more gorgeous display of color. Who can doubt the love of our Infinite Father who has eyes to see the wonderous works of His creation. If I was a millionaire I would invite the whole Social Corner, Editor and all, to take on outing on the old Central Vermont train on just such a day as the one on which I left for Massachusetts. I cannot find words to describe the glories of nature which were unfolded to me as I went along. The train was not one of those speeders that make one's head spin and that is liable to jump the track at any moment—but holds to the same old gait which it started out with something like a century ago, but which gets there on time just the same.

Now keep coming all ye Cornerites, let the good work go on.

R. I. J., Little Sister, Sally Sycamore and Comfort: Where are you all? Wishing all the Corner a happy and prosperous New Year and with kind regards to all, as ever,

JERUSHY SPICE.

NAPKIN RINGS

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: I see that several of the sisters I know have been busy with the pen so I must start the New Year the same, with the resolution of regular Social Corner writing. I do not see the Social Corner every week but I enjoy the numbers when I do see them as they are saved for me and I read them all at one time.

Neighbor Eveready surely did surprise us.

Dew Kist: I hope you are feeling much better when you read this.

Midget: Suppose you are busy as usual. How does the crocheting seem to be? I am busy at it as usual. Am making a very pretty yoke at present.

Will tell the sisters of a suggestion for napkin rings which are easy to make. Use the card board spools from your crochet cotton. The ones from O. N. T. thread are best as there is but one top to be removed. Remove the one or two tops whichever it may be. Now crochet a band two spaces wider on each side than the spool making it long enough to stretch around the spool, making any dainty design you may choose and join together. Break off your thread and crochet lengthwise of your strip on each side by going into every other space so as to draw in the band to fit over the edges of the spool. The spools may also be hand painted in any design if one proves to be handy with the paint brush. The crocheted bands may be slipped off and washed when ever soiled and the spools can be replaced with new ones, so in every way they are quite inexpensive, but dainty and useful. I made one in the variegated silkateen with a simple design.

My pen is going dry so will close wishing one and all a happy New Year.

AGATHA.

GREETINGS AND RECIPES FROM WHITE CLOVER.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: It's been about three months now that I've been going to write to the Corner page, so here I am.

I was sorry I could not have been with you all at the last meeting but that is the day our sewing club meets and I didn't think I ought to be gone all day. I heard from one of the sisters after the meeting and she said "We had a lovely dinner."

Katydid and I wanted to go to the Buckingham for the last two meetings but something came up so we could not go. I hope the next meeting we can go. I never have been but once and I had a fine time then. My husband picked up four russet apples in our orchard last Sunday as he was walking out and brought them in the house and I had a piece which was very good for this time of year, the middle of January.

Delilah Deal: How are you nowadays? I did want to send you a card when I heard you had been sick, but did not have a good one in the house at the time.

O, how I miss Mandy's letters, he used to write such fine ones.

Snow Drop: You see I am not asleep. I thought I better hurry up and write before next summer. We might meet again on the Willimantic camp ground at my aunt's cottage.

Student: Why are you keeping so still? I have not seen a letter in the Corner page from you for a long time. Hope you are well.

Sister Ready: Where are you living now? Don't you wish you were in Willimantic now? Remember when we walked to work together? Well, I think one of the sisters asked for a cake recipe.

Devil's Food Cake: One-fourth cup shortening, one cup sugar, two and one-half ounces unsweetened chocolate, one-half cup mashed potatoes, one egg, three-eighths cup milk, one and one-fourth cups flour, two teaspoons Royal baking powder, one-half cup chopped nuts, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Cream shortening, add sugar, melted chocolate and mashed potatoes and mix well. Add egg yolk, milk and flour, baking powder, sift with flour, add beaten whites at last. Bake 25 to 35 minutes.

Marshmallow Icing: Three-fourths cup granulated sugar, one-third cup water, six to eight marshmallows, white of one egg, few drops of vanilla.

Happy New Year to all, from

WHITE CLOVER.

ALWAYS FOUND CORNER OF MUCH HELP

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: How nice to see the page full again and such nice letters too. I have not written in quite a while. Don't have much time. But I do manage to read every letter. It does one lots of good to read all the different letters.

Student: I read your letter over and over. I'm quite sure I know who is who. Doesn't it tire you to walk as you say you like to do? I know it must be hard to part with dear ones. I often wonder what I would do if I lost any of mine. But it can not be helped, the Lord knows best.

Your husband's father must be quite advanced in years. I remember when they lost their home by fire. I was just a little girl.

Lo: Why don't you write to the Corner? How is your sister V.? I used to work with her years ago. I suppose you had a grand time Oct. 30. Am I right? Some time when I meet you I will say Hello, Lo, but I like to have you guess. I think that's the biggest fun.

Connecticut Sue: When I first went to housekeeping for myself like you the Social Corner helped me in many ways. Hope these will help you.

Plain Cake: 1-4 cup shortening, 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, 1 cup milk, 2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons Royal baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt. Cream shortening add sugar slowly, add well beaten egg and flavoring. Sift together flour baking powder and salt and add to mixture a little at a time alternately with milk. Bake in greased loaf or layer cake pans. Wishing all members a happy New Year.

CLEAR MINDED CITIZENSHIP

Dear Social Cornerites: I write to thank the thoughtful sister who sent me such a charming calendar. I wonder who it is, but suppose I may not know. I keep it where I can look at it often and so am constantly reminded of the unknown donor.

We owe Wrinkle a vote of thanks for her timely suggestion: "Do with your might what your hands find to do if it is your to do, but don't presume to do the other's job."

Black Eyed Susie's reference to the ten year old's reading habits reminds me of an incident which took place at the home of an acquaintance whom I was visiting. One of the daughters of the house was reading a novel which I happened to know was a most objectionable story, told in the coarsest possible manner.

Later I asked the mother whether she knew what the girls were reading. She did not but "supposed" that since it came from the library it must be suitable!

Patrons of country libraries are at liberty to suggest titles for books that they wish to read, sometimes knowing little of the works they request. As no one connected with the library force has time to review these publications, many objectionable and even vicious works of fiction find their way to the shelves unchallenged, constituting a most dangerous weapon to be used in breaking down of the finer nature of our impressionable young people.

It seems a pity that some portion of our "misappropriated" public fund could not be used in the employment of well-qualified men and women who should serve in the capacity of "fiction tasters" to review faithfully the modern novel before it is placed in the hands of our youth. Clear-minded citizenship is a many hundred per cent. return for money and time spent in the protection of our children's morals.

Finally is the public library an unmitigated blessing? Not without the faithful co-operation of the parents themselves and a deeper interest on the part of the general public.

REPAIRING RUGS AND BLANKETS.

Dear Social Corner Friends: The cheerful looking calendar received for which accept my thanks. I thought of the time required to select, do up and address and last, but not least, moisten the stamp and send it out to cheer us. This ran through my mind while undoing the gift. Well, whoever sent me this was thinking of me while in the operation! 'Tis sweet to be remembered and I appreciate all kind acts, and may I sometime meet the doner "face to face."

Time is approaching when many articles used in our houses will need repairing and I've just finished fixing a woven rug out of old carpets. Where the ends were beginning to wear I just cut off the binding, pulled out the filling one inch or more and then tied the warp together, taking one thread from upper side and one from underneath and tied them together. I did not look out to the other end of rug to see the distance I'd have to go but tried to think of where I'd like to go this summer—who I might meet of my younger days—glanced at the clock and found I consumed thirty minutes on each end and the usefulness of the rug will be prolonged. Can cut fringe off if considered too long, but do not get it too short for service. Yesterday I found a small rug alike on both sides—guess they used to be called Smyrna. Anyway, regardless of the name, it was beginning to blossom out on one edge. I did not feel just in the mood but thought of "stitch in time saves nine" and found some variegated silkatine, threaded a suitable needle and commenced work by backstitching over just one row at a time, using double thread and when cleaned and spread down in front of my bureau I thought, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

In cutting cotton or woolen blankets in two a neat and durable way to fix edges is to take suitable size thread and cross-stitch—like an X—but be sure to take one stitch above and one below the raw edge. Do not turn in the cut edge—turn over for a hem about half inch and if work is well done there will be no trouble about raveling. I once hired a woman who worked on dresses to fix a blanket (cotton) for me, explained how I'd like it done and she made the X but did not go below the cut edge when turned down and ravelings not well secured were an unpleasant reminder to me when in use.

If a blanket, cotton or woolen, gets worn and cannot be used for a large bed cut down for small bed. If too small for use on small bed fix edges of what is left as described above and this time of year it will be acceptable to throw around the shoulders in your own room in bed or out.

Aunt Jerusha: Your nice long interesting letter received. Accept my thanks. We came to this place (Threed City) in May, 1867—so as we left you came—but we both know Hampton to be a good place to live or visit in.

I wish you all health, for with health comes happiness and prosperity—or should.

I enjoy all letters of whatever nature over any signature and some people on the outside have said to me—"Where do the writers find such queer names"—but that is our secret.

Yours,

CRETIA.

MILD WINTER A BLESSING

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Some kind sister (who I am very sure I don't know) sent me a very lovely calendar for Christmas and I have it hung up where I can see it and it reminds me of the Social Corner and also of my duty to the Corner, to write more often. Did anyone ever see such a beautiful January before? It seems almost like the month of May these warm days. What a blessing it is, for poor people, in particular, in the saving of coal!

Our holidays have passed for another year and as usual we had our good times once more. Our dear boy is in Florida in St. Petersburg, the Sunshine City and his chum is with him. They are having a most delightful time and write such nice interesting letters. He sent up a crate of delicious grape fruit and oranges for Christmas. They were wonderful and the best I ever tasted. We miss him, but we know he is enjoying himself and will be back in the spring, so we have that to look forward to. It is rather early for Valentine day but I may not write again before that and I have a few nice verses my mother sent me once with a nice present for a Valentine. I love the verses and maybe some other sister will enjoy them, too. Guess the Editor will want to have room for other letters beside mine, so I will close and wish him and the Social Corner sisters a happy New Year if it is not too late.

YELLOW DAISY.

MAKING CREAM PIE FILLING:

Editor and All Members of Social Corner: The past one has been some week. Why go to Florida?

I. J. B.: I am glad you fried the Glorified ginger bread. I like it. Thank you for reporting.

Foxglove: I hope I shall see you again.

Connecticut Sue: Try this for once:

Cream Pie Filling: One pint of milk, 3-4 cups of sugar, pinch of salt, 2 tablespoons of flour, 1 egg, pint milk in double boiler or over hot water, scald, add salt and flour, wet with cold water and cook till it thickens. Then add egg yolk and sugar beaten together. Cook for a minute or so, cool and flavor. You can use white for the meringue or beat still and add to the mixture when you remove from fire. By adding two squares of chocolate you will have a very nice chocolate pie.

Did you ever turn your pie pan up side down, fit crust on and bake. Take off shell, put in pan and you have a very nice shell.

I enjoyed the January 9th meeting oh, so much and I am in hopes I can get to the February one.

This is pretty long—so will close, As ever

JOYS AND APPRECIATING THEM

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Our last week's Bulletin was up to the mark, or rather the Corner page was filled with letters, some of the writers had not written for many months. It is interesting to note, that all say that they read the letters every week, even if they do not contribute. This shows the interest in the Social Corner work is not lacking, from that standpoint.

The sentiment which appears on the left hand corner of last week's issue, has many good and sensible thoughts to draw from. "Life is full of joys if we only know how to appreciate them" It appeals to me that frequently those things we receive from others, either as personal favors or gifts, we fail to express our appreciation, and thereby lose for ourselves that pleasure of seeing our benefactors made happy which they are justly entitled to. We have always been taught that it is more blessed to give than to receive.

This subject also has its many sides as it takes all kinds of people to fill the world. I am reminded of a friend of mine who once told me about some picture books that she had kept for several years that were given to her when a child. They were in good condition and well worth the pleasure that some other child might derive from them. But as time slipped on, my friend did not find just the right kind of children she wanted to give them to. Finally she did come across a family whom she thought these books would interest and please their children, so she gave them away. However, it was only a short time, before those books were destroyed by ill usage and thrown away—No appreciation no regard for the kindness of the giver. On the other hand we find many who are surely appreciative and express themselves likewise. Then the pleasure of giving equals that of the receiver and both sides are happy. The only solution to these problems are that its the various make-up of humanity. None of us like to be ridiculed or hear from a second hand source in regards to some gift we have given.

Another case of unappreciation. We can all make mistakes, but it's not easy to rectify them, or lee the same slip by, unforgotten. To have the real essence of joy, it requires mutual partnership. To know how to appreciate joys we must study motives, we must avoid the false pretense, under the guise of a friend. Sometimes it takes years for truth to rise and become visible, but once it has dawned its light is not quenched again.

We can all find joy in appreciating this mild winter weather, especially those of us who have our health. My sympathy always goes out to the sick and shut-in, those who suffer, and are weary at heart. Those that are lonely and disappointed, may they find some joy somewhere to appreciate.

SAVE PUMPKINS AND SQUASHES BY CANNING

To the Editor and Members of the Social Corner: I have been much interested in reading the letters in The Bulletin and would like to join the circle if I may.

A few weeks ago I read of the sister who has the large pumpkin and made so many pies. I wondered why she did not can it and then have a pie or two at any time when needed. Two years ago we raised quite a few nice squashes and kept them until into the winter. When they began to decay. I pared them as usual and steamed them, then sifted as for pies. Then I filled this into sterilized pint jars taking care to get out all the air. Did not fill the necks as it swells. Put on rubber cover, and one spring and put into my hot water outfit and cooked 2 hours. A pint jar will make two pies.

I still have some of that squash now and it is perfectly good.

Last week, I cooked a pumpkin, and not wanting to use the whole filled a pint jar and steamed it in the kettle with my brownbread for an experiment.

Some one spoke of a bride who might like recipes. Now some people say they never can use sour milk but I like to use it and we like home made griddle cakes better than the prepared.

Griddle Cakes: 1 cup flour, 1 cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda and a little salt is the rule for mine. A little stale cake crumbled finely improves them.

SYMPATHIZES WITH SICK AND BEREAVED

Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I will write to the Corner as I have not written for a long time. I do not go out much and have not attended the meetings for some months. I thought I should be present January 2 but it stormed so I stayed home.

I thank a Social Corner member for a nice calendar and those who sent me cards.

I am not very strong and get tired easily. Am sorry for the sick and hope they will be well soon, I sympathize with those who have lost dear ones and hope they will find comfort and rest by trusting in the One that can and does comfort, and has promised to do that for all that do trust in Him.,

Success for the Corner.

CLUB NO. 3 HAD FINE TIME

Dear Social Corner Members: At last my pen has begun its duty. Although I have enjoyed the letters each week Club No. 3 had its first meeting this winter in the Baptist chapel with an attendance of 50, January 16. The tables were heavily laden with a good variety of hot dishes as well as cake, pie and doughnuts, also coffee to drink. After dinner a guest favored us with two songs which were enjoyed by all. We were also glad to see members from Club No. 2 walk in. We were also glad to have so many friends with us, and hope that some of them will become members.

Connecticut Sue: Will send in a recipe for spice cake which I like and it keeps so good:

Cold Water Cake: One cup shortening, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup molasses, 1 cup cold water, 1 egg, 4 cups flour one-half teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, cinnamon and clove, 1 cup seedless raisins. This makes two loaves. Hope you will like it.

Grace: Have not forgotten you. Wish you could have been with us January 16th. Are you making curtain pulls?

Best wishes for the Corner.

MALVINA.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN WRITERS GET BUSY

Dear Social Corner Friends: It is evident the Corner writers have got down to business from the full page of letters the past week. The skunk that was on the page recently has gone into his hole and other advertisers who do not deal in fur have been pushed over to the next page.

Anna Mell: As I met a large number of the good Corner people at Aunt Mary's picnic it is hard to remember who was who. It is nice to meet so many friends at the Corner picnics.

Primrose: The weather of this winter does make me think of California but we do not have the flowers and fruit and beautiful roads where mud is never known. We may yet have a taste of old New England winter and

New System of Fat Reducing

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at that old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements perfected by one of the foremost physicians. Now, from the same high authority, there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same, pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bedtime, they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertion and self-denial cannot do, and the fat once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. A box—sufficient to bring results—is but one dollar.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Cold weather with plenty of snow was experienced by Norwich people half a century ago, and for several days the Thames river was closed to navigation other interesting happenings for the week as taken from the files of the Bulletin of 1874 are as follows:

Monday, Jan. 19, 1874—Immense ice floes on the river yesterday attracted many sight seers to the banks. The drifting fragments broke down by the swift current were piled up together with the dazzling whiteness of the material, a beautiful picture of arctic scenery was presented.

The Thames river was closed to navigation Saturday for the first time this season.

By counties the lawyers are located as follows: New London 68; Windham 34; Tolland 10. In the city of Norwich there are 32; in New London 23.

At a meeting of the reading room committee held at the office of George Pratt Saturday evening it was voted to continue the room as in the past year, as a reading room free to all, and supported by voluntary contributions. About $2000 is required to keep the room open.

The enumeration of school children in the central school district has been completed by C. F. Dennison. The number of children between the ages of 4 and 16 in the district was 1563 a gain of 60 over 1873; the number attending public school is 1044; attending private schools 134; attending no school 385. In the West Chelsea district the enumeration completed by Palmer Bill gives the total number of children as 870, a falling off of 139 from last year. Those attending public school number 703; private school 19; not attending school 148.

The omnibus with four horses was put on the Bean Hill route yesterday afternoon. The Greeneville track has also been cleared for the passage of horse cars.

Wednesday, Jan. 21, 1874—Mrs. William Brewster of the West Side was severely injured Saturday when she fell down the cellar stairs while going after coal. O. W. Douglas and Capt. Nathan Small found her in an insensible condition.

The Burns club will celebrate the anniversary of the birth of the great bard of Scotia and Owaneco hall, Greenville, next Friday evening. Songs will be given, toasts drunk and sentiments offered, as usual, and the pleasanteet time may be expected.

G. W. Vogel, formerly of the Vogel and Hughes Organ Co., has received two valuable patents on cabinet pipe organs, and has commenced to manufacture the same in J. Hunt Smith's factory on Franklin street.

A number of local people have visited the postoffice this week to see their names written in beautiful style by Henry E. Buck who is doing some fine card writing at that office.

Thursday Jan. 22, 1874—The representation of ten colleges met in Hartford yesterday and held the annual meeting of the College Rowing Association. The possibility of the selection of the Thames river as a course made the meeting possess something of a local interest. Colleges represented were Yale, Harvard, Amherst, Bowdoin, Columbia, Cornell, Princeton, Trinity, Wesleyan, Agricultural, Williams and Dartmouth. It was voted to go on to Saratoga, only Amherst, Dartmouth, Harvard opposing that course.

A fourteen years old pupil of High street school was arrested yesterday morning for striking his teacher over the head with a slate. He was put under $150 bond to appear in the police court.

The Hon. George O. Brastow of Somerville, Mass., president of the Norwich Horse Railroad Co., has been elected to the council of that state.

Forty-six delegates attended the annual encampment of the department of Connecticut, G. A. R., held at the Sedgwick Post yesterday morning. Reports were made and a bountiful collation was provided by the comrades and their ladies of the Sedgwick Post, who were in waiting for them in the halls over the engine of the Wauregan steamer.

Friday, Jan. 23, 1874—The harness theif is again on the war-path. A few nights since a pair of double harnesses were stolen from the stable of Jacob B. Bachelder of Greeneville, and were discovered a day or two later hidden in a culvert on the Norwich and Worcester road, the party finding them tracking the theif by the footprints in the snow. Constable Weller of Taftville arrested a person in that village who tried to sell a pair of double harnesses which he had left in Greeneville as they were too heavy to carry with him. Proof was lacking and the man was released.

The 22nd annual of the Quinnipiac Engine Co. of Fair Haven East, will be celebrated on Feb. 10 at the Quinnipiac House and it is expected that Chief Carrier of Norwich will attend.

Because of feeble health George H. Brewster has retired from the firm of George Gridley and Co., and Charles H. Trafton will take his place in the firm, which will hereafter be known as Gridley and Trafton. Mr. Trafton has had long experience in the business, in the manufactory of J. C. Ripley.

The last school and social given by Prof. J. P. Miller was held last evening. A large number turned out and a good time was enjoyed.

It is understood that all crafts navigating the streets of Norwich in the future will be required to carry fogbells to prevent collision.

Saturday, Jan. 24, 1874—The people of Norwich were grieved yesterday to learn of the death of Parepa Rosa, in London Thursday evening. Parepa was the daughter of Mrs. Seguin a celebrated singer of England. She first came to this country in 1867 and appeared in Norwich on February 2, 1872, where the largest audience ever congregated in Norwich greeted her. She was to return to this country with a large company this coming summer but her death will deprive music lovers of another opportunity to hear her wonderful voice.

A resident of Greeneville, a peaceful citizen when sober, but an exceedingly violent and savage customer when under the influence of liquor was brought before a justice court in this city yesterday on two charges, breach of the peace and drunkeness. It appears that he drank to excess Thursday and met a man with whom he engaged in a pitched battle. Both parties were severely punished when the stranger ran into a nearby house and enraged at this the Greeneville man followed and tried to kick down the door of the house. An elderly woman came to the door and was knocked down, severely kicked and beaten before her husband came to her rescue. He met with the same treatment and neighbors who came in to help were also more or less cut up. The sheriff was called and only after a violent struggle in which he too was badly beaten succeeded in handcuffing the man. In court the prisoner was fined $7 and costs and sentenced to thirty days in jail on the first charge and thirty days more on the second charge.

The ice has almost left the Thames river and the sound boats and other vessels are able to make their scheduled runs.

wish we were among the oranges and flowers of the golden state.

Twice Twenty: The poem you sent in the past week was fine "Be a Man" ought to be posted in every home with large attractive letters. Your puzzling question is too much for me as I never was very good at guessing riddles. Pass it along to a good guesser.

It is nice to see the young writers coming in. Do not stop if you make a little mistake. A young bride who had just begun house keeping telephoned to the grocer for some eggs which were sent to her. She called him up and said they were ducks' eggs. He said he never sells ducks' eggs, why do you think they were not hen's eggs? She replied, "I put them in water and they would float." The mild winter weather is good for the people who depend on the coal man but bad for the ice man and the pneumonia patients.

With all kinds of good wishes to the Corner family.

RURAL DELIVERY

WOULD LIKE MORE ABOUT FLOWERS

Dear Corner Writers: What wonderful weather we are having for January. Today the little birds are singing and chirping outside as I am writing this.

Canterbury Bell: Did you send me the card at New Years marked C. Bell, and is your address R. F. D. 9? I have just forgotten as I failed to note it down.

I also wish to thank Marcella for pretty view she sent me while at Coney Island. Everytime I wrote I meant to thank you. Where are you now?

Theoda: I have to smile when I think of the mixed up mess our messages made but think now the entanglements is all straightened out.

Rural Delivery: Your poetry, The Radio Buy is all right. Send more like that; it will certainly drive away the blues.

I wish to say to "A Flower Lover" I too, would like to see something more about flowers. My silent companions, as I call them look very good this winter. I too, have a large variety of begonias, also two very pebular plants I am unable to name as I fail to see any described in the flower manuals like them. I wish you could see my hoya. It is three years old as yet has never bleasomed but the foliage is wonderful. I think it safe to say there are a thousand or more leaves. It is about 17 inches high and the leaves are dotted with white. I never saw the variety of begonia you spoke of with the green and white mottled leaves. I have two different varieties of the Rex family.

Annette: Was glad to see you have broken your silence after such a long rest. Wish you had been with Mr. Annette the day he was here.

Savilla: Get busy and send me your address as there is something I wish to ask you.

Paula: How did you get home from your last trip? Did you make it in time for supper?

Joan; I wish to thank you for your nice call. Come again. Next time bring J. E. T. with you. You are both many times welcome. I have been wondering how your plants are this winter. A Flower Lover should call at your home if she wishes to see beautiful plants and blooms. Mine are quite full of blossoms, just now, but of course they come and go.

Calla Lily: Hope you do not overwork yourself on Thursdays. I often think of you in your cosy reception room.

CRIMSON RAMBLER

GIVING THANKS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: First of all I want to thank a Social Corner member for the little calendar. Do you want to know what I do with mine? Use it to check the Sisters' birthdays and I wish each one at this roll call of the New Year would remember to write down their dates again.

Viola: Are you the one who sent me a card asking for my address? Whoever did so did not sign any name at all to their card and as I sent several at that time am rather in a quandary as to who makes the request. Yes, my birthday is Sept. 26, but as I am from Massachusetts, I do not think you know my mother. I have an idea this letter is to be a sort of hare, there and yonder as to topic.

We had a glorious time at the meeting of Club No. 3, last week Wednesday. A good social crowd and as usual a bountiful spread.

Have any of you ever tried a drink made of grapenuts for a delicate stomach? My mother used to suffer terribly with gall stones and after an attack was naturally weak all over. She used to mix about a tablespoon of grapenuts with a cup of boiling water. Let it set a while and add cream or milk for a drink till she felt equal to eating again.

Do any of you find it hard to keep mattresses clean and protected with the little tots? I found oil cloth and cheap rubber blankets a nuisance as they crack and peel so while the heavy rubber seems very heating so I use newspapers and find them very satisfactory and cheap. It doesn't take but a few minutes to baste a few together and they can be renewed each day if necessary.

As you go on each day and now and then have a cause to say, thank you; does it ever occur to you to whom the thanks is really due? When I went to high school I had several miles to walk and one day as I was walking along an old fellow—a religious fanatic he was called—drove up beside me and asked if I wanted to ride. I was a little afraid of him for he was "queer," wore the same clothes the year round—old rags—an old straw hat on which was painted a Bible reference and carried a sheet of tin about a yard square nailed to a stick on which was painted in white paint, the tin, not the stick, Bible references and quotations. I got in and rode for I did not really dare do otherwise. No word was spoken by either of us till we got to the station and then I said, Thank you, Mr. Kingdon." Short and to the point came the answer, "Don't thank me, thank the Lord" What a bit to ponder on. How little we realize that it is where thanks are due not only for the little blessings that just seem to fall our way but for the thought in others that prompts them to do us a little kindness. For the thought we have ourselves to do a kindness to others After we do something we find pleasing to someone else do we ever give thanks for having that thought sent to us? It was quite a few years ago that this incident happened. The man has long since passed on. No doubt his odd ways and garb are forgotten by many but his reply that day I feel sure will never be forgotten by me. For me that is where I send a bit of thanks for my calendar from a Social Corner member, for I know that these little calendars go to homes where they are greatly cherished.

DON'T WORRY. (Sept. 26.)

HELPING A HOUSEKEEPER'S MIND

Dear Social Corner: Was glad to get a letter from Peterkins and to know she is getting along so nicely. The corn bread was delicious. I don't wonder you're improving eating such nourishing food.

Hillside: Your birthday has come and gone and no signs of it in the paper.

The new Social Corner sister member has certainly got the best of me. I have always had good neighbors so can't tell who you are by that.

Betty Brown: Remember what I told you when I wanted you to write a Corner, that some time you would write yourself.

Rhody Louise: I think your letter was fine, also. When you wrote that the sisters could see you were thinking of them I am sure that is what all could do.

Sister Louise: I hear you are in Chattanooga Tenn. I haven't heard from you for quite a while.

Sister Hattie: Was glad to hear from you.

Warren, Sonny Boy, wonder I haven't thought of writing to you in the paper before. I know your dad gets the paper every week. Am glad you have a bicycle. Even if you are in Chicago, you can be careful when you are riding and not be as careless as your dad was. He rode in the gutter and got thrown off and was brought home unconscious.

Helps for a housekeeper's mind are as important as help for the hands. Therefore I have written three things which makes my housework more agreeable. In my work I use some of the Bulletin's cooking recipes, its household helps, its style suggestions and its advertisements but how many of us get the mental help we should from the articles printed on its pages.

For instance that bit of philosophy which is printed weekly at the top of the Social Corner page, if pinned to our calendars where we should read many times before the next week comes round, would help us through many a hard day. Often it seems as if the editor wrote it especially for us.

Then in the editorial section there is many a worthy example. Those great words of those famous men if pinned where our eyes could see them thrill us with their strength and beauty even while our hands are busy. This job done mechanically would not be distasteful if we would occupy our minds with courageous words, forgetting the pleasanter things we'd rather be doing, which only make us sorry for ourselves.

The daily papers should be clipped out and clipped into our workbasket to be enjoyed when we are darning stockings. When our mind would be blank, or filled with care and troubles.

KITTY LOU

COOKIES, CREAM PUFFS AND MULLEIN TEA

Dear Social Corner Sisters: As I am all by myself I will write a few lines for our Corner page. I get many papers on Saturday, but always look at the Corner page first. I always enjoy reading all the nice letters about home life and travelling as its teaches one about places which we never saw, and we might never hear of them if some good sister didn't write us about them. Am sending my recipe for molasses cookies which Camp Lafayette asked for. I have named them

Ever Best Cookies: Into a large granite pan put one cup of dark molasses, one cup of sugar, 3-4 cup of butter or lard or half of each, 1-2 teaspoon of salt. Now put it on the stove and let it cook until all the sugar has melted. Then remove from the stove and let it cool. Then add 1 cup of strong coffee, hot if you have it, with one level teaspoon of cooking soda. Now beat one fresh egg and add to the molasses also one teaspoon of ginger, one of allspice, one of cinnamon one of nutmeg; and a tablespoon of baking powder to your flour. Use enough flour to make a dough you can handle without being sticky. I always try a few to see if I have flour enough. The oven must be hot for the cookies must bake quick. Hope some one will try these and report about them.

I believe one sister said she never had any luck with cream puffs. I make them and they are fine. I will tell you what I do. I add 1-2 teaspoon of baking powder to my flour and when they are made, ready for the oven, I let them stand one hour before I put them in. I always have a good hot oven and increase the heat for about 15 minutes and then I let my fire go a little slower. The puffs come out nice and dry and never fall flat. Try them and see if I am not right.

Connecticut Sue: I make my Mullen tea like this. I gather mine but if I can't get any I buy it at the drug store. Get two one ounce packages and I wash it for it is dusty. I put the two packages to two quarts of water and boil it down to one quart, strain it and add one pound of sugar, juice of a lemon, and cook it down again to 1-2 same as before. You can tell by putting some in a glass. If it is reduced down enough it will be like thick syrup. If you like you can use rock candy in place of sugar. It will make a richer syrup. Drink it now and then 4 or 5 times a day. It is harmless and acts as a tonic. Will close my letter with best wishes to editor and all the sisters.

COVERING UP UNSIGHTLY STAINS.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Very glad to see the Corner page filled as full there wasn't the least space left for an adv.

Some of us know how unsightly creosote stains are on chimneys or walls.

As my way of doing has proved very satisfactory, I will pass it on for for the benefit of others. After using considerable green wood last winter, my kitchen chimney was a sight.

When the time came to clean my kitchen I took the old oilcloth from my kitchen table and cut it to fit the places that were stained as I was going to paper my kitchen I had the paste ready. I was careful to brush the paste well in the corners, applied the oilcloth, oiled side next to wall and left it to thoroughly dry. It was then ready to paper. I have watched for the old eyesore to appear but it has not.

Amy is in the hospital for treatment. Instead of going to church on Sunday morning I spent the hour with her. I know how much a call or card from friends means to one who is sick and away from home.

Nema: I was sorry not to have received the invitation in time to see you.

I wonder if Calla Lily has ever tried a cloth moistened with alcohol to take white spots from furniture.

We've had a delightful winter, but this morning it was 4 above zero with a sharp wind blowing.

With best wishes for a happy and prosperous year to the editor and all friends of the Corner.

WILTWYCK.

JOINED CORNER TWELVE YEARS AGO

Social Corner Friends: First I want to thank the member for the pretty little calendar which I received. It was a surprise as it is the first one I ever had from the Corner. Shall prize it very much. What a lovely month we have had so far, but am some afraid we will see some winter weather later. I did want to go to the meeting of Jan. 9th but circumstances did not permit. I enjoy reading the Corner page. Was glad to see a line from Cricket. I too used to like to watch an aunt spin. It doesn't seem as if I ever could learn it. I had to knit so many rounds each day while baby was sleeping in the cradle and I sitting by to jog the cradle if necessary. I learned to sew the same way but it is nearly 13 years since I wrote my first letter to the Corner. I don't see very many of those names that wrote at that time. The first time I went to one of the meetings was at Married and Happy's on the Camp grounds but not the first one she had.

L. H. K.: Glad to see your letter and Spry Bird's also.

Dew Drop: What has become of you? It has been a long time since you appeared.

Selinda: Hope your burned hand is much better now and all the sick ones are gaining. This is not a very interesting letter but will try to do better in the future. With thanks again for my calendar and with best wishes to all from

AUNT JERUSHA

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Dear Editor of the Social Corner: I am a subscriber of your paper and have been thinking for some time of joining your Social Corner.

Dew Kist: How are you and wouldn't you be surprised to see me walk in with Midget?

Double Fuchsia: You too will get a good surprise. Guess who I am. May be I will call with Midget.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Locating the Flower of Youth.

When Little Jack Rabbit saw the high stone wall in front of him, as I mentioned in the last story, he said with a sigh:

"Look for the little door," answered Dapple Gray. "Have you forgotten the key which you found in the hollow dead tree?"

Of course, the little bunny hadn't lost it, and, jumping to the ground, he hopped up close to the stone wall. But, Oh dear me! After carefully looking it over, he could find no door and was about to give up sessobin when he spied a tiny key-hole. Quickly slipping in the key, a door opened as if by magic, disclosing a tiny fairy. Right there on a shelf stood a beautiful crystal vase, and underneath, in gold letters:

"I am the vase for the Flower of Youth.

Fill me with water as pure as Truth."

Carefully taking it down, he hopped out, and the little door closed, the gold key instantly turning in the lock with a click. But when he tried to take out the little key, it stuck fast. "Take the vase and leave the key. Get on your horse and follow me." But fill the vase with water first. So the Flower of Youth may feel no thirst."

Sang a sweet voice as the morning sun rose over the mountains.

Dipping the crystal vase in the little brook, the bunny boy mounted Dapple Gray and followed a pretty blue bird who led him into a beautiful forest where the sun twinkled through the tree tops and the birds sang from the branches. By and by, after a while, they came to a little hut. By the door sat an old, old man on a wooden bench, smoking a pipe.

"Twitter, twitter, old man gray, How grows the Flower of Youth today?"

The old man looked up at little Jack Rabbit on Dapple Gray and taking his pipe from his mouth, bowed very low. Then he ran his thin white hands through his long, white hair.

"Lead us to the Flower of Youth," said the Bluebird.

At once the old man arose and walked slowly around to the rear of his humble cottage, where, in a well kept bed, grew the most beautiful flower the little bunny had ever seen. It was pure white with crimson leaves.

"For every blossom I pluck another grows in its place," said the old man. "But he to whom I give it must first promise to give the flower to a loved one."

"I promise," answered the bunny boy. "It is for dear Uncle Lucky. I would have him live always that little children may never forget him. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Don't Fuss With Mustard Plasters!

Musterole Works Without the Blister—Easier, Quicker

There's no sense in mixing a mess of mustard, flour and water when you can easily relieve pain, soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole.

Musterole is made of pure oil of mustard and other helpful ingredients, combined in the form of the present white ointment. It takes the place of mustard plasters, and will not blister.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

POETRY

The Tide Rises and the Tide Falls

The tide rises, the tide falls,
The twilight darkens, the curlew calls;
Along the sea-sands damp and brown
The traveler hastens toward the town,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.

Darkness settles on roofs and walls,
But the sea, the sea in the darkness calls;
The little waves, with their soft, white hands,
Efface the footprints in the sands,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.

The morning breaks the steeds in their stalls
Stamp and neigh, as the hostler calls;
The day returns, but nevermore
Returns the traveler to the shore,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.
—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

Great Nature Is An Army Gay

Great nature is an army gay,
Resistless marching on its way;
I hear the bugles clear and sweet,
I hear the tread of million feet.
Across the plains I see it pour;
It tramples down the waving grass;
Within the echoing mountain pass
I hear a thousand cannon roar.
It swarms within my garden gate;
My deepest well it drinketh dry;
It doth not rest; it doth not wait;
By night and day it sweepeth by;
Ceaseless it marcheth by my door;
It heeds me not, though I implore.
I know not whence it comes, nor where
It goes. For me it doth not care—
Whether I starve, or eat or sleep,
Or live, or die, or sing or weep.
And now the banner all are bright,
Now torn and blackened by the fight;
Sometimes its laughter shakes the sky,
Sometimes the groans of those who die,
Still through the night and through the live-long day
The infinite army marches on its remorseless way.
—Richard Watson Gilder.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Comedian—Look 'ere! I objects to going on just after the monkey act.

Manager—Well, perhaps you're right. They might think you were an encore—London Weekly Telegraph.

Miss Antique—You ought to get married, Mr. Oldchapp.

Mr. Oldchapp (earnestly)—I have wished many times lately that I had a wife.

"Have you really."

"Yes. If I had a wife, she'd probably have a sewing machine and the sewing machine would have an oil can, and I could take it and oil my office door. It squeaks horribly."—Tit-Bits.

Crawford—Gayboy's wife used to make him walk a chalk line when he came home late to see if he had been drinking.

Crabshaw—Now, she takes him into the subway and has him try to follow the green line.—New York Sun.

"I dare you to come back," cried the wrathy pedestrian who'd just had a close shave.

"Can't do it now," flung back the motorist. "Got an important engagement. But be around here this time tomorrow and I'll have another try at you just to show I'm a good sport. So long."—Boston Transcript.

"You are keeping your cook a long time."

"Yes, that is because she hates me so."

"Because she hates you so? I don't understand."

"Yes. She is waiting to quit until I have a houseful of guests, and I have given up having guests, just to fool her."—Houston Post.

Rastus Jackson, a thoroughly married darky, was one day approached by a life insurance agent.

"Better let me write you a policy, Rastus," suggested the agent.

"No, sah," declared Rastus emphatically. "Ah ain't any to safe at home as it is!"

"I suppose if you go to the legislature you'll emphasize the fact that you are one of the plain people."

"I dunno," answerd Farmer Cornossel, "as I feel so plain. The way politicians are makin' up to us entitles an agriculturist at present to feel like a pretty fancy article."—Washington Evening Star.

A little Boston boy was told on one occasion by his teacher that he was to stay after school for a period of one hour and study his lessons. Paul looked at her with a grin and asked, "Are you going to stay with me?"

"Of course."

"If you don't mind telling me," continued Paul, "are you punishing me or am I punishing you?"—Kansas City Star.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Carfare is not needed by school children in Victoria, Australia. They are carried in street cars to and from school free of charge.

A yellow potato and new varities of pineapple were brought from Central Peru recently by a botanist for the Field Museum of Natural History at Chicago.

The female roles in Turkish theatres are nearly always played by Armenian actresses, as Turkish women are forbidden any part in the theatrical performances.

A silver nugget weighing 3,200 pounds and assaying 75 per cent. pure ore, was found by a cobalt miner while doing assessment work on his claim on the Montreal river. The nugget is worth about $20,000

Angelo Raggini, a clerk in the office of Mayor Hylan, of New York was ambitious to become an opera star. He was supporting a mother and ten younger brothers and sisters out of his salary. His friends have taken stock in his future to the extent of $10,000 through the sale of 400 certificates, at $25 each. Trustees of the fund will forward to his school in Italy the necessary allotments of money as they are required.

Loss of the expensive helium gas, which is used in the inflation of the navy dirigible Shenandoah, and for similar purposes, has been caused not only by its leakage out, but by the leakage of air in. This makes the gas heavier and less buoyant. A remedy has been found by the United States bureau of mines, which is now constructing a repurification laboratory at Lakehurst, N. J., the Shenandoah's home port.

ENJOYED A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP

"I wish to say that FOLEY PILLS worked O. K. on me in a couple of hours and the pains left me at once. I took a couple of them in the afternoon and went to bed and had a good night's sleep and have slept good ever since," writes Con Thiel, 118 E. Columbia St., Fort Wayne, Indiana. FOLEY PILLS are a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys and will increase their activity. Refuse substitutes. Lee & Osgood Co.

WESTERLY

Friday mornings' session of the Third district court lasted until nearly 1 o'clock, in the Third district court rooms on Union street. Clerk M. Walter Byrne presided, the following docket:

New Writs—The Hotel Shops Co. vs. Louis Alberti; Colonial Bros. Co. vs. Louis Alberti; William H. Quinn Co. vs. Louis Alberti; continued two weeks.

Civil Docket—Anna M. Ledestri et al vs. Della Richards; ready.

Antonio Pancieri vs. William E. Lockett; continued two weeks.

C. H. Conway vs. Thomas Buell, continued one week.

Superior Arc Light Co. vs. Louis Deutsch, continued one week.

Margaret Sundisk vs. Alexandis Varian, ready.

George W. Woodward vs. Harriet M. Green, ready.

Angelo Parrone vs. Louis Marchese, ready.

Louis Marchese vs. Angelo Parrone, ready.

The case vs. Richards was called by Judge Michael J. Tumo, announced as ready and passed for a short time.

William H. Babcock was presented on complaint of Thomas E. Brown, chief of police, that defendant, Jan. 2, 1924, operated a motor vehicle on Broad street without a driver's license. A plea of guilty was entered. On driving the motor vehicle across the Pawcatuck river bridge, defendant operated his father's machine, which collided with another, although no great damage resulted. The defendant said that he had a license in 1920 and that he was a resident of Connecticut, the car only having been in use for two weeks he expected to meet a man with a license and not having done so swung down Main street when he received a court summons from Patrolman Curtin. Judge Turano fined Babcock $10 and costs.

In the case of the State, Thomas E. Brown, Chief of Police, complainant, vs. Edwin Shaw, Town Solicitor Ferguson stated that it was impossible to have the state's case ready and the case, alleged possession of intoxicating liquors, was continued two weeks.

Marchese et al. Pettone trial continued until the arrival of an interpreter. George W. Woodward vs. Harriet M. Greene and Margaret Burdick vs. Miamedis Varian, reported an elderly lady prevented from attending by weather conditions, were passed, and at the end of court session the former case was continued one week. The latter case Judge Turano intimated Attorney Dunn would be called next week and defaulted if he was not ready at that time. Judge Turano said that he did not like the idea of clearing cases piecemeal.

In the case of Ledestri vs. Richards, one of treasure and excitement, Attorney Roche for the plaintiff stated Natale Ledestri was with his wife and sister were owners of the tenement at 121 Canal street, having bought it from Della Richards, widow of Charles P. Eccleston. Witness said that Mrs. Richards, who occupied the house, was five weeks in arrears for rent, which was to be paid at the rate of $5 a week. When Constable Burge served Mrs. Richards with a notice to vacate on November, 1923. A receipt for the dollars was presented as evidence.

Mrs. Della Richards and what she lived at the Canal street house and when a notice to vacate was given her she sent for her daughter, Clara Palazzo, who visited the store of the plaintiff and not only paid him $10 what was had given her but the daughter Clara also paid $40 for 20 weeks' rent in advance.

Mrs. Clara Palazzo, residing at 25 Stillman avenue testified that she made the payment for which she received two receipts, and they were produced as evidence. Mrs. Richards' daughter, Aldea, testified that she saw her sister pay the money. Eva Richards also saw the money taken from the drawer in the sideboard. Both Attorney Dunn and Judge Turano asked that the plaintiff make a copy in court of the receipts given. Judge Turano said that apparently a material change had been made in the receipt and the testimony was not convincing, it being apparent that somebody was trying to put something over on the plaintiff. He ordered decision for the plaintiff, if the appeal from the decision a bond of $100 was required.

The case of Perrone vs. Marchese and Marchese vs Parrone it was apparent that a family squabble entered into the case. Marchese presented a bill for $162 rent while in the counter claim Parrone countercharged $162 for cleaning casepook, $120 two months board bill and $20 for clean the mattress. After hearing many of the witnesses through interpreter George P. Tuscano, Judge Turano rendered his decision, in the first case for the defendant and in the second he gave judgment for the plaintiff to recover the sum of $187.

When this extension is completed, entrance may be made to the hospital grounds either from Beach street or East avenue. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS SPECULATIVE

New York, Jan. 25.—Speculators for the advance maintained control of today's stock market despite the attempt of bear operators to unsettle the list by heavy offerings of a number of the Motor and Chemical shares and such specialties as Famous Players and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe. Prices were churned about considerably in the early dealings but a broad forward movement set in towards the close under the leadership of U. S. Steel common which touched 104 1-8, the highest price since last spring, and nearly 3 points above yesterday's close.

High priced specialties again developed marked buoyancy. General Electric touched 221 7-8, the highest price in more than 20 years, slightly below that figure for a net gain of 2 points. Corn Products established a record high for all time at 183, up 4 1-4, as against this year's low of 152 3-8. American Car & Foundry advanced almost 3 points to 174 7-8. United Fruit jumped more than 6 common which touched 104 1-4. The pointa to 195. American Can established a record high at 111 3-4, closing at a net gain of nearly 2 points.

Operators on the long side of the market found little difficulty in obtaining funds to finance their operations. Call money again ruled at 4 per cent, but "outside" loans were reported to have been made as low as 3 1-2. Commission houses reported an increase in public participation, but thus far the buying from this source has been of a rather cautious character.

Buying of the steel shares was influenced by reports of increased operations of the principal companies and the favorable interpretation made by market observers of the preliminary annual report of the Bethlehem Steel corporation. Bethlehem, Crucible and Gulf States each closed about 1 1-4 points higher. Oils were helped by the announcement of a further increase in Pennsylvania crude prices. The Pan-American issues, which have been under considerable pressure lately as a result of the Mexican revolution and the disclosures before the senate committee investigating naval oil reserve leases, snapped back about 2 points each, while Sinclair moved up nearly a point.

Strength of the sugar shares was based on the improved trade outlook. Cuba Cane preferred developing considerable activity on the belief that early action will be taken to wipe out part of the 19 per cent accumulation of back dividends.

Railroad shares lagged behind the general list until just before the close when heavy buying set in for a scattered assortment of issues. Southern Railway climbed more than 2 points to 44, a record high. Delaware & Hudson, International & Great Northern and Canadian Pacific moved up about 2 points each and "Big Four" advanced 4 on a small turnover.

Call money held steady at 4 per cent. Brokers continued to bid 4 1-2 per cent for all maturities in the time money market with some 30 to 90-day loans made at that figure. Bankers are asking 4 3-4 for the longer dates. The commercial paper market was quiet with rates unchanged.

Foreign exchange rates held steady in quiet trading. Demand sterling was again quoted around $4.22 and French francs moved around 4.48 cents. Japanese yen dropped about 15 points to 44.75 cents but other currencies showed only nominal changes.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 25.—Continued easy rates for money, diverting investment funds into the bond market, today sent prices of a number of convertible and short term railroad, public utility and industrial issues into new high ground. Buying was well distributed but after the early dealings was not particularly brisk. Prices in general, however, continued to point definitely upward.

Low-priced short term railroad bonds attracted interest. International & Great Northern adjustment 6s experiencing a sharp rally on speculation as to the next interest payment. Other speculative issues, such as Iron Mountain refunding 4s and Rock Island refunding 4s, also were in demand, and renewed buying sent all the St. Paul issues higher.

Cerro De Pasco 1's, Punta Alegre Sugar 7s and Eastern Cuba Sugar 7 1-2s, attractive because of their convertible features in connection with improved trade conditions, advanced to new high levels. Traders reported an excellent demand for public utility liens, with a heavy turnover in outside trading. Weakness persisted in the Pan-American Petroleum issue, due to fears that the company's naval reserve leases would be cancelled.

J. P. Morgan & Company announced that public offering would be made through a nation-wide banking syndicate next Monday of $50,000,000 Southwestern Bell Telephone 30-year 5 per cent bonds at 93 1-2 to yield about 5.40 per cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Heavy profit-taking sales on future delivery contracts here and reports of increased rural offerings in various sections of the country gave the corn market today something of a setback. The result was that corn, wheat and oats all closed unsettled, corn 2-3 to 3-4@7-8c net lower, May 80 to 80 1-8, with wheat 1-4 to 1-2c down, May 1.09 and July 1.07 3-8, and oats varying from 5-8c decline to 3-8c advance. Provisions finished unchanged to 17c down.

The stubbornness with which the corn market absorbed profit-taking sales led to a conclusion in some quarters that a broader buying demand was apparent than had been generally supposed. On the other hand, for the first time in quite a while the primary receipts of corn were larger than was the case a year ago, and there was much interest shown in the fact that a leading trader here who has been taking bullish for weeks went over today to the bear side. He predicted more than a temporary recession of values. Other authorities, however, expressed the opinion that the reaction was transient, and was to have been expected in view of numerous upturns of late.

Bulls in the corn market pointed out that although there had been some increase of country offerings and of consignment notices the grain was largely going to southwestern markets which were outbidding Chicago. It was contended also that from present prospects the winter accumulation of corn at Chicago and at other visible supply centers would be the smallest in years.

Wheat was weakened by reports that France had cancelled some small purchases. Seaboard clearances, though, were large—more than 1,000,000 bushels, chiefly Canadian grown.

Selling by packers and commission houses eased provisions.

CURB MARKET

New York, Jan. 25.—Stock prices developed impressive strength in today's active curb market with oils again receiving the bulk of speculative interest. Chesebrough, one of the so-called Standard Oil subsidiaries, jumped 70 points on a small turnover while Solar Refining and Standard Oil of Ohio closed 12 and 10 points, respectively, above yesterday's final prices.

Vacuum Oil moved up nearly 3 points and Continental Imperial of Canada, Prairie Oil and Gas and Prairie Pipe about 1 1-2 each while the other active issues improved fractionally. Buying of the oils was based on a further increase in Pennsylvania crude prices, which was said to foreshadow upward revision in other fields.

Lehigh Valley certificates and "rights" were again active, closing about 1 1-2 points higher. Ford Motors of Canada advanced 2 1-2 points on a small turn-over. Bridgeport Machinery touched a new high at 12 -14. Announcement of the proposed 33 1-3 per cent stoc kdividend in Brooklyn City Railroad apparently had been discounted as the stock was in supply and fell below 13. Dubilier Radio advanced 1 point to 16, a new high record.

WE ADVISED

10 stocks to buy and sell and they gave 35-55 and 56 points.

Fertilizer Bulletin

Nearly fifty years ago the Connecticut agricultural Experiment station issued its first Bulletin. This document disclosed a fraud which was being perpetrated upon the farmers of the State in the form of a "fertilizer" which contained about the same amount of plant food as the mud of New Haven harbor and which was sold for $32.00 per ton. The fertilizer industry as a whole today rightly enjoys a large and increasing measure of confidence; but occasional irresponsible exploitations of so-called plant foods or fertilizers which presume as much upon the needs of farm crops as did that original fertilizer fraud, are not entirely matters of history. Watchfulness is still necessary and this is a part of the station's business.

The station has just issued Bulletin 350 which summarizes its work upon fertilizer control during the past year. This document is free to citizens of the state and to other applicants so far as the limited edition permits.

RENDERS JUDGMENT FOR BOISSON TO RECOVER $700 IN DAMAGES

Judge Allyn L. Brown, before whom the case was tried here in the superior court on Thursday, handed down a decision Friday for Robert Boisson of this city to recover $700 damages from Santo Sammataro of New London, because of an automobile accident in New London on June 4, 1923, when a car driven by Sammataro ran into the Boisson automobile at the corner of Ocean avenue and Willetts avenue. The Boisson claim as made out by his attorney, Hibbard R. Norman, who tried the case in court was for $538.82 repair bill on the automobile and $200 depreciation because of the damage it sustained.

Motion List Session

Judge Brown presided at a motion list session of court Friday morning at which the following matters were disposed of:

Modification of judgment was granted in New London City National bank vs Frederick O. Bent, et al and John J. Burns was appointed receiver of rents under a bond of $500.

In Merchants National bank vs Mary G. and Arthur E. Andrews of this city foreclosure by stipulation in the sum of $6,447.56 was granted in property on Summit street and the limitation of time was set at the fourth Tuesday in March.

After hearing the arguments on a motion to expunge in Charles Stuart et al, Trustees vs The American Agricultural Chemical Co., the judge took the papers.

An impressive funeral service for a former pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church of this city, Rev. Matthias Sailor Kaufman, D. D., Ph. Newspaper reports stated that it was the largest funeral in the history of the Pacific branch. The distance to the cemetery is long but besides the automobiles, hundreds of people on foot fell in with the procession which was headed by the band and the firing squad.

Dr. Kaufman had a pastorate of six years, 1905 to 1911, at Trinity church in this city. He joined the New England Southern conference in 1885 and for 18 years had served the most important churches in the conference among them being the Mathewson street church, Providence, and the Central church, Brockton. He had the charming faculty of making many friends and holding them.

Mrs. Kaufman is to remain in California during the cold weather and then intends to return east.

RED DANGER SIGNALS FOR CURVES IN ROADS

In the effort to reduce the possibility of automobile accidents at dangerous curves on roads in Connecticut, the state highway department, after satisfactory experiments, has installed a number of new type danger signals. The device consists of a heavy red glass reflector erected on a pole at the approach of a curve in such a way as to cause a brilliant glare to meet the vision of a driver at night time and warn him of danger ahead. These signals have been installed with excellent results at particularly bad curves and the highway department feels that they have had a direct bearing on decreasing the number of accidents at these points.

Approximately seventy signals have already been installed. The device is erected on a concrete base and steel post just off the shoulder of the highway and in a direct line with the head lights of an approaching automobile. The signal contains no lights or mechanism, yet when approach by an automobile with lights either dim or full burning takes the appearance of a huge, brilliant red lights or ball of fire. Above the red danger signal is the daylight signal consisting of the word "danger" in good-sized letters.

The signals are so arranged that approaching lights will cause them to be seen at a distance of 1,000 feet or more through fog, dust or rain.

NORWICH WILL HEAR MOST PROMINENT ORGANIST

When Samual A. Baldwin of New York comes here to give an organ recital on February 4 at the Central Baptist church under the auspices of the Norwich Music association, those who attend will hear one of the most prominent organists ever heard in Norwich. The music association is offering the recital absolutely free with no admission fee and no collection, which will be a rare opportunity to hear the new Charles W. Gale Memorial organ at the church played by a master hand.

Mr. Baldwin is municipal organist and professor of music in New York and has played for 17 years in the great hall of the College of the City of New York. He has given over 900 recitals and has over 1,300 compositions to his credit. He is an exponent of the organ as a musical instrument instead of a religious instrument only.

INFANT MORTALITY RATE SHOWS SOME INCREASE

The American Child Health association, of which Herbert Hoover is president, calls attention to the fact that while the census bureau's investigation places the infant mortality in Connecticut at seventy-seven deaths for each thousand births during 1922, which is low in comparison to some other states, it does not advance Connecticut's standing in this matter, the reason being that it is four points higher than the rate for 1921, which was seventy-three deaths for each thousand births.

The statistics also prove the inaccuracy of one other long existing theory—that children in the rural sections have a better prospect of life than those in cities. The Connecticut record shows the contrary to be the truth. The infant death rate in 1922 for cities in this state was seventy-seven, while for the rural districts it was seventy-eight. One reason for the lower rate in cities, association officials believe, may be that municipal health authorities are coming to realize the value of coordination of agencies devoted to child health activities and the result has been that city mothers are rapidly being educated in modern health methods and sanitation.

Connecticut ranks twelfth among the states, with Oregon and Minnesota leading with a rate of only fifty-eight.

BRANDEGEE EXPECTS HE WILL VOTE FOR BONUS

That two-thirds of the members of both houses of congress and both political parties favor the bonus is the opinion expressed by United States Senator Frank B. Brandegee in a letter to the Hartford Chamber of Commerce written in reply to a letter giving the chamber's views on the Mellon tax reduction plan and the bonus. The senator says that if a suitable bonus bill is presented at this session he will vote for it. His letter follows:

"In reply to your letter I would state that it is not possible to forecast in what condition the bills concerning the reduction of taxes and the soldiers' bonus will come to the senate from the house. When they get to the senate they will be referred to the committee on finance, and only after that committee reports shall we know the terms of either of these bills, which will then be before the senate for action.

"I voted for the bonus bill at the last session of congress, and if a suitable bill is reported by the finance committee, expect to do so again at this session.

"I think that two-thirds of the members of both houses of congress and both political parties favor the bonus. I favor and shall vote for as much tax reduction as possible under the circumstances."

SISTER MARY IRENE WAS A FORMER NORWICH TEACHER

Her former pupils in Norwich have learned with sorrow of the death of St. Mary's Home, West Hartford, of Sister M. Irene, who during her nearly half a century of membership in the Sisters of Mercy of this diocese was for a time a teacher at St. Patrick's school, Norwich. A native of New York city after her parents had moved to New Haven, Miss Mary J. Kerrigan, as she was known in the world, was among the first group of young ladies to attend Mt. St. Joseph's Seminary, Hartford. She was professed a nun Sept. 24, 1879 and taught in the convent schools in Hartford, Norwich and Bridgeport. At her funeral the 19th, the officers of the mass were her former pupils and her casket was carried to the grave by men who had received a portion of their education from this devoted teacher. The late John Kerrigan, one of the group of men who were with Father McGivney when the order of the Knights of Columbus was founded was her brother.

FINED ON TWO COUNTS FOR BREAKING MOTOR LAW

Because of an automobile collision at the corner of Central avenue and Tenth street Thursday night between the machines of Charles Mueller of Taftville and Charles O. Miner of Preston, in which Mueller complained that the Preston man's machine ran into his, Miner was before the city court Friday morning and was fined $100 each on two counts. He was charged with reckless driving, and evading responsibility. He paid the fines and costs which amounted to $212.74.

The officers who arrested him testified that after the collision he drove into an alleyway off a side street and got out of his machine to hide in a shed.

REV. ALFRED DRISCOLL GOES TO GREENWICH

Rev. Alfred Driscoll, a native of Norwich has been transferred to St. Mary's parish, Greenwich, as assistant to Rev. F. J. Murphy, while the regular curate, Rev. Phiny Cooney, once stationed at Baltic, is on a trip around the world to recover from a serious illness, with pneumonia. Father Driscoll has been curate at St. Mary's, Bethel and St. Patrick's, Redding Ridge. When his transfer was announced, the people in these two parishes gave him a farewell reception at K. of C. Home, Bethel. In behalf of the assembled parishioners, Rev. John J. Kennedy, the pastor, presented Father Driscoll a purse of $300.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich Grange, No. 172, held its fortnightly meeting, Wednesday evening in Grange hall, with an attendance of about 125, including guests from several out of town granges.

At 6.30 a delicious supper was served by the grange under an efficient committee, Mrs. Bessie Murray, chairman; Mrs. Myra Waters, Mrs. Cora Geib and Mrs. Eva Higgins. The menu consisted of chicken pie, with cranberry sauce, French peas in cases, mashed potato, celery, pickles, Parker House rolls, apple pie, cheese, tea and coffee. The tables were attractively arrangd in the shape of the letter H, the color scheme being pink and green. Baskets of choice flowers loaned by a local florist were on the tables and at each plate were dainty favors of pink and green baskets, filled with salted peanuts.

Preceding the supper, pronounced one of the finest ever given by the grange, the retiring chaplain, John O. Peckham said grace. During the supper hour and for a short period before and after, an excellent programme of music was given by Ladd's Serenaders. After a short business meeting when the retiring worthy master, Mrs. Ivy Peckham presided, the following officers were installed by Worthy Assistant Steward, Charles M. Adams, assisted by Sister Lucie Adams, Sister Lenny Whitham, and Sister Laura Perkins, all of Groton Grange; Worthy Master, Arthur W. Avery; overseer, Leonard W. Staubly, Sr.; lecturer (re-elected), Mrs. Ida L. Richardson; steward, (re-elected) John F. Rogers; assistant steward, Lewis Aldrich; chaplain, Mrs. Mary Brown; secretary, (reelected) Mrs. Ora C. Spencer; treasurer, (reelected) Edward Cook; gate keeper, Mrs. Emma Beaver; Ceres, Mrs. Althea Brown; Flora, Mrs. Caroline Hastedt; Pomona, Mrs. Nettie Fanning; lady assistants steward, Mrs. Adelle Spaulding.

Following the installation the retiring worthy master, Mrs. Peckham, presented a bouquet of pink rose buds to Mrs. Adams, and to Mr. Adams a token in manifestation of the appreciation of Norwich grange for the work of the evening.

During the meeting it was voted to send a large bouquet of carnations with birthday card attached, to Sabura S. Stocking, who Thursday observed his 94th birthday. Mr. Stocking is the oldest living member of Norwich grange.

In behalf of Norwich grange, Rev. Edward P. Ayers, presented the retiring worthy master, Mrs. Ivy Peckham, a past master's jewel, with expressions of love, appreciation and best wishes. Mrs. Peckham acknowledged the gift with thanks. The meeting was then turned over to the new worthy master, Arthur W. Avery, who addressed the grange as follows:

Worthy Patrons of Norwich Grange, Brothers and sisters: Tonight, as we are beginning a new year of grange work, with new officers and committees, I trust this will be a most successful year. I should like at this time to thank the retiring officers for their notable efforts during the past year, in all that has been accomplished in building up the grange to its present standard. I also wish to thank the new officers for 1924 for the fine spirit of cooperation shown me in the past two months. Nearly a month ago, about half of the officers met at the home of our worthy lecturer, when many helpful suggestions were made and plans were formulated for the new year.

It would give me great pleasure to have many new members initiated into our order this year. To do this, each one of us must do our part. The officers are offering a prize of one year's dues to the person securing the largest number of new members during the next two months. Let us all bear this in mind and aim to do what we can to increase the membership. Having been successful in so doing, after the new members have been initiated, we must then do all that we can to keep them interested. It would also be gratifying to have a large attendance of old as well as new members at each meeting. An interesting programme has been arranged by our worthy lecturer, which includes music, discussion, playlets, etc.

It is my desire to start meetings this year promptly at 8 o'clock, and go through the business in good form and as speedily as possible, so that the programme of the evening may be started not later than 9 o'clock. In closing, I wish to say that at all times I shall keep the interests of the grange in mind and shall endeavor to have them protected in every way.

At the conclusion of his address, Worthy Master Avery appointed the following committee for 1924: Finance, Charles E. Ellis, William Bode, Mrs. Eva Higgins; home economics, Mrs. Jacob Gallup, Mrs. James B. Palmer, Jr., Mrs. Walter Brinkman; relief, Mrs. Carl W. Brown, Miss Helen B. Moore, William H. Rush; ways and means, Mrs. Bessie Murray, Mrs. Cora Geib, Mrs. Myra Waters; feast committee, first quarter, Herbert L. Richardson, Carl W. Brown and Fred Leffingwell; second quarter, Mrs. Rose Carter, Mrs. Retkowske, Mrs. William Rush; third quarter, Mrs. Louise Crow, Mrs. Irene Burns and Mrs. Sterry; fourth quarter, Mrs. Ivy Peckham, Mrs. Carl W. Brown, Mrs. Pearl Perkins; music, John M. Swahn, Miss Nellie Howie and Mrs. Alida Bowens.

JUNIOR O. U. A. M.

The regular meeting of Buckingham Council, No. 44, was held Wednesday night at Buckingham Memorial with Chancellor F. B. Shippee in the chair. Considerable routine business was transacted and several of the brothers presented applications for membership.

After the meeting a smoker was enjoyed and a social time followed until a late hour. Adjournment was until Wednesday night, Jan. 30th.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

Accompanied by Congressman Bland of Virginia, E. C. Little, representative from Kansas, appeared before the ways and means committee in Congress on behalf of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, a body of America's veterans of all wars, who have seen actual service on hostile shores and urged that the government exempt this organization as well as other bonafide veteran orders from taxation placed on admission tickets to entertainments sponsored by them. The investigation disclosed that invariably such entertainments were held for the relief of needy ex-service men and their dependents. As the law now stands, the American Legion is the only veteran society so favored. Immediate relief for the remainder has been promised by the ways and means committee. Congressman E. C. Little is himself a veteran of American battlefields having served as second in command to the late General Funston in battles of the 20th Kansas during the Spanish-American War, and holds active membership in Adams Post of the V. F. W., Kansas City, Kansas.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS

More than 16,000 women were initiated into the Woman's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic during the administration of Mrs. Marie L. Basham of Des Moines, Ia., retired National President of the Order. Mrs. Basham went out of office in the Relief Corps with a membership of nearly 200,000.

In her convention, the Woman's Relief Corps voted a gift of $5,000 to the National Grand Army of the Republic; three scholarships were established in the schools at Berea, Ky., Berry Ga., and Lincoln Memorial, Tenn.

It is one of Mrs. Basham's hopes that soon there will be a law in every state requiring all teachers to take the oath of allegiance to the flag and that all foreign born teachers shall be required to become naturalized citizens. Fourteen states have adopted such laws, largely through the efforts of the Woman's Relief Corps.

The organization has created a National Woman's Relief Corps Scholarship of $5000.00 in the American International College at Springfield, Mass., and is now actively engaged in establishing a Grand Army of the Republic Scholarship of $5,000.00 from contributions of the Corps in all states, the interest to be given each year to a descendant of a civil war veteran for a college scholarship.

World war veterans as well as veterans of the Civil war are included in the relief work of the order. The organization has during the last year spent $3,462 in relieving cases of world war soldiers, not receiving aid from other sources.

There have been cash gifts to the Grand Army of the Republic from various states ranging from $1,000 to $5,000. The Illinois Relief Corps gave $5,000 to the G. A. R.; Ohio erected a peace monument at a cost of $10,000 and gave $500 in cash to the Ohio department of Grand Army of the Republic; Rhode Island Relief Corps put up a $3,000 cobblestone gateway to the Soldiers Home grounds; Massachusetts gave $1,000 to its state G. A. R.; and New York Corps gave $800 for the same purpose. The entire patriotic work of the organization has totalled $78,000.

The national organization has closed its year with a paid up membership of nearly 200,000, being now the largest patriotic society in the world. It has assets of $49,882.16 and no liabilities.

FORESTERS OF AMERICA

The regular meeting of Court City of Norwich, No. 68, was held on Tuesday night with Chief Ranger M. B. Looby in the chair, and was largely attended. Among the large amount of routine business transacted was the report of the degree team with regards to the one night bazaar which it conducted last month and which proved to be a very great success, and the members were thanked for their generous support to the efforts which the team is making to give this section of the state one of the finest teams in the state. The entertainment commitee was instructed to make preparations for the annual past chief rangers' night to be held in March. It is expected that the number of older members who will take part in this "get better acquainted" yearly night will surpass the turn out of last year when the hall was taxed to capacity. The committee is working hard and promise several surprises for all who attend.

It is hoped that the interest and enthusiasm which is being shown now in all matters pertaining to the order is a forerunner of the interest which it is hoped will be taken in several important matters which are to be brought before the members within the next few months. Court City of Norwich has the largest membership of any of the courts in the state and will make an effort to retain that position.

MOOSEHEART LEGION

Women of Mooseheart Legion, Norwich Chapter, No. 124, held its regular meeting Thursday evening at Moose home with a good attendance. GAS EXPLOSION CAUSED DEATH OF FORTY MINERS

Twenty Bodies Recovered From the Lancashire Coal Mine at Shanktown, Pa.—Heroic Miner Succeeded in Saving Nine of His Co-Workers—Red Cross Nurses and Salvation Army Workers Served Sandwiches and Coffee to Women and Children Who Stood in the Bitter Cold and Blinding Snow Waiting For News From the Workings.

Shanktown, Pa., Jan. 27—(By the A. P.)—Twenty bodies have been removed from the Lancashire mine here and the bodies of five others have been located by mine rescue workers in the workings which yesterday was the scene of a gas explosion. Fifteen others are believed to be entombed and little hope is held that they will be found alive.

"While no one is quite sure," said Engineer Parker, "there is every reason to believe there were forty victims of the mine disaster. The main heading has been explored to the face of the mine, and the crews are now going into the side entries. We expect to have the mine completely explored tonight."

The women and children who last night stood in the bitter cold and blinding snow waiting vainly for some news from the workings, were induced to go to their homes on the hill above the opening, by the Red Cross nurses and the Salvation Army workers, under Colonel Arthur Hopkins, general secretary for western Pennsylvania, who hastened here Johnstown when news of the tragedy reached that city. They served sandwiches and coffee to the emergency men during the night and comforting the stricken women and children, finally led them home. The nurses were then sent to the emergency morgue, at Starford, a neighboring village, where they took charge of the bodies.

John Rico, a miner, was on his way to work in the night shift shortly before four o'clock yesterday, when he saw a great volume of smoke burst from the pit. Without hesitation, he ran into the mine and almost immediately came upon a broken pick and a smashed dinner bucket. Tearing along for almost a mile, he shouted at the mouth of every gallery, but got no response, until he was near the sixth heading. Here a faint cry answered him, and his search was rewarded by finding nine men alive, but some of them bordering on unconsciousness.

Rico induced them to soak their handkerchiefs in water and tie them about their faces. He quickly found an air passage, and leading the weak and staggering men along its entire length, he finally came to a point where he knew the earth had fallen in from above. He then helped them one by one to climb to the surface, and safety.

Three other men who were not killed by the force of the explosion, managed to make their way to another air passage and later in the night gained their freedom. A fourth miner dashed along the main entry but was overcome by gas and perished.

The rescue parties as they penetrated the workings recounted the scene when the explosion occurred at a point between No. 6 and No. 7 right headings. John Yendler, a motorman, was taking an empty trip into the mine, and, with Mike Mitkito, the rope rider, met the explosion full face. Yendler was blown the length of 14 cars and decapitated, while Mitkito, also was mangled and killed. The cars were piled, a broken mass of splintered wood and twisted iron along the entry.

There was also mute evidence to the emergency men that all brattices and doors had been blown away and the gas left free to circulate in the workings beyond the seventh heading. Heavy wooden rollers, fastened in the trip to carry the haulage rope, were blown from the cleats and some of them were found as far as 150 feet outside the entrance to the mine.

There was no confusion after the emergency men under Engineer Parker got down to work. As soon as a heavy fall in the main entry had been cleared, efforts were directed to replacing the brattices and restoring the air system. With this completed, they hoped to be able to search the inner rooms and entries for the 30 men who were missing. Meantime the fan house, which had been seriously damaged, but not entirely wrecked by the explosion, was repaired and was ready to drive fresh air into the mine, as soon as the brattices were completed.

The Lancashire mine was opened 20 years ago and last December was sold to the Barnes and Tucker Coal Company, whose general offices are in Philadelphia.

The General Superintendent, Todd Hamilton, was in Philadelphia yesterday and when notified of the explosion, started for here with two of the company engineers. J. Walsh, chief of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Mines, reached Shanktown today and it was said, was gathering data preliminary to an investigation which will begin tomorrow.

STATISTICS OF MOTOR VEHICLES IN CONNECTICUT

Hartford, Jan. 27.—Violations of the motor vehicles laws netted that state of Connecticut $143,914.68 during the fiscal year 1923 or an increase of $47,760.62 over the fines reported during the previous year, according to a compilation completed at the department and announced today.

There were 5,783 fines reported during 1923 or an increase of 1,450 over 1922, but the department received $700 in fines on bad checks and $746.40 in trial fees in 1922.

Recapitulation of department statistics for the year shows receipts of $4,329,432.16 for 1923 against $3,567,744.84 in 1922, the increase being due to the heavier registration of automobiles last year. Under the state law these receipts are turned over to provement of the highway system. the state highway department for im- Department expenses are not deducted from the receipts, direct appropriation being made by the general assembly for this purpose.

One million dollars of the 1923 receipts were from sources other than registrations, being made up in examination fees andlicense fees. Gasoline licenses fell off from $5,858 to $ 154.

Motorcycles and jitneys, public service cars, commercial automobiles and private motor vehicles all showed increases. Fourteen airships were registered at a cost of $52 to the owners. Only one was registered in 1923. The license fee for an aviator is $2. Where there are a great many more operators than motor vehicles in the state the case reverses with regard to airships, there being twice as many planes as aviators.

MISSING MAN LOCATED INHOSPITAL IN BOSTON

Boston, Jan. 27—William C. Hoag, prominent resident of Peoria, Ill., who has been reported missing for two weeks, was located today in the Haymarket relief hospital, suffering from apparent loss of memory. Mr. Hoag was found unconscious on Court street late yesterday where he had collapsed.

When Mr. Hoag recovered consciousness today, he told the hospital authorities that he did not know where he was. He only knew that he was staying at some hotel, the name of which he did not remember. He said that he had been suffering from pains in his head and had taken a train from Peoria to get away for a rest. After further questioning by the authorities, he recalled his name and address, requesting that his wife, Mrs. Dora Hoag, be notified at 220 Vincent street.

Mr. Hoag was unable to remember exactly when he left his home, but he said that he believed it was about December 12.

FIVE DAY WEEK FOR SOME NEW HAVEN ROAD EMPLOYES

New Haven, Jan. 27.—A reduction of the working week from six to five days, effective at once was ordered by the New Haven road yesterday, effecting approximately 4,500 section men, bridge repairers, carpenters and blacksmiths. The order, it was stated, was issued in the interest of economy. It is expected that the six-day week will be resumed about March 1. The cut was also effective on the Central New England railroad yesterday, that road being a subsidiary of the New Haven.

At the general offices it was stated that it is not unusual to order a layoff at this time of the year, due to the mildness of the weather and the excellent condition of the roadbed. The order will cost section hands a day's pay amounting to $3.20 and the carpenters and blacksmith about $4.80.

WOMAN'S BODY CAUGHT IN PILOT OF ENGINE

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 27.—Passengers awaiting Erie Train No. 728 were horrified today when the train came into Paterson station with the body of a young woman caught in the pilot of the engine. Her skull was fractured and her death was probably instantaneous.

Later the young woman was identified as Miss Madeline V. Schoendorf, of Paterson. The engineer of the train knew nothing of the accident until the train arrived at Paterson.

For the Annulment of Teapot Dome Lease

Direct Action to Be Taken by President Coolidge and the Senate Within 24 Hours.

Washington, Jan. 27 (By the A. P.)—Direct action by both President Coolidge and the senate toward annullment of the naval oil leases is forecast within 24 hours.

Announcement of the administration's determination to act promptly on the basis of disclosures before the senate oil investigating committee was made at the White House last midnight, after the executive had conferred with several of his advisors, both in the senate and the department of justice.

Special counsel—probably two in number—drawn from both political parties will be selected by Mr. Coolidge to prosecute the cases, "so that if there is any guilt it will be punished; if there is any civil ability it will be enforced; if there is any fraud it will be revealed, and if there are any contracts which are illegal they will be cancelled.

Senate action will be on a resolution by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, who has had a dominant part in the investigation, proposing that the president be authorized and directed immediately to cause annullment suits to be instituted and to employ counsel for their prosecution.

The senate resolution will be directed only to the Teapot Dome lease in view of the offer of E. L. Doheny, through his counsel, to reconvey to the government without court proceedings the California naval reserve and other contracts held by his company. This offer will be presented to the senate tomorrow by the investigating committee without recommendation.

White House officials in discussing the midnight statement said today President Coolidge had studied the whole question of the leases in the seclusion of his cabin on the Mayflower during a run down the Potomac yesterday and that upon his return he conferred with advisers. These included Chairman Lenroot, of the investigating committee; Senator Curtis, of Kansas, assistant republican leader in the senate; Acting Attorney General Seymour, and Assistant Attorney General Holland, who personally has been observing the progress of the inquiry by direction of the executive.

Discussing the statement issued after this conference, Senator Walsh declared that "obviously," there had been conveyed to the White House information regarding the action of the investigating committee Saturday afternoon which it had been agreed should be regarded as confidential. He explained that the committee had "endorsed in principle" his resolution, proposing that the president begin suit and employ special counsel.

Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, author of the original cancellation resolution, for which the Walsh measure will be a substitute, declared the president was "merely acting now to head off independent action on the part of congress." Both he and Senator Walsh and other democratic leaders predicted that the Walsh substitute would be adopted by the senate tomorrow and there were intimations that in the debate preceding action the president's statement would come in for discussion.

DAUGHERTY REQUESTS THOROUGH INVESTIGATION

Washington, Jan. 27.—The White House tonight made public a telegram from Attorney General Daugherty which, officials said, was communicated in substance to the president last night at 11 o'clock, an hour before he issued his statement on naval oil leases. The telegram, sent from Miami, Fla., said:

"May I again urge the desirability you immediately appoint two outstanding lawyers, who as such shall at once take up all phases of the oil leases under investigation by the senate or others and advise you to the facts and law justifying legal proceedings of any kind.

"As you know I do not desire to evade any responsibility in this or other matters, but considering Mr. Fall and I served in the cabinet together, as well as to the attorney general, the department of justice, and my associates and assistants therein, I do not desire to be consulted as to whom you shall appoint. The only suggestion I have to make in that regard is that those appointed shall be lawyers whom the public will at once recognize as worthy of confidence and who will command the respect of the people by not practicing politics or permit others to do so in connection with this important public business. Their work can be done with or without the cooperation of the department of justice or anybody connected therewith, as you and they may desire. The department of justice is at all times, in this or any other matters, at your service, and at the service of your appointees in this connection."

These bills, it was announced, already have the support of the National Association of Letter Carriers, National Federation of Post Office Clerks and the Railway Mail Clerks.

HISTORIC CHURCH EDIFICE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 27.—The Oyster Bay Reformed church at Brookville, one of the oldest and most historic edifices on Long Island, was destroyed by fire today after regular morning services. The congregation was said to have been organized more than two centuries ago.

RADIO MONOPOLY CHARGED BY FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

Eight Corporations Are Charged With Having Formed a Monopoly by Acquiring All the Patents Controlling Manufacture of Radio Apparatus—They Have Been Cited to Make Answer Within Thirty Days to the Further Charge of "Violating the Law Against Unfair Competition to the Prejudice of the Public."

Washington, Jan. 27.—Principal corporations engaged in the manufacture and distribution of radio equipment and the rendering of radio service were charged in a federal trade commission complaint issued today with creating and maintaining a monopoly in radio apparatus and communication.

The companies named, the Radio Corporation of America, General Electric, American Telephone and Telegraph, Westinghouse, Western Electric, International Radio, United Fruit and Wireless Specialty, were cited to make answer within 30 days to the further charge of "violating the law against unfair competition in trade to the prejudice of the public."

The complaint charges the corporations formed a monopoly by acquiring all the patents controlling manufacture of radio apparatus and merged these in the Radio Corporation; further, by agreements and cross-licenses, the interests concerned marked out the field of manufacture and distribution in which each was to engage, and laid plans for maintaining their advantage in the future after expiration of existing patents, by pooling improvement rights.

The whole process, the complaint said, was in restraint of competition and involved distributing, manufacturing and sales rights under some 2,000 different patents, and the splitting up of the Radio Corporation stock between the General Electric Westinghouse, A. T. and T. and United Fruit Companies.

A series of inter-corporation contracts, the complaint charged gave the Radio Corporation "practical monopoly in trans-oceanic service, restricted the competition of certain respondents in fields occupied by other respondents, attempted to restrict the use of radio apparatus manufactured and sold."

BODY OF NIKOLAI LENINE ENTOMBED YESTERDAY

Moscow, Jan. 27 (By the A. P.)—Vladimir Ilyitch Ulianoff, whom the world knew as Nikolai Lenine, was entombed this afternoon. The followers of the rulers of soviet Russia hailed him an hour before his burial as greater in death than in life and paid him honors that a king might envy. They withstood for hours the bitterest cold the bolshevik capital has known in years. Half a million people marched or waited for eight hours in a temperature 30 below zero for the privilege of passing the temporary mausoleum, a squat Asiatic structure, like the tomb of a Tartar Khan, hastily built under the wall of the Kremlin fortress.

Lenine's funeral was like a strange medieval painting—a great Tartar order on a crusade march, its red and black banners obscured by the smoke of campfires and blurred by the steam of the bodies of men and horses and fog the cold air had turned into a dull Arctic blue with frost particles.

The mausoleum was specially built to maintain a minimum temperature to preserve the body as long as possible, but many sought shelter in its cold depths. Only the sturdy Russian physique could withstand such cold, but even at that thousands suffered from frostbite, and ambulance corps had to take soldiers and civilians in half frozen condition to the hospital stations.

EXPERTS WORKING FOR BUSINESSLIKE SETTLEMENT

Paris, Jan. 27.—(By the A. P.)—One of the greatest results thus far achieved by the committees of experts which are delving into Germany's financial and economic situation lies in the planting of seeds in fairly fertile soil for a business like, instead of a political settlement of the knotty reparation question. This statement was made tonight as being in accordance with the opinions of those to the committee, on the eve of the departure of the committees for Germany to further carry on their investigations. The members of the committees will depart tomorrow evening for Berlin where they will continue their work on the basis of the agreements unanimously reached here.

Those in close touch with the activities of the committees today expressed the feeling that the two weeks of hard work and observation here had revealed the European mental attitude was surprisingly ripe for a clear cut and practicable solution of the reparation muddle. This feeling was particularly reflected during the past week in business and commercial circles.

INTERVENTION MAY END BRITISH RAILWAY STRIKE

London, Jan. 27.—There seemed tonight to be a good prospect for successful intervention to end the railway strike. The emergency committee of the trades union congress, following negotiations carried on during the day with the Association Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, and the railway managers, tonight submitted fresh proposals to the latter. The proposals had the approval of J. Bromley, secretary of the strikers' association.

It was also reported tonight that Mr. Bromley, as an outcome of the negotiations of today, saw the railway managers late tonight an air of secrecy, however, hangs over the proceedings, and it is not thought probable that a settlement, if it is arranged will be announced until tomorrow.

Waterbury, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Theresa Iacceresko, alias Rosie Yaderesto, of 354 East street, New Haven, died at the office of Dr. C. W. S. Frost, this city, at about 1 o'clock this morning as the result of a knife wound in the right lung inflicted by an unknown assailant who is still at large.

Police spent the day in a futile attempt to locate the murderer and stated late today they are without a clue in the case. George Rocco of this city, who was with the woman at the time she was stabbed, is being held as a material witness.

According to the police, Rocco became acquainted with Mrs. Iacceresko in the Florence restaurant Saturday night. While he was speaking to her an Italian described as a small man interfered and became threatening.

Rocco and Mrs. Iacceresko left the restaurant and were standing on the sidewalk on South Main street, a short distance away, when the stranger again approached and after more threats drew a knife and stabbed her in the left breast.

Mrs. Iacceresko was rushed to Dr Frost's office where she died, a few minutes after her arrival. Jealousy is believed to have been the motive for the crime. Mrs. Iacceresko is said to have a husband living in New Haven. Ernest Nelson and Patrick J. WILLIMANTIC

Dandelions and pretty buttercups are not likely to be found thriving after Saturday and Sunday's cold snap, for the mercury dropped as low as two above in the city and a little below zero in "the great open spaces." Supt. Willard N. Bowen of the pumping station which is situated on the shore of the municipal pond in Mansfield reported that his thermometer read ten below zero. Within a comparatively short time the ice on the pond froze from a thickness of about five inches to nine and ten inches. If the weather holds it own during today (Monday) the ice about the runway of the city ice houses will soon be ten inches thick and the work of cutting and harvesting the crop on the pond will be started in earnest Tuesday.

It is expected that the work of getting in the ice crop on the smaller ponds will be taken up today by independent ice dealers. After a day of snow and rain and another day of freezing, skating on various ponds again became a popular sport Sunday. The sport, however, was enjoyed only by those who thought little of freezing off an ear or a few fingers.

Frederick Stewart Long, of Norwich, was charged with non-support, in the local police court Saturday morning, the charge being that he failed to provide for his three year old minor child. Long pleaded not guilty and his case was continued until the Monday morning when he will be represented by counsel. Long said that he was out of work at present. He was released on his own recognizance for appearance in court.

Long told the court that he supposed the charge was the same as that of August 21, 1923, when a special night session was held. At that time he was charged with non-support of his then wife, Rosie Bocash Long of this city and he was to pay $5 a week toward the support of his wife and child. Long said he had been divorced last August and that he had since married another woman. He did not see why he should pay alimony to a woman from whom he was divorced. When the decree was granted the mother was given the custody of the child.

Prices for the trucking of the steel framing for the new Capitol theatre building in this city were being secured last week by a representative of a steel manufacturing company. There are over two hundred tons of steel to be used in the construction of the theatre a ndthe work of fabrication is steadily progressing at the steel plant so that the erecting of the steel framework of the building may be started in March.

This large quantity of steel is necessary as the entire framework of the building will be of steel and a general ideal of the amount of this metal which will be used can be gleaned when it is said that the main girder supporting the balcony alone weighs over 19 tons, being four feet deep and over 40 feet long. It will be transported to this city on two flat cars.

The new structure promises to be one of the handsomest in this city. The theatre will present an attractive appearance, built along modern lines and with every convenience for patrons. In addition there will be four stores on the first floor in front of the theatre and twelve offices above.

In connection with the cutting down of "overhead" in one of the local concerns, the following letter of interest has been offered for public approval: "News has reached us that they are cutting down the "overhead" in one of the local concerns, on account of poor times. Ha! Ha! We are all glad that it will give some extra work to keep them busy. They do two men's work now, for one man's pay. Another man's work won't hurt them. There are only a few of this class in existence now. They will get it in due time, same as their ancestors before them. After half a century spent within narrow walls, they have as their reward a sour old age and a wee pension. I refer only to the likes of the men who were born in houses without doors. "By their deeds we know them." Boys, we never received enough pay for shouldering a gun to protect the likes of these, but it's some consolation to know that they are reducing the "overhead." We'll enjoy watching them sweat. Yours for goodfellowship. C. M."

With the mercury gradually trickling down to the zero mark and a young gale blowing around the corner of the building, the "Human Fly," George E. Polley of Marblehead, Mass., displayed his prowess and his remarkable ability to "stick to it" Saturday afternoon when he ascended the exterior walls of the four story Windham National Bank building, on Main street, in the presence of a thousand pairs of watchful eyes. Much like the proverbial chattering of the monkeys, Polley kept up a continual talk about his cold fingers and the products he was advertising.

He said that he was the greatest climber in the world and that he was surviving 34 other "Flies" who had attempted to repeat his stunts, which he himself has now been doing for 17 years. Polley said that he had previously climbed the Windham National Bank building, one morning during Old Home Week in June, 1915. After reaching the top of the building, Polley straddled a cornice and braving a strong wind he stood on his head. The big crowd murmured and sniffed. Polley then left his advertising bag hooked to a corner of the building and came down the side of the building in less than two minutes. Polley's exhibiton greatly pleased the audience. By hanging from on fbow or only by his knee, he kept the crowd in an anxiety which made all forget for a time that they were standing out in the freezing air.

SNEAK THIEVES CAUGHT IN WILLIMANTIC STOVE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, Jan. 27—Two daring sneak thieves were caught here red-handed about 11 o'clock tonight after they had broken into the Tubridy-Weldon dry goods store at 750 Main street and loaded their trouser pockets with the contents of the cash register. The men were Homer Lavoie of this city and his brother-in-law, George Rondeau. Shortly before 11 o'clock Vincent Donohue, one of the employes of the dry goods firm, went into the cellar of the store through a side door with the intention of fixing the fire in the furnace for the night. As he opened the door he was startled by hearing footsteps on the main floor and with hair on end he ran back onto the street and summoned his chum, J. Stanley Healy. The two young men then entered the store and after turning on the lights began to look around for the intruders. The search led to the basement which is used as part of the store and Healy saw a head protruding from behind one of the counters. Cautioning Donohue, Healy went out onto the street and called Officer Lariviere. With gun in hand the officer rushed to the basement and ordered the burglars to come out of their hiding places. After some hesitation Rondeau gave himself up and was closely followed by Lavoie.

Captain Grady, Lieut. McLean and Officer William Hurley were then called in on the case. The men were taken to the police station and booked for a hearing this Monday morning. Rondeau had almost $10 in silver and Lavoie had about $4 in his pocket. Besides a newly purchased glass cutter the men also had a vanity case, fountain pen and watch. The latter three articles were recognized as property stolen from the Murray Boston store which was broken into two weeks ago last Friday. Upon cross examination the men confessed of the robbery at the Boston store and an additional charge was lodged against them. Besides their own confessions evidence was revealed in connection with the recent Boston store burglary when Lieut. McLean identified both men as having been late street walkers on the night of the robbery.

In a talk with a reporter Rondeau said that they had a hard time getting into the Tubridy-Weldon store. Entrance was made through a small window leading from a narrow alley way and situated about ten feet above the ground. Rondeau climbed a wire which runs between the two buildings and helped Lavoie who has only one arm, to get in after him. The thieves were favored by finding the window already opened for them as painters had been at work during the day and orders had been left that one winow be left open to allow the smell of fresh paint to evaporate. Lavoie was arrested a few years ago on a charge of burglary and Rondeau has been before the court for a non-support charge.

The fact that the Willimantic police department is sadly in need of a patrol wagon was fully realized by the officers when they had to make the run from the police station last night to the burglarized store about a half mile away. Lieut. McLean was credited with having made the run in record time arriving at the store about two minutes after receiving the call.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Scores Hit

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paramount screen debutant and star, is a worthy son of his famous sire. He proved his calibre in his first screen appearance in "Stephen Steps Out,' a highly delightful picture, which was shown before enthusiastic audiences at the Strand theatre last night. Portraying the stellar character, that of a real American boy in a clean and wholesome story, the young star proved himself the possessor of most of the qualities which go for success on the screen, and reinforced by experience backed by his winsome personality, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., doubtless will become a power in the motion picture world.

Stephen Harlow, Jr., fails in his final examination in Turkish history at Stillwater, a preparatory school endowed by his father, a wealthy meat packer. So Harlow, the elder, determines that his son shall study Turkey at first hand and he sends the lad there in charge of a tutor.

In Constantinople Stephen becomes involved in the plots of conspirators against the Sultan and is imprisoned. He escapes and informs the Sultan of the whereabouts of his kidnapped son, Prince Yusuf. The Sultan is so grateful that he offers Stephen anything as a reward. It is the boy's request that his old professor, the one who flunked him in history, and who wrote a history of Turkey, be presented with the Star of the Order of the Crescent. The Sultan agrees and Dr. Gilman receives not the Star, but the Grand Cross of the Crescent, the highest honor Turkey is able to confer.

Back at Stillwater, from which Dr. Gilman had been dismissed, the professor achieves wide publicity. Old Harlow is at a loss for an explanation until his son arrives home. Then the truth comes and and father and son are reconciled.

Theodore Roberts is featured as Harlow, Sr., while Noah Berry, Harry Myers and Frank Currier head an unusually capable supporting cast. "Stephen Steps Out," was directed by Joseph Henabery. This picture has everything—thrills, comedy, youthfulness and sound theme and moral.

Broadway Theatre

Once again the patrons of the Broadway theatre will be greatly entertained with the six acts of B. F. Keith vaudeville that are scheduled for the first half of this week. Each act is a little different from the other assuring a good variety while the quality is guaranteed.

Seven thousand feet of thrills, heart interest and gripping drama are rolled into Thomas H. Ince's latest all-star production, "What a Wife Learned, featuring John Bowers, Milton Sills and Marguerite de la Motte.

Vivid scenes of the great western cattle country of Arizona, a cattle stampede, the most realistic ever screened, "shots" of the big Laguna dam, at Yuma, Arizona, erected by the United States government at a cost of nine million dollars and 47 lives, are but a few of the scenes of this interesting drama about the romance of a primitive man, a twentieth century woman and her career.

Leaders of women's clubs, sociologists of world- wide distinction, and noted clergymen who have seen an advance showing of the picture acclaim it a wide departure from anything ever attempted in photoplay production.

"What A Wife Learned" is a Thomas H. Ince production which combines a theme of tense interest with vivid action, glimpses of life on the two coasts and some of the most spectacular western flood scenes ever filmed. It is now running at the Broadway theatre.

At the Breed Theatre

Last night at the Breed theatre began a three day run of the Fox production, "No Mother to Guide Her," featuring Genevieve Tobin. It is a drama that grips with tense situations, cleverly relieved by timely bits of comedy. It portrays life's conflict, contrasting wealth and poverty, love and retribution, seriousness and laughter, in a manner which makes the offering decidedly human.

To those who remember the stage play, the screen version comes as a pleasant surprise, containing all the thrills with the action speeded up materially. The direction throughout is beyond criticism and the photography shows that the cameraman took advantage of every opportunity to get artistic results. The cast is well chosen.

Genevieve Tobin, playing the lead, portrays her role with an accustomed assurance that bespeaks her stage experience. Dolores Rousse, newly come to the screen draws her character with a manner all her own. Lolita Robertson, also playing a prominent part, deserves praise for her work. Among the men in the cast, J. D. Walsh does a bit of acting that stamps him as an actor of unusual talen; as well it might, Mr. Walsh having appeared first with Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle." John Webb Dillion and Jack McLean also should be mentioned for their work. But don't let us forget the youngsters who add comedy to the picture. In fact, you will be delighted with very bit of the screen creation at the Breed.

The Pathe news and an Education comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

At the Palace.

Heading a very fine program of standard vaudeville will be the Vaudeville Follies, a company of seven clever juvenile entertainers in a revue of songs and dances. Nan's Birds is a most beautiful and artistic presentation of a tropical revue of feathered entertainers. Emerson & Baldwin are eccentric comedians and will offer bits of by-play. Arthur and Lydia Wilson in Flirtations a la Carte and Clayton & Moore in clever dancing numbers will round out a well balanced program of diversified entertainment. As there is something decidedly different in each act it can in truth be called a variety bill.

The feature picture is a James Young Production, Wandering Daughters. Delightfully blending the emotions of two girls of contrasting natures in search of romance, Wandering Daughters, James Young's picture version of an original story by Dana Burnet, comes to the Palace theatre.

Devoid of the dry sentiments of so many pictures dealing with timely topics, Wandering Daughters is said to be pleasingly different and highly entertaining drama, appealing to the most discriminating critics of the screen.

Revealing the adventures of two debutantes enamored of a male vamp and their activities in his company, Wandering Daughters develops many unusual angles and numerous surprising situations as it runs its length according to its critics, and the entrance of two respective fathers into the social affairs of their inexperienced daughters is reported both amusing and highly dramatic.

Marjory Daw and Marguerite de la Motte are cast as the two principal "wandering daughters," and William V. Mong, Noah Beery and Allan Forrest are assigned the leading male roles.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The red ball is up. Icemen's hopes soared Sunday like the Shenandoah in a gale. From their viewpoint, the Weather Man rated about the same as does "John T. King" in the estimation of a famous uplifter. The icemen would have difficulty in giving one an accurate personal description of the Weather man, much the same as a more or less interesting figure has left an intangible impression of "John T".

But no one can blame the icemen for being happy over a morning like that of Sunday. The mercury plunged to 10 below zero—a record minimum for the winter. And it did not show much of an inclination to recede to heights during the day. At the noon hour in Danielson many readings showed zero or 1 above. By two o'clock some of the instruments were saying that it was 6 above. And that was about the hottest reading of the day.

Firesides were the favorite resorts. Even the majority of the most ardent of chickens and their admirers were content to let the flivver shiver in an unheated garage while they got in the unusual cold afternoon under the most comfortable conditions possible. No one with a bit of sanity was jealous about seeing anyone else riding around in a car on a day like Sunday, through, by reason of necessity, a certain number of machines were to be met on the roads.

The prospective compensation out of the cold wave that developed during the early hours of Saturday morning and showed no signs of abatement as Sunday wore on was that ice crop. There were substantial citizens, standing out in the cold for brief periods, who were willing to attest that it was freezing at the rate of a foot of ice per hour. They were wrong about that—but entirely right about its being Arctic cold.

Out of the west a stiff wind continued to make the weather spree decidedly uncomfortable throughout every hour of Sunday, and there was no promise of a letup today.

The average person was willing to stand the gaff, however, in the hope that this section may not be left without an ice supply for next summer if this week continues cold, the cutters will be on the lake getting the thousands of tons of the cold stuff needed to satisfy Danielson's wants when Old Sol is playing the Shiek and scorching everything in sight when August comes.

Send this advertisement to The Plaut-Cadden Co., Norwich, with your name and address and you will receive a Book of Old Fashioned Songs free.—adv.

Pierre Renaud, 68, a native of Canada but for 20 years a resident of Danielson, died suddenly Saturday evening about 6.30 at his home on the West Side. Mr. Renaud was about as usual on Friday and had spent a considerable time in sawing wood. Saturday he appeared to be ill and when his condition became serious in the afternoon the members of the household were alarmed. His passing early in the evening came as a great shock to them.

Mr. Renaud is survived by his wife and nine children—John B., Mrs. Leon Beschard, Mrs. Wilfred Paul, Joseph, Leon, Edmund, Rosanna, Fredolin and Emma Rose Renaud.

Killingly High's basketball team is performing with remarkable efficiency again this winter. Its snappy victories over Tourtellotte and Putnam last week again has demonstrated that it is the peer of all the high school teams in this corner of the state. Members of the student body now have their attention fixed upon the meeting of the team and the team of Plainfield High school, here, on February 1. The fans are boosting for a clear-cut victory over Plainfield, that it may again be established beyond all possibility of dispute that the Killingly team is supreme among the high school fives along the Quinebaug valley. It seems necessary that this be definitely established this winter.

It may be a long time before Killingly has another basketball team like the one that is representing it on the courts this winter. And having such a team as it now possesses it is up to Killingly to make the most of the situation. Killingly has been too strong at basketball the last four years to win much affection from competing teams in this corner of the state. Its players have happened to be too good.

At least two men who are in the Killingly lineup this year—Williams and Keech—will be lost by graduation in June. They have ever been a tower of strength for their school and like many other good athletes, have excited more or less envy among the membership of competing schools. It is for this particular reason that all of Killingly is rooting for them to pile up the largest possible scores for their school during the remainder of the playing season, with the aid of the other fine players that make up the Killingly team.

Windham High school team will have its team here for a game on Wednesday. Windham is a strong competitor, and will give Killingly a great game, but whatever the outcome of it, the fans will not lose interest in the likelihood of Killingly turning in a clean cut victory over Plainfield High on Friday night. Supporters of Putnam, Tourtellotte and Plainfield High will understand just why this ambition exists. Plainfield alone remains to taste defeat at the hands of a great basketball team. And the town is cheering for the Killingly boys to turn the trick.

If there were any scofflaws in or about Danielson Sunday, they were not promiscuous in letting the fact be known. They must have been "hiding out." Chief John McFarland was down town a few minutes before sunrise in the morning and from then until he went off duty at 6 p. m., his chief concern was in keeping warm. There were no law violators to bother him.

There were no street corner loungers—no jazzy automobile drivers—no drunks. Not in sight anyway. Hoping to fill in a cruel and uninteresting day, the chief kept an eye out for "John T. King", ambitious that he might identify him and gain great renown thereby, but John did not appear, and so another hope breezed off on the wings of an icy gale.

Up at the state police barracks things were fully as quiet. Officers on duty said there had been no demand for their services up to late afternoon. And for this they were duly thankful.

A military ball that the Service battery has in mind for the latter part of February may outclass any event of the kind arranged for Danielson in years. There is talk of having a famous orchestra, and of wonderful decorations and of various other features that will combine to make a social event of outstanding pre-eminence. The enthusiasts are saving now to buy their tickets—and, on the other hand, their gowns.

Clerks in Danielson's stores were standing pat at the week end on their demand for Thursday half-holidays throughout the year, excepting at the Christmas season. They have signed the petition—that is, a great many of them have, and they have obtained the signatures of various business men to their proposal. They are pointing to the fact that Putnam has a yearly half-holiday arrangement for the stores, and that such a practice has been long established in villages where much business is done by the stores hereabouts. This is regarded as an important consideration by the clerks. Their argument is that they are trying to bring Danielson into line with a concession that is very generally in vogue.

Automobilists regard as a great consideration the fact that nothing is being done to ban the sale of such kind of alcohol as goes into radiators of cars. Machines seem to be able to absorb unlimited quantities of the stuff and still behave. Cars that were called into service Sunday were loaded with the alcohol anti-freeze liquids. Had they not been, more frozen radiators than were reported would have been listed and the repair bill for the motorists correspondingly high. Enjoying the concession allowed them, some drivers took their machines out Sunday just to revel in the glory of the fact. But there are other winters coming, when even the cars may be under scrutiny as to their moral standing.

Recently Henry Burton, Miss Mildred Burton, Mrs. Mary Gaffney, Miss Marjojrie Gaffney, Mrs. M. Hartley, Miss Nellie Redman, and Mrs. Edward Hatch were in Providence to hear a concert by the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

Miss Blanche Gauthier is to spend this week with relatives in Waterbury.

Aden R. Sherman, 70, a native of Scituate, R. I., but practically all his life a resident of the neighboring Rhode Island town of Gloucester, died at his home there Saturday evening. He had been ill about two weeks. Mr. Sherman had been engaged during the years of his active life as a farmer and burner of charcoal, which is an industry in that section of the country. Mr. Sherman leaves his wife, a son, Arthur, of North Scituate and a daughter, Mrs. Isabelle Reynolds, of Harrisville, R. I.

Big event Wednesday evening at the Bohemian club! Prof. John B. Bassett and Prof. L. N. Dube—meeting in a match game of pool—one of the winter tournaments at the club. Both are good. Prof. Bassett is chairman of the executive committee of the club and a good pool player. Prof. Dube is one of the stars of the green covered tables. Naturally he is under suspicion of being able to trim Prof. Bassett, who doesn't believe he can do it, which difference of opinion is going to draw out as spectators practically the entire membership of the club, which membership is at great odds over the outcome. It will be a big game on a big night. And the club will make a special occasion of it. The chimes on the new clock will be ringing 8.30 when the great contest opens.

PUTNAM

Putnam, Danielson and Willimantic are represented among the seven petitions for divorce recently filed with Clerk E. M. Warner of the Windham County Superior Court.

Henry V. Anderson of Thompson asks for a decree from his wife, Mildred Iren Anderson of Norwich. They were married July 18, 1916, and have three children whose custody the petitioner asks for. Disertion is alleged.

Ethel S. Mansfield of Putnam alleges that her husband has deserted her, also that he was intolerably cruel in his treatment of her. She married William Nelson Mansfield, of Putnam, September 29th, 1914 at Boston and they have one minor child of whom she asks the custody. Mr. Mansfield, while stationed at Camp Devens during the war, was shot in the leg while returning to camp on a motorcycle. Another soldier was driving the machine and did not halt at the comand of a sentry. The sentry fired and the bullet hit Mansfield in the leg. After being in the hospital for some time the leg was amputated. The husband is now believed to be somewhere in New Jersey. Mrs. Mansfield lives in Putnam with her husband's parents.

Elsie Bibeault Fletcher of Putnam asks for a decree from Elton Fletcher of Randolph, Vt. A corespondent is mentioned in the complaint. The custody of an only child is sought.

Marjorie G. Wodbury, daughter of Arthur G. Bill, of Danielson, seeks separation from her husband, Ralph E. Woodbury, formerly of Bristol now of Plymouth, N. H. Intolerable cruelty is alleged in the complaint and the custody of one minor child is asked.

Desertion in 1917 is alleged by Archibald J. Kyle, of Willimantic, in his petition for divorce from his wife, Bertha A. Kyle of the town of Windham. The custody of three minor children is asked for.

After two years of married life Ray E. Goyette, of Stafford, is sued for divorce by his wife, May Goyette of Willimantic, who alleges that her husband has epilepsy. They were married December 27, 1921.

The seventh petition is that of Delia Roberts, of Killingly, against George L. Roberts of the same place. Before her marriage February 4th, 1918, Mrs. Roberts was Delia Bodo. Habitual intemperance is alleged and the custody of a minor child asked.

G. Harold Gilpatrick of Putnam and William G. Marsden of Pascoag, R. I., appraisers of the property of the Manhasset Manufacturing Company of this city, now in the hands of receivers, have filed their report with the clerk of the Windham County Superior Court, finding the assets of the company total $1,574,782.

The appraisers put a value of $678,946 on the real estate and buildings machinery and other equipment. This includes the five large buildings used for manufacturing, waste house, office building and other out buildings, power plant, water rights, machinery, equipment and the tenement houses. The appraisal does not include the company's property in Taunton, Mass.

On the date they examined the accounts they found the assets to be as follows: Cash on hand and on deposit, $14,201.22; notes receivable, $17,832.55; accounts receivable for returnable containers, $20,352.72; accounts receivable from affiliated company $1,963.53.

For buildings used for manufacturing purposes and several other structures used as waste house, machine shop, etc., the appraisers find to be worth $210,000; on the forty-nine two-family houses, eight four tenement houses and the power plant the value is fixed at $180,000, included in the whole appraisal were the seventeen and one half acres of land owned in Putnam by the company.

In addition to the assets enumerated above the appraisers find raw cotton and goods in process of manufacture valued at $572,719.76; placed in the report as the merchandise inventory.

Fire gutted a small concrete building owned by the estate of E. E. Johnson, located just off of Mechanic street Saturday morning, and destroyed wood working machinery and lumber owned by Frank E. Whitman and a Ford automobile owned by Arthur Johnson of Attawaugan. The loss is estimated at from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars.

Johnson is employed at the plant of the Putnam Foundry and Machine Corporation. He drove to Putnam Saturday morning to go to his work and as usual put his car in the rear of the building occupied by Whitman. Soon after he left fire was discovered and at 8.30 o'clock an alarm was rung in from box 25. This was followed by a second alarm bringing out all of the apparatus in the city.

While the Ford car is blamed for the fire just how it started is not known. When the fire department reached the scene the interior of the building was all ablaze. As buildings of the Foundry company and many dwellings surrounded the little shop the whole effort of the firemen was to keep the flames confined. Their task was made easy for them as the shop is built of concrete blocks.

The building was formerly used as a machine shop by the late E. E. Johnson. Since his death it has been rented by Mr. Whitman and used as a small carpenter shop in getting out finish for a number of houses he has been building in the vicinity. There were a number of wood working machines and a small quantity of lumber in the building. The fire catching as it did will, it was said, probably violate any insurance carried.

The walls of the building remain infact but the roof was somewhat burned. The all out signal sounded shortly after nine o'clock.

William E. Murray, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Murray, South Main street has returned from Florida where he went to spend the winter. Mr. Murray's love for the south is no greater than was that of John Jarvis who returned north in the middle of the winter and was glad to get here. The latter left home to get a drink of palatable water. Murray returned to get warm. He says that he had rather be in Putnam with a good steam-heated house than to try to keep warm on a Florida night with an oil stove.

Frank L. Davis, county farm agent, will be in Boston Tuesday to attend a dary meeting.

Word was received in Putnam that Editor Charles B. Johnson of the Franklin Sentinel, formerly engaged in newspaper work in Putnam and a brother of Attorney E. H. Johnson of this city recently underwent a surgical operation in St. Elizabeth's hospital, Brighton, Mass. He has so far recovered that he has returned home to Franklin where he is showing signs of improvement, after being in a critical condition from the recurrences of an attack of heart trouble.

The fence that has hidden from view the front of the new Putnam Savings Bank building on Main street having been removed, people have now the opportunity of seeing how the building will look when fully completed. The bank gives one the impression of a substantial building of attractive design although plain in outline.

Mrs. Howard C. Bradford and youngest child John, of South Main street are spending ten day with Mrs. Bradford's relatives in Providence.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. DeCoudres and daughter left Saturday for Miami, Fla. Mrs. DeCoudres and the Misses DeCoudres will spend the remainder of the winter there. Mr. DeCoudres will return in two weeks.

The first degree was exemplified at a special meeting of Cargill council, K. of C., Sunday afternoon.

Charles Burzuk and his wife Victoria Burzuk, out of their family treasury paid into the treasury of the city of Putnam. $650 Friday afternoon at a special session of the city court at which each pleaded guilty of keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell.

The Burzuk place on Main street having come under the eye of the law enforcement officers, on account of apparent traffic of some kind being greater than legitimate business seemed to warrant during these times of depression, a search warrant was issued and upon serving it a dozen or more bottles of a concoction that smelled and looked like hard cider, was seized, together with a five gallon container in which the aroma of alcohol was still evident and some empty bottles of the hip pocket style. Both defendants were fined $30 and costs by Deputy Judge Archibald Macdonald Jr.

On account of a slight illness Judge M. H. Geissler of the city court did not leave for his trip to Florida Saturday, as he had planned, but left Sunday instead. His first stop will be the National Capitol where for a number of years he was employed in the Navy department before he was admitted to the bar. He will go from there to Richmond and other places as fancy takes him until he arrives at Tampa, where he will join his mother, who has been in the south all winter. He will return to Putnam in about two weeks.

State's Attorney and Mrs. Charles E. Searls will leave this (Monday) morning for their annual trip to Camden, S. C., stopping over in New York Monday night.

Funeral services for Mrs. Alice Pechie, wife of William Pechie, were held Saturday afternoon, Rev. S. Stoddard of the Baptist church officiating. Burial was in the Putnam Heights Cemetery.

CHAS. H. FRENCH, THEATRICAL MAGNATE, DIES IN A NEW LONDON HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Jan. 27.—Kusma Seredt of 217 Main street was arrested early this morning by Patrolman William Babcock and Ernest Popperman, charged with breaking and entering. He was locked up in default of surety on his bond of $200 for appearance in the police court Monday morning.

Sereda went to the residence, 93 Potter street, occupied principally by Poles, about 2 o'clock and gained admission to the house. He was detected in the place and finally located in the cellar. The cellar entrance was locked and Sereda was made a prisoner, after which Charles Taylor, also an occupant of the place was requested to notify the police. When the officers arrived at the house one of the Polish residents was guarding the door and it being opened, Sereda was found crumpled in a corner. Nothing of value was reported missing from the house.

Rock Zekas of 185 Main street was arrested Saturday afternoon by Patrolmen George Laboue, John Courtney and Frank Linehan, charged with breach of the peace, upon complaint of Mrs. Zekas. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $50 for his appearance in the police court Monday morning.

Zekas had attacked his wife at their home and created such a disturbance that a daughter of the couple appeared at the police station stating that her father had attacked the mother with an axe. The officers found a crowd assembled outside, while Zekas and his wife were quarreling. There was no visible evidence, however, that Mrs. Zekas had been abused, but she lodged a complaint against her husband. Zekas has a long police record, having been arrested many times, principally for intoxication and breach of the peace.

The first arrest in New London in many weeks for violation of the liquor law occurred late Saturday afternoon, when Mrs. Mary Colangelo, widow and proprietor of a restaurant at 1 Atlantic street was taken into custody. A quantity of liquid containing alcoholic contents in excess of that allowed by law, a gallon of wine and two bottles of wine and an empty alcohol can, besides Vermouth aroma were seized. She was held in bonds of $1,000 for her appearance in the police court Monday morning and furnished a surety in George H. Beck.

The stuff seized consisted besides the wine, Vermouth aroma and alcohol can, three dozen bottles of Ferro China Monti, an Italian beverage claimed to be a stimulant or invigorator and said to be commonly partaken of by members of the Italian race.

Mrs. Colangelo's place has been suspected by officers of late as being resorted to for purposes of obtaining liquor. A warrant was issued and Sergeant Nelson Smith, accompanied by Patrolmen William Gragam, George Perkins, William Manice, George McCaskey and John Sullivan, raided the place and finding the evidence that will be used in an endeavor to convict the woman. Mrs. Colangelo has been arrested several times charged with violation of the liquor law.

The residence 201 Ocean avenue, owned and occupied by Mrs. Maud V. Huntley, was damaged this afternoon by fire that originated from a defective chimney. The fire was confined to the upper part of the two story building and the chief damage was sustained by the roof.

The fire occurred shortly after 1 o'clock when pedestrians observed smoke issuing through the shingles on the south side of the dwelling. An alarm was rung in from box 56, corner of Ocean and Willetts avenues. The firemen found the entire south side of the roof emitting volumes of smoke. Chemical lines were stretched to the rook from both the interior and exterior of the house and in a half hour the blaze had been extinguished, but not before considerable damage had been occasioned.

The fire was caused by the fire from the chimney igniting the wood-work surrounding it and traveling along the beams to the roof where the shingles were quickly ignited. A high wind prevailed at the time.

Alfred H. Pollock, of Montauk avenue left Friday for Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth, Indianapolis and Cincinnati in the interest of the Corticelli Silk Company by which firm Mr. Pollock is employed in the spooling department.

Mrs. Daniel S. Marsh Jr. of Bellevue place has gone to Miami, Fla., where she will remain several weeks. Mrs Marsh's father-in-law, Daniel S. Marsh and sister-in-law, Miss Cora A. Marsh have been at Miami several weeks and with Mrs. Marsh will remain until spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace C. Learned have returned home after having spent a week in New York.

The wedding of John MacInnis, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. MacInnis of 46 Jay street, and Miss Adelle Conroy of Brooklyn, N. Y., will take place Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church. Mr. MacInnis is employed by the Robert Gair manufacturing company of Montville. The bride elect has resided in New London several months being a sister of Mrs. James T. Dempsey of Montauk avenue, wife of Lieut. Dempsey, U. S. N.

Michael Feeney of Mahan street, Mrs. John Halperin of Ledyard street, Mrs. Henry Trail and infant son of Eastern Point and William Wentworth of Huntington street patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Funeral services for Russel Nye, 15 adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Erskine of Station 22, Waterford, were held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the residence of the boy's parents. Rev. T. J. Loiselle officiated. The bearers were John T. Secord, George B. Ellis, Malcolm Keeney, John E. Worrall, Seymour Rowley and Clarence E. St. Germaine. Burial was in Saylesville, R. I.

Miss Helen Dwyer of Hempstead street, employed by the Robert Gair company of Montville, had a narrow escape Wednesday when she swallowed a pin. Miss Dwyer subjected herself to x-ray pictures at Lawrence hospital Wednesday and Thursday and as a result the pin was located, but an operation was not necessary, the pin leaving the system by natural means. Miss Dwyer swallowed the pin while she held several in her mouth while dressing to go to her employment.

Turner C. Beckwith, of 37 Federal street, died Saturday morning at Lawrence hospital, where he had been under treatment two weeks for heart disease, an affliction Mr. Beckwith had been a sufferer many years. He was of advanced years and is survived by a widow and one son, Herman Beckwith of Niantic. Mr. Beckwith was for many years employed by the Palmer Brothers' company.

The Bridgeport police informed the New London authorities Saturday that an automobile in storage in that city was believed to be a stolen machine and the property of a resident of New London. The car was of the commercial type and bore Connecticut registration, 34-888. According to the Bridgeport police the car was placed in storage there some time ago by a man who gave his name as Smith and stated that his address was at Niagara Engine Co., No. 1 of New London. Sergeant Frank Howard decided that the car is the property of Mrs. Francis Craigh of 2656 South Lloyd street, Philadelphia and that it was driven from New London to Bridgeport at the request of Mrs. Craigh by C. A. Swift, who obtained a receipt for the car and forwarded the receipt to Mrs. Craigh, who intended to leave the machine in storage until spring.

Chief of Police James I. Donaghy of Ardmore, Pa., has communicated with the New London police asking for the arrest of Fred Palmer, 3rd, aged 15, if the youth appears in New London operating a Ford touring car. The machine was recently stolen by Palmer and it is believed he will appear with it in New England cities. Palmer is described as being about six feet in height, has dark hair and dark eyes. When he disappeared the youth wore a Boy Scout khaki suit, dark cap with fur band and brown overcoat and was possessed of $60.

Mrs. K. Bueter of 459 East 171st street, New York, has informed the New London police that her son, Louis, 11, has run away from home. Should the youth appear in New London she desires him to be arrested and held until she can come to this city and take charge of him.

Marie Faulker, 5, of 20 1-2 Steward street, was struck by an automobile, owned and operated by Putnam Burhoe of 120 Bayonet street, yesterday afternoon on Howard street, corner of Woodbridge street. The child was taken to the office of a physician, where it was determined that her only injuries were a lacerated lip and nose. She was struck when she attempted to run across the street, running directly in front of the automobile which was about to pass the intersecting streets.

Frank G. Donoghue of 487 Williams street, informed the police Saturday that the dog reported stolen by William Porter of 248 Crystal avenue several days ago, had been returned to Porter by him. Donohue stated that the dog appeared at his home and had been frequenting the place until Donohue ascertained that Porter was the owner of the animal.

An automobile owned by James A. Glass, 15 Fowler court and a machine bearing Connecticut registration 2678, were in collision Saturday afternoon at the corner of Truman and Hempstead streets. Both cars were damaged.

John Rynasko of 222 Main street added $100 to the amount the state will expend for the making and upkeep of good roads Saturday when he paid a fine of that amount in the police court for operating an automobile while in an intoxicated condition. When in court, John could find no excuse for his conduct as he was taken from his car in bad shape from indulgence in liquor. So he said he was guilty and the fine provided by statute was imposed upon him. He has three times been arrested for violation of the automobile laws of the state, but never for the offense with which he was accused Saturday. John depends upon using his license to operate a car for a living, so it is apparent what a serious mistake he made in loading up with liquor.

Saturday night brought the lowest temperature of the winter, for the mercury went below the zero point. The change gave assurance that ice will be harvested in this city and vicinity, as it is understood the ice on ponds hereabouts was of about five inches in thickness before the freeze of Saturday came, and that weather with the continued low temperature Sunday and Sunday night will add a few inches to the ice by Monday morning. Up to this time no ice has been harvested in this city. A small crop was carried over from last year.

The Atlantic Refining Company has until Friday next to close the bargain for the purchase of the Keefe property, corner of Bank and Tilley street. An option of $500 and holds the deal at present, but that option will expire on the 1st prox. The Atlantic company desires to erect a gasoline station on the site and will do so if it acquires the property. There seems to be no doubt that the Keefe house and grounds will go to the refining company, for the attorney of that corporation has been in the city the past week and has gone over all the measurements of the property and has ascertained the rights which attach to it and which may not be stated in the deed by which the late Edward Keefe came into possession of the property. Permission to erect a gasoline station on the land was not given to the Atlantic company till an arrangement was made with the city whereby the corner of Bank street should be widened to dimensions of thirty feet, and until the Chappell company, which owns adjoining property on Bank street and at the rear on Tilley street had also consented to arrangements by which the widening of Bank street at Tilley could be assured.

Now the state must be consulted as to conditions that are to be complied with in the matter of erecting an oil repository. The price paid for the property is understood to be $26,000. The Chappell company, owners of the land next south of the corner under consideration, some time ago had plans made for the erection of the most elaborate garage and oil-filling station in the city on the premises it owns and only deferred the beginning of operations that would produce the garage and station because of the abnormal price conditions surrounding building construction.

That vexatious question (to the city council and the board of school visitors) question, whether the city will erect a half million dollar junior high school on the Harris land opposite the grammar school, will again be before the city council Monday evening. It will come there on a report from a committee of the council and the school board, to which it was referred a fortnight ago, that an intelligent representation of the matter might be made to the council.

If the meeting proves of a more exciting nature than was the one held a fortnight ago when the same subject was under discussion it will be what is generally alluded to as "warm".

There is gallery accommodation for about 1000 in the council chamber so it is reasonable to assume that there will be a rush for seats Monday evening.

The automobile owned by Thomas S. McGinley of Ocean Beach, was stolen this afternoon while Mr. McGinley was at the submarine base and although the car was recovered, it was wrecked when found a short distance from where it was taken. Mr. McGinley went to the base shortly after noon and paid a visit to an acquaintance, leaving his machine on the reservation. When he started to return home he discovered the machine missing. A search was made for the car and it was finally located a comparatively short distance from the base and out of commission, presumably having struck an object beside the highway.

It is believed that the car was taken by two or three sailors and that the driver of the car being unfamiliar with driving, caused the machine to be put out of commission through collision.

Cosmos Michael and Harry Karry, proprietors of the New London Candy Kitchen, 611 Bank street, reported to the police late this afternoon that their place of business had been entered and that a small sum of money had been stolen. Sergeant Charles Hammond, discovered that entrance to the place was gained by breaking the glass of a rear window, which permitted the window being unlocked. The place was thoroughly ransacked and it was apparent that the thief was in quest of money along. From a desk was taken all the plunder, $10, which had been left in the store when the place was closed Saturday night. An effort was made to open the safe by smashing the handle on the door, but in this the crook was not successful. The owners of the store declared that the break was perpetrated between 7 o'clock this morning and 4.30 o'clock this afternoon.

Charles H. French, 50, well known New York theatrical producer and a member of the producing firm of Stewart & French, died at Lawrence hospital late this afternoon following an operation for gastric ulcers and appendicitis. Mr. French was among the most widely known of the New York producers.

Mr. French came to New London Friday to witness the opening performances of his latest production, "The Show-Off", which played at the Lyceum theatre Friday and Saturday. After the performance Saturday night, Mr. French was taken seriously ill and was attended by a physician at his apartment at the Hotel Mohican. His condition was such that he was removed to the hospital, where this morning an operation became necessary in an effort to save the life of the patient. The operation was performed, but Mr. French gradually failed, dying at 5 o'clock.

Mr. French gained his latest prominence in the theatrical world recently by his production of the "Torch Bearers" and "Underwrite Your Husband," both of which productions were seen at the Lyceum a few months ago.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG
It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets
The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.
Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

Mrs. W. Pholen has returned home after visiting friends in Norwich.

Mrs. J. B. Hough is visiting relatives in Bozrah and Norwich.

The annual meeting of the Johnson Memorial hospital was held Jan. 21. The reports show a very active year. The number of patients treated was 568. The reports were the best in the history of the hospital.

The Parent-Teachers' association has engaged the Suwanee River quartette to give a concert at Warren Memorial hall. The lecture given by C. Oliver Moore of New York was much enjoyed by all.

Dr. Upson Clark of Boston spoke to the Current Events club last week at the Methodist church on the political situation in central and southern Europe.

Wild deer on Lond Island ate enough of a five-ton truck load of cauliflower, sunk to the hubs in the soft marshland, to spoil the sale of it.

THE OIL INQUIRY.

With the further disclosures in connection with the lease of the oil lands by the senate committee, it will be agreed that President Coolidge has taken the right attitude in insisting not only that all the facts should be brought to light but that there should be a careful inquiry to determine the possibility of criminal action.

There will be interest in seeing what former Secretary Fall has to say now that testimony has been introduced showing that he received huge loans from Messrs. Doheny and Sinclair. The fact that he has been a close friend of the oil magnate for a score and a half years isn't enough to divert suspicion. Had there been no advantage gained by the men who loaned such men before or since the loans it would be another question. The whole difficulty revolves about the fact that the loans and the leases in which the oil men were particularly interested came fairly close together, and at a time when there should have been avoided any semblance of loans or favors on the part of all concerned.

That a member of the president's cabinet must be expected to be above any such thing as is charged against the former secretary of the interior, he should not only studiously keep clear of any such entangling alliances but there's no small amount of moral responsibility resting upon those who are loaning large sums under such conditions.

Playing loose and fast with government property cannot be tolerated. Mr. Fall has denied what the others have admitted, but he will by given the opportunity for further explanation. Under the circumstances, however, President Coolidge does well in insisting upon careful inquiry into the criminal aspects of the entire affair. It is well for the country that such dealings have come to light. It is through the opening to the public of just such affairs that restraint is placed upon further resort to similar methods by others. President Coolidge means to hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may.

ENCOURAGING UNIFORMITY.

The gathering last week of the motor vehicle administrators of ten eastern states for their conference directs new attention to the importance of such gatherings, both from the standpoint of the public as well as the automobile owners and drivers.

These conferences are aimed at uniformity in automobile regulations. Anyone who has traveled through other states, or who has attempted to become acquainted with the auto laws of several commonwealths, knows full well what a confusion there is because of the conflict in the regulations in various states. What may be lawful in one is not permissible in another, and what is required in one or two states may get no attention in the third. Most states are being guided by the desire to bring about greater safety on the highways and to provide protection for all highway users. There are certain respects in which some states are more advanced than others and this uncertainty is bound to continue and become worse unless there is some such common understanding as can be brought about through conferences of the motor vehicle commissioners. There will be city regulations for the handling of traffic which cannot be upset, but as far as licenses, driving and accessory requirements are concerned it would be to the great benefit of all concerned if all states were uniform in their requirements.

The people of every state are entitled to protection against glaring headlights; to be able to distinguish registration numbers at night, to have qualified persons at the wheel and other similar protective measures, and they will under uniformity. When it comes to authorizing accessories of various types restrictions must of course be governed by safety. There can be no thought of encouraging a monopoly in any direction.

The benefits of uniformity cannot fail to be such that cooperation along such lines concerning a few points will soon result in insistence upon its extension to others.

NEGROES AND THE SOUTH.

What the effect of Negro migration on the south has been during the past year can be realized from the department of labor's figures showing that for the twelve months ending with last September there were over 478,000 who left 16 southern states, Georgia suffering heavily with 150,000, Florida with 90,000 and Mississippi with a decrease of over 62,000.

Appreciation of Negro labor has been the greatest in those southern states since the effects of the migration have been felt. It is in the absence of the help that the black man has been depended upon to give that realization is given to just how valuable he is to the south.

There are those who have gone back, but even though encouragement has been given to the return it has not brought them all back. It isn't in the industries of the south that the loss of the black man is felt. The migration has been a serious blow to southern agriculture. He has been depended upon to run the farms, to raise cotton and to provide the cheap labor. He has done it to the benefit of the south, despite the fact that he has been treated like a dog. He has been slow to migrate, but the advantages to be gained elsewhere and the conditions that exist in that part of the country to which he is best suited have started the tide. He has attempted to fill the demands for unskilled labor in northern states with varying success, but the fact that so many have left the south has been sufficient to make that part of the country do some serious thinking. Well may it wonder where it is going to get the labor to replace the migrated Negro, while the efforts that have been and are being made to get back those familiar with southern conditions can be appreciated.

Climatic conditions, as well as labor conditions, have influenced many to go back, but when they do go back they will not only insist upon better treatment but the southern states should hasten to hold that out as an inducement. Proper treatment and proper advantages in the south would quickly check any wholesale migration.

A COSTLY EXPERIMENT.

When bank after bank close their doors there must be something serious the matter. That is the inescapable view that must be taken in regard to the banking situation in South Dakota where a dozen banks have shut up since the first of the year. The situation affects a large number of people and it can be appreciated that there must be assistance from the outside. South Dakota has found that the situation has gotten away from it.

If one was to put his finger upon the cause of the trouble it could probably be done by pointing to the work of the nonpartisan league which has carried everything before it in that section, and the closing of banks one by one means been restricted to South Dakota. The rush to follow the guidance of that political organization has sent the people of that section tumbling over themselves to get into their present predicament.

But the fact that this is the cause does not mean that the people of that state, the banking institutions and those interested therein, must be allowed to stew in their own juice. They have had a most valuable experience, one that should be beneficial in the future, but the present predicament calls for the rescue squad quite as much as if it had developed from any other cause.

South Dakota has had ideas as to where its troubles were centered. It seems to have acted with an idea of overcoming them, but now after a considerable period it is brought face to face with the fact that it is on the wrong track. The present situation is of its own making and following the aid that the government or outside sources will render avoidance of past mistakes are to be expected.

MEMORIALIZING LENINE.

Most everyone can remember when the chief city in the northern part of Russia was named St. Petersburg, because of what had been done for Russia by Peter, the Great. When the soviets came into control of Russia they lost little time in changing the name over to Petrograd as being Russian. Now, following the death of the man who was responsible for frightful conditions and extensive changes in Russia, it has been renamed for Lenine and is to be known as Leningrad. How long it will continue to retain that name no one knows. Considering the manner in which that city has been wrecked the new name will have a different meaning for it than was intended by the soviet action. What Peter, the Great, did for Russia is sidetracked in the present Russia for the purpose of honoring the man who has for the past few years been guiding the affairs of that country.

Just at the present time those in charge of Russia's affairs, being in sympathy with the dead leader, are concerned with the memorializing of his name. Who is to be his successor, and is it to become a practice in Russia of changing the name of its former capital in honor of each soviet premier that passes on? Time will show, and time may bring Russia to a realization of the debt that that country still owes to Peter, the Great, regardless of the manner in which it seems to have been temporarily eclipsed by Lenine. One thing is evident, Leningrad is going to mean something different to the world than it does to the soviet government of Russia.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Have you organized your private corporation for the purpose of beating the income tax law?

The man on the corner says: Three cheers are to the man with a smile—iceman, plumber or blacksmith.

Because they are soft coal miners doesn't mean that they are not expected to strike a hard bargain.

It is most pathetic when the leader of the engineemen's strike in England "regrets" that it must continue.

President Obregon is getting much indirect assistance because of the methods employed by his opponents.

President Coolidge only grows the stronger when the political muddlers try to break down a sound plan for tax reduction.

Is the congressional committee going to keep that second $100,000 away from a possible winner or will it accept the new Bok offer?

Pretty tough on the oil companies to have the jump of two cents in the price of gasoline followed so quickly by a cold wave and less autoing.

What do you think of the argument that the quickest way to get away from the high taxes and the high cost of living is to increase them?

Those who figure the world is improving because there are no more yellow shoes, overlook the fact that they are simply laid aside to accentuate the yellow stockings.

The Pinchot coal bill has finally been presented in the United States senate, but thus far no more seems to have been made to deal with the coal difficulties for which Pennsylvania is largely responsible.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Badly stained knives may be made to look as good as new by rubbing on charcoal.

A little charcoal mixed with clear water and brown down a sink will purify it.

Boil the clothes line when it is new and it will not then twist as new rope always does.

Old nail holes may be filled with a mixture made of fine sawdust and glue. Fill the hole with it and leave till dry.

When ironing embroidery fold the blanket several times, lay the embroidery face downwards and iron on the back, pressing the surface evenly.

When making mustard, instead of using water, mix with a little milk and a pinch of salt. It keeps the mustard soft and makes it go further.

If you buy oranges in large quantities, wrap them in waxed paper, store in a cool place and they will keep indefinitely.

Steel imparts a disagreeable flavor to cooked fish, so never use a steel knife or fork in serving it.

Before cooking mutton remove the thin skin that comes next to the fat. This is what gives the strong disagreeable flavor to the meat.

Your meat will have a delicious flavor, if, before cooking it, you rub it with a mixture of one part mustard of three of salt. It is excellent for turkey, mutton and beef.

If you will have your drawer for kitchen cutlery partitioned it will help you to keep every piece in its proper place and to find what you want with no effort.

Heat a lemon thoroughly before squeezing; in this way the amount of juice obtained will be decidedly more than if the lemon had not been heated.

Turpe cleans porcelain baths, wash basins, china door knobs, etc. A few spots on a soft rag will do the cleaning and polishing job in next to no time.

When boiling a pudding in a cloth it is a good idea to put an old plate at the bottom of the saucepan to prevent the pudding sticking to the pan.

ODOR OF BURNT FAT

When the smell of fat prevades the house examine the outside and bottom of the frying pan and you will probably find that it is covered with burnt fat which smells when it is at all hot. Besides washing the pan inside and out with strong soda water, as soon as it has been used, it is necessary occasionally to boil it out in a larger vessel with strong soda water and soap. As soon as the burnt grease is removed the strong smell of frying will cease.

CARE OF SILVER

Try cleaning your plated ware in the following way: Wash well in strong, warm soapsuds and wipe dry with a soft cloth. Then mix as much ammonia and whiting as will be required into a thick paste with cold water. Spread this over the silver with a soft cloth and leave it for a short time to dry. When it has dried rub it off with a clean, soft duster and polish with a chamois leather.

Before putting away spare silver clean it thoroughly; wrap it up in dark-blue paper, with a few camphor balls in the parcel, and when the silver is unwrapped, even months afterward it will be found to be as bright as when placed away. Filigree ornaments should always be kept in dark-blue paper.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

If you haven't everything you want, be particularly glad of that—for then you will be trying daily to attain some object— and that is one of the many secrets of keeping young.

If you make up your eyebrows, remember that the very arched brow is not so new today as the one which is straight. There should be the merest downward curve at the outer edge.

Do not despise housework. There is an enormous amount of beauty exercise to be gotten out of housework, if it is intelligently and energetically done. Sweeping, for instance, is not only good for the arms, but for the shoulders as well. If you stand fairly straight while using the broom.

The half-moon-shaped area at the base of the visible portion of the nail is most distinct on the thumb, although usually well defined on the other fingers. There is some difference of opinion as to its formation, but it seems to be due to opacity or decreased transparency of the nail tissue at this place.

NEWEST CURTAINS AND COVERS

One of the newest and prettiest forms of fashioning coverlets, cushions, chair seats, dressing table covers, curtains and the like in use of the shirred band. This is a finish that adds very much to bed covers, scarfs, and draperies where one wants a simple edge rather than fringe, braid or other ornamentation, and yet where one wishes to have some softening lines on an otherwise severe material.

These shirred bands are exceptionally lovely when carried out in the changeable drapery silks so much used for bed covering and in the curtains that match them. They are easy to make, too, and when puffed out softly they make a welcome change from the ordinary full valance or shaped valance that we have been using for the past year or two.

In one attractive window the draperies are of changeable silk in apricot and periwinkle blue. The puffed band at the top is shirred both top and bottom and the line marked with a thick overstitch in gold embroidery silk. The narrower bands that catch the curtains back on either side are shirred and stitched in the same way, and the edge of the hanging curtains themselves are buttonholed in wide deep stitches with the gold embroidery silk. The bed in this pretty room has a cover of the changeable silk, with a shirred and puffed band the width of the mattress all around the sides. Below this brand is a full valance reaching the floor. The pillow strip is edged all around with a three-inch shirred and puffed band of the silk.

These shirred bandings can be worked out in other materials and colors, of course. A breakfast room seen recently had shirred bands of plain yellow chambray over curtains of yellow and white checked gingham. A child's room could have curtains of figured chints, showing sunbonnet babies, cows, chickens, and so on, with shirred bands of plain blue or any color predominating in the chins. The attractive scheme is adaptable to almost any room or any material.

HASSOCKS IN USE

A fashionable bed must have its own hassock, so a small, plain stool, is covered with a strip of tapestry or of the poplin to match the spread, applied with a thin line of the best-quality liquid glue, and a narrow ruffle of dull-gold metallic ribbon is likewise applied as a border.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Magenta colored embroidery in heavy silk covers a cape of gold metal cloth, lined with orchid chiffon.

A gown of white taffeta, quite untrimmed, is set off splendidly by a shawl which consists of a huge square of white crepe, very heavy and silky, embroidered in vivid embroidery.

Large flowers of black velvet are appliqued to a white crepe overblouse which makes it an ideal companion for a black velvet skirt.

Brilliantly lined capes that reach just to the waistline or slightly below are featured on many French frocks.

An interesting new style feature is the cape which appears on one side but not on the other of the frock or coat.

Irish lace and embroidered batists are carefully put together to form tops for chemises and step-ins. Others are made with filet lace or cluny.

One of the most becoming bandeaux of the season is made of narrow silver metal ribbon in chain links. A second chain crosses in the front, giving a coronet effect.

Two huge pear-shaped ornaments of jet, hung on long chains of brilliants, are attached—one on each side—to the latest black velvet hat. The hat is cloche in shape, and would be dumpy except for these striking additions.

The one-sleeve gown of a couple of seasons ago was the forerunner of the one-shoulder gown here now. There is a regular, though sleeveless, shoulder of the goods on this evening frock, but the other shoulder ends well below the armpit and dwindles upward to a mere chain of jewels.

It seems as though all the leopards might soon be extinct now that leopard fur is so fashionable. In addition to long and short coats of leopard skin, there is every sort of cloth and velvet wrap lined or flounced with it.

A very jaunty little muff—a muff very small indeed—is carried into the drawing room by some of the debutantes these afternoons. The muff matches the fur with which the afternoon costume is trimmed.

BANDEAU EARRINGS

Bandeau earings, so long and heavy that they are attached to the coiffure bandeau instead of the ear, are proving fashionable today. Some of the loveliest crystal and pearl head dresses seen recently at such places as the Savoy and Claridge's have been equipped with these elaborate decorations.

THE NEW COIFFURE

Of all the various coiffures being tried out today one of the simplest is a style in which the hair is drawn gently back from the forehead, puffed out over the cheeks and fastened in a loose knot at the crown.

COMB OF AMBER

Among the latest novel coiffure ornaments is one of distinctly Japanese origin. It is a wide, straight comb of amber carved to represent flowers and leaves and it is worn straight across the top of the head.

LAUNDRY POINTS

If you starch your handkerchiefs very stiff before marking them with the indelible ink, the ink will not run and you can make smaller and neater letters.

Clothes that are yellow from lying around should be dipped in boiling water and dashed with oxalic acid putting two tablespoons of the acid to a gallon of water. Then wring them out, dry in the sunshine, and wash as usual.

Have a laundry cabinet in your laundry and in it keep your starch, soap, blueing, javelle water for stains, soap powder, washing soda and sandpaper.

Scorch marks such as occur during ironing will yield to a vigorous rubbing with a clean cloth and cold water.

Ammonia may be put into water in which flannels are washed, but soda must never be used for these. All flannels, including stockings, should be rinsed well in warm water. This is very important, so do not hesitate to change the water two or three times, if necessary.

MENDING STOCKINGS

It sometimes happens that a pair of stockings will suddenly show a yawning hole, or a heel will have been mended until it become uncomfortable to wear. If the rest of the stocking is good, a very neat and comfortable job can be made by "patching" in place of depending wholly upon darning cotton. Patching is often so clumsily done that the method has fallen into disrepute. But for a good-sized hole this method will be found excellent.

Take a piece of good stocking material salvaged from the unworn part of another pair of stockings. In fact, it is a good plan to have a box or small basket of stocking legs which can be used for repairs.

This is the method of procedure. Turn the stocking wrong side out, and put a darning ball into it. Now cut a patch which will cover the worn place. Do not make the mistake of cutting the stocking itself, even if there is a clumsy darn there, for the cut edges will stretch. Take cotton and fasten the patch where it ought to be. This is the way to do it:

First put in a pin or two to hold it in place. Then overcast the patch all around the edge. Do not turn the edge under. This will fasten the attached piece firmly in place, and there will be no uncomfortable ridge. This will only take a few minutes. The next step is to turn the stocking right side out. The clumsy darn can now be cut away, or if there is a hole it can be mended quickly. The way to do this is to darn the edge of the stocking down flat to the patch. Sometimes it is advisable to run the darning thread right through the patch, using it as filling. The repair is quickly made, lasts as long as new, and is neat on both the right and the wrong side. Where the repair is made in silk stockings cutting should be avoided, as this causes the stitches to run.

FOR LACQUERED BRASS

Do not clean lacquered ornaments or fire irons with ordinary brass polish. Dust the article to be cleaned, take a piece of soft rag, dip it into some sweet oil poured into a saucer and rub the lacquered part all over with the oil, then rub it off with a dry, soft cloth, beginning at the place where the oil was first put on. Rub until the oil is quite dry, then polish with a dry chamois leather.

RECIPES

Lemon Pie. Sift together one and one-fourth cups of sugar, three tablespoons of flour and a few grains of salt; add two cups of boiling water smooth and well blended. Cook over hot water (in a double boiler) until mixture thickens. Remove from fire; add one tablespoon of butter the yolks of four eggs slightly beaten, one-half cup of lemon juice and the grated rind of two medium-sized lemons. Line a pie plate measuring ten inches in diameter and two inches deep (including the rim of the plate) with rich pastry; brush over with the white of egg slightly beaten, turn in the mixture, which has been slightly cooled, and bake until pastry is well browned. Remove from the oven and spread with a meringue; return to the oven to cook and brown the meringue.

Meringue. Chill the whites of four eggs thoroughly, then put them into a cold bowl and beat them with a rotary eggbeater until the mass is stiff enough to hold its shape, gradually add two tablespoons of lemon juice, a very little at a time, and continue beating while adding three-fourths cup of sifted confectioner's sugar. It will require about one-half hour to beat the mixture stiff enough to hold its shape when piled roughly over the top of the pie. Sprinkle the meringue lightly with granulated sugar and bake fifteen minutes in a moderate oven. The meringue should cook without browning the first ten minutes of cooking, then brown delicately the last five minutes. The recipe makes a large pie; it may be divided equally, making a pie half the size. Cool and serve.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS

Heavy penalties are provided by the revenue act for failure or "willful refusal" to make a required income tax return and pay the tax on time—on or before March 15, if the return is filed on a calender year basis. If the taxpayer makes his return on the fiscal year basis it should be filed on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year.

For failure to file a return on time a taxpayer becomes liable to a penalty of $1,000 and a further penalty of 25 per cent of the amount of the tax, unless the return is later filed and it is satisfactorily shown to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that the delinquency was due to a reasonable cause, and not to wilful neglect. For willful refusal to make a return and pay the tax on time a taxpayer becomes liable to a penalty of $10,000, or one year's imprisonment, or both, together with the cost of prosecution, and a penalty of 25 per cent of the amount of the tax.

When a return is made in good faith and an understatement of the amount of the tax thereon is due to no fault of the taxpayer, no penalty attaches, but interest attaches to the amount of the deficiency at the rate of 6 per cent a year. If the understatement is due to negligence—"ignorance of reasonable care under the circumstances"—there is to be added 5 per cent of the total amount of the deficiency, together with interest on the amount of the deficiency at the rate of 12 per cent a year from the time the tax was due, or if paid on the installment basis, on the deficiency of the installment from the time the installment was due. If the understatement is fraudelent with intent to evade the tax, the penalty is a fine of not more than $10,000, and imprisonment for not more than one year, together with the cost of prosecution, and an added assessment of 50 per cent of the amount of the deficiency.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Gerhart Hauptmann, who has accepted an invitation to visit Russia and lecture on modern literature, is a famous German poet and playwright, best known for his play, The Weavers. In 1912 he was awarded the Nobel prize for literature. As long ago as 1893, when he was only thirty-five years old, Hauptmann was held to be one of the foremost figures in German literature. Devoting himself at first exclusively to poetry and the drama, he later took up the writing of romance, and by his success paralleled the case of Sir Walter Scott. His first play, written in 1889, disclosed a profound knowledge of psychology, physiology and pathology that is not often met with. Since then he has brought out a work nearly every year. Thus far, however, there have been few adequate translations in English. Hauptmann makes his home in Berlin.

CHILD TRAINING

Regularity In Home Living For Children

By Helen Gregg Greene

"I can't understand why Throck is doing so poorly at school," complained Throck's mother to Miss McHenry, his teacher, who was calling at the child's home.

"Mrs. Carlton, I think I know the reason," Miss McHenry answered, "and I thought you'd want to know about my discovery, so I came over."

"Indeed, I do, my dear," and the mother was all interest. "His chum, Bernard across the way, is doing such splendid work.

"Today I asked the children to write a short theme on their day's schedule. Most of them admitted a sort of haphazard existence, minus any regular routine. But one child, a little girl by the name of Nana, who does good work, wrote such a sensible little theme I thought it might help other mothers. So I brought it to show you, Mrs. Carlton," and the teacher handed her Nana's composition.

Throck's mother read:

"My mother has a sort of time schedule for my brother and me. We have to get up every morning, including Saturday, at seven o'clock. Mims calls once, only! We have the use of the bathroom from seven-to seven-forty five. After that Father has it. Then we eat what Mims calls a simple, nourishing breakfast. Usually it is either hot oatmeal and milk; fruit, toast, and milk; cold egg,toast, and milk; or bread and butter and warm milk. We have plenty of time every morning to eat our breakfast, so Bud and I have never learned the 'art of gobbling,' as father calls it. We never have to run to school, as we always start in plenty of time. When we come home in the evenings we change from our school clothes to our play clothes; then we have our 'relaxation period.'

"We have certain places for our wraps, school clothes, and school books. We have our study room which is very quiet.

"We have certain duties at home to help Mims.

"Bud and I both like our schedule very much!"

"Why Miss McHenry, this was written by Bernard's sister, Nana," Throck's mother laughed. Now I see why Bernard and Nana are doing such good work and Throck isn't. I must confess we're never lived in the right healthful way."

"The schedule is a splendid one, isn't it!" answered Miss McHenry.

"Indeed it is! And from now on Throck will have a schedule and I shall give Bernard's mother a good scolding for not telling me of her plan." Throck's mother smiled.

Meeting Miss McHenry a few months later, the mother inquired about her son's work.

"Very good indeed," she answered. "It is a close race between Throck and Nana now. And Bernard who is a few years older is in the 'contest,' as the children call it, and they're all receiving excellent grades. Oh, there's nothing like regularity in the home life to help the child in his school work."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Autos and Dogs

Mr. Editor: Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to ask a few questions about the auto law governing animals that roam at large. It would seem Connecticut is the only state having such a law. While driving through New York state I killed a valuable dog but nothing was done about it. If that fine was just, when any one has paid state for the privilege of driving his auto on its highways, the law and penalty should be posted in some conspicuous place so "he who runs may read".

Why not make a law compelling owners of valuable animals to keep them in their own confines? I have never known any one to drive his auto into private property for the sake of taking a life. Yours for justice to the auto driver.

A Little Talk on Thrift

Human Harmony

Not all waste is the result of inefficient habits or methods. Thriftlessness does not consist entirely of being merely slip-shod. The greatest of all losses spring from discordant mental attitudes.

More and more we should realize the stabilising and upbuilding value of human harmony.

It is lack of human harmony that is creating chaos in Europe today. It was lack of human harmony that brought the civilized world into that cataclysm which ended five years ago.

Lack of human harmony has caused the death of nations, the bankruptcy of business institutions, the ruin of personal fortunes, and the failure of individuals ovr and over again since the world began.

But what produces human harmony? Is it enforcing one's own will opinion, desire or selfish purpose on others without respect to their rights and feelings? Or is it meeting the situation with broad vision, liberal heart and clear thinking?

We have but to study our own lives and our own experiences to find the answer to this great truth.

Discord, jealousy and destructive motives, if they have ever found a place in our lives have invariably reacted to our detriment. On the other hand, when we have approached our problems and difficulties with just and generous consideration of others, we have found that we gained strength, support and a helping hand from others.

Always is this true! Always is it the great secret of advancement, no matter in what realm of activity we find ourselves.

Help ourselves by helping others! The heights are ever gained over the stepping stones of other mens failures.

Follow ever the pathway that is indicated by your best instincts.

It is the part of true thrift to develop harmony in our lives because only in this way are we able to reach the utmost possibilities of self-advancement and usefulness to others.—American Society for Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

Local Color

In a neighboring place the minister of a church and the pastor of a colored congregation bear the same name. The initials are likewise similar and this situation gives rise to many amusing complications.

Recently the colored minister awaited the mail carrier and handed him a letter which had been left at the door before. "You gave me the wrong letter," the carrier was informed. "This belongs to my competitor."

New Cough and Cold Remedy

In Lozenge Form—Acts Quickly—Folks Everywhere Using Them.

Old folks, middle aged people and children are now using a wonderful new form of Cough and Cold Remedy in pleasant lozenge form. The quick effects produced are said to be due, not only to the rare potency of the ingredients, but to the fact that the lozenges dissolve slowly in the mouth, thus carrying constantly soothing, healing medicament to the inflamed membranes of the throat and congested parts.

The very first lozenge loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon the phlegm will thin out. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold. This remarkable new form of cough and cold remedy is sold by most druggists under the name of Heneph's Honey and Tar Cough Lozenges. For sale at Lee & Osgood Co.

HEAVY FINE AT ELLINGTON FOR GEORGE WOHLLEBE

George Wohllebe, of Ellington was given a hearing Saturday morning by Justice of the Peace H. L. Hamilton on charges of reckless driving and of evading responsibility after an accident. Seven witnesses appeared for the state, including three state police officers. Justice Hamilton found the prisoner guilty of evading responsibility, but the first charge was dropped, there being no evidence that he was guilty of reckless driving. The maximum penalty allowed by a justice court, $100 fine and ten days in jail was imposed. Wohllebe took an appeal to the superior court in Rockville and was released on bond of $500 furnished by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Sarah Wohllebe.

The case was the outcome of an accident Monday evening, January 14, when Tony Shtorka while walking in the road, in the center of the town, was run down by an automobile. Both legs were broken and he was otherwise seriously injured. He is now a patient at St. Francis Hospital. The state police while investigating the case held Wohllebe on technical charges of operating a motor vehicle without an engine number and without proper headlights. A preliminary hearing was given and he was bound over on bond of $1,000 to January 10.

Friday he was arrested by State Policeman Hurlburt for reckless driving and for evading responsibility. He was taken to Stafford Springs and questioned. At the hearing Saturday on request of his lawyer the hearing on the first two charges was again put over, from January 30 until February 6.

Breaking Glass Scared Burglar

What looked like an attempted burglary at the store of the O'Neill Electric Co., 13 Franklin street, was discovered Saturday morning when the glass out of the rear door was found broken on the floor of the store. The frame around the glass had been removed, but the glass had fallen in and broken on the floor. The crash had apparently scared the burglars away and nothing had been taken from the store.

It is understood that a tenant in the upper part of the building heard a noise about 1.30 Saturday morning at the rear of the building, which it is believed was about the time the would-be burglars were at work.

Four Sea Sleds Shipped

The past week the Mystic Sea Sled Company shipped four of its small type of boats from its plant. The construction of the hull is an inverted V which tends to lift the craft out of the water, thus making it a faster boat than the ordinary type. This is one of the characteristics of the sea sleds. They fairly slide through the water instead of settling down when in action.

RAYMOND ROZANSKI IN HOSPITAL AFTER SHOOTING AT LISBON CLUB

Raymond Rozanski of 760 Boswell avenue was shot in some way that the police have not yet determined at the Lisbon Shooting club, Saturday night, and is in the Backus hospital with injuries that will probably prove fatal, according to medical authorities.

The bullet was extracted Sunday night after the man had been taken to the hospital by Dr. W. T. Driscoll, who was called to the Rozanski home by a brother of the injured man, who told the doctor that Raymond had a stomach ache from too much drink. As soon as the doctor arrived at the house he was shown a spot of blood on the man's back, which he at once recognized as coming from a bullet wound and an examination of the man's shirt and coat that had been taken off disclosed the path of the bullet. Up to then the family apparently had not known that Rozanski had been shot.

Dr. Driscoll at once rushed Rozanski to the hospital in his automobile and the operation to remove the bullet and sew up a punctured intestine was performed immediately. Rozanski had lost much blood and his condition is critical. The bullet was removed from the abdominal wall.

As soon as Dr. Driscoll reached the hospital he telephoned to police headquarters and Sergeant Thomas Murphy started to unravel the mystery of how Rozanski came to be shot. From information he secured William Dwoyokowski, 24, of this city was taken into custody and was held in connection with the case while three more young men were brought in and questioned.

According to one story that was related there was a dance for members at the Shooting club Saturday night, and a group of five or six young men, some from Jewett City, arrived there and two of them got into an argument. While the two were scuffling with each other a shot was heard and later on Rozanski was found apparently doubled up with pain in one of the small rooms of the building.

TURKEY SUPPER ENJOYED BY FITCHVILLE FIREMEN

On Saturday evening a turkey supper and smoker was held by the Palmer S. F. E. Co. of Fitchville, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number of members and guests present. At 7.30 p. m., the company, to the number of over 100, assembled in the rooms of the engine company and after a few well chosen words of welcome by the foreman of the company, Jeremiah E. Sweeney, the meeting was turned over to Edward J. Connelly, who acted as toastmaster for the rest of the evening. After the singing of one verse of America, the divine blessing was invoked by Rev. J. F. Speerli, pastor of the Fitchville Baptist church.

The supper, consisting of grapefruit, soup, roast native turkey and pie, ice cream and coffee, was furnished by the Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church, assisted by the young ladies of the village as waitresses.

At the conclusion of the supper the toastmaster called on Judge John H. Barnes for some remarks. The judge responded in his usual splendid manner and spoke on the theme of Friendship, not only for all mankind in general, but argued for friendship between the nations of the world, saying that if the nations would only practice friendship between each other then wars would cease and more would be accomplished than by the league of nations.

The company then adjourned to the hall above where Mr. Connelly was heard in several songs and monologues after which three boxing matches were staged. The first of four rounds was between Young McCarthy and Young Juino, the next between Fred Bundy and Kid Devine, and the last between Irish Billy Glenn and Frankie Rush. The last two bouts were of six rounds each, but no decisions were given in either bout.

Following the sleight-of-hand and juggling act of Harry Stewart, the entertainment came to a successful close.

The committee in charge of the supper and smoker consisted John Beswick, William Kane, John Gribben, Charles Rogers and Timothy Coughlin, to whom much credit is due for the able and efficient manner in which the affair was handled.

AUTOMOBILE IS LOSS BY FIRE ON ROAD

A Cadillac touring car of 1919 make burned to the chassis Friday evening in front of the Hempstead place, Quaker Hill. It bears the registration N-2577, listed at the department of motor vehicles, Bank street, as that of Joseph Loomis, Norwich.

The owner of the machine, accompanied by another young man, was reported to have been driving from Norwich to New London, to go to the theatre. At Quaker Hill flames suddenly burst out from the hood and as they brought the machine to a stop it was enveloped in flames.

Pails of water were poured into the machine from 8 o'clock until well after 9. When the fire was out all that was left in fit condition was the engine and, possibly, the tires. So intense was the heat from the burning machine that the windshield melted. The young men proceeded to New London to attend the show in spite of their loss.

BETH SULLY EVANS LEAVES SECOND HUSBAND

Mrs. Beth Sully Evans, daughter of Daniel F. Sully, the "cotton king," a former summer resident of Watch Hill, the former Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, admitted at Los Angeles at the week end that she has been separated from her second husband, James Evans, Jr., for five months and that the separation would undoubtedly be permanent. No suggestion of a divorce action has developed so far, but the break between Mrs. Evans and her husband is known to be final.

Matrimony in this case went into a smash because of the ever imminent conflict between art and business. A legal separation eventually will be asked, it is said, on the ground of incompatibility.

Douglas Fairbanks and Miss Beth Sully were married at Watch Hill about 16 years ago.

Paid for Dog's Treatment

Hadlai Potter of Montville who was fined last week in police court for evading responsibility in not stopping after hitting and injuring a dog, states that he did not stop because he did not realize the dog was seriously injured. He came back afterwards and took the dog to a veterinary hospital and paid for its treatment which he says the owner would not do.

Had he known that the dog was badly hurst, he would certainly have stopped, he says as he has never been known to be cruel to animals.

CHURCH CONTROVERSY IS THING OF THE MOMENT

This controversy is a thing of the moment, said Rev. Samuel H. Howe, D. D., pastor of Park Congregational church, in a sermon on The Fundamentalist-Modernist Controversy, which he delivered at the Sunday evening service at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church. I am sorry that such a question arose, he said. It is not essential. What is the important thing for us to believe? That Christ came and is the Saviour of the world. The service was led by Rev. J. Harlow Graham, pastor of the church. The scripture lesson was read by Rev. Mr. Graham and he offered prayer. Rev. Dr. Howe said he would not give a formal sermon but would give something of an informal talk touching on the Bible and the controversy.

All of us have theories about the Bible, said Rev. Dr. Howe. I am a great reader of the Bible. I read it through every year and I have done this for 25 years or more. Those who do not read the Bible systematically have a great deal of trouble with it. They don't know what it is about. The Bible is the literature of a nation. Some people say, I read the Bible as I find it. You have history in the Bible. The greatest poetry in the world is in the Bible. It reads like prose but it is poetry. Poetry is the highest type of thought.

Many people read the Bible straight through as if it were prose. You find in the Bible great varieties of literature in which the Truth is told. You don't want to go to the Bible to find science. There is no science in the Bible. You come to what looks like science but you find it is poetry. Why didn't God reveal all the scientific facts we need to know? Because He would have impoverished the human mind and taken man's task from him. Man's business is to gather facts and write history. It was not God's intention to take this task from man.

Rev. Dr. Howe said that the people in Bible times interpreted things differently than we do because they had no conception of science. Think of the hordes of worlds whirling over our heads and think that God is responsible for them, the preacher said. In the Bible age the people had no conception of what the stars are. To them heaven was just above the hills, just beyond the horizon.

You can't find out how God created the universe from nothing. He doesn't tell us. How is man created? The preacher spoke of two theories: development from the lower forms of life, and the second theory, that man was created on the spot out of nothing. There is no use quarreling about the process, he said. Man is here. That is the important thing. With reference to the controversy over the Virgin Birth Dr. Howe said: What is the important thing for us to believe? That Christ is here. That Christ came and is the Saviour of the world. I am sorry that such a question arose. It is a delicate subject. It is not essential. It ought to take the question out of controversy when we think where the trouble is—the process. This controversy is a thing of the moment.

A great many questions are not answered in the Bible. It is not intended that we should know. I have often been asked curious questions about the Bible. I answer by saying that I will attempt to explain what the Bible explains, but I won't attempt to explain what the Bible does not explain.

There isn't a spiritual thing you will ever get unless you strive for it, seek it. You can have everything from God if you ask Him for it. Go to Him. You will get nothing from God unless you ask.

With reference to immortality Rev. Dr. Howe said: What is our hope for the future? Sometimes we say the Bible doesn't tell us much about the future. Why doesn't it? Because you are but children in the nursery. What parent can explain to the child in the nursery about life? If God should tell us all about the future we would not understand. That is why there is a certain mystery about it. There are questions unanswered and there are questions that ought not be asked. Better leave them with God.
